Ornelas new Affirmative Action head

by Beth Thomas

Miguel Ornelas has been offered the position of new Affirmative Action director by University President Paul Olscamp. Ornelas currently teaches ethnic studies at Ohio University's campus and last year received his Doctorate of Education in Sociology from the University of Nebraska's campus. He is also the Chief Executive Officer of the Ohio Hispanic Institute for Opportunity in Toledo since 1988. OHIO is a non-profit organization that serves Ohio's Hispanic population and low-income students for the University's Affirmative Action Office.

According to Olscamp, Ornelas has verbally accepted the position and will confirm the acceptance in writing within the next week. Olscamp said he could deliver his written response to Olscamp's office yesterday afternoon and that he would call him today to confirm details. Ornelas has been the chief investigative officer of the California Institute of Opportunity in Toledo since 1989. OHIO is a non-profit organization that serves Ohio's Hispanic population and low-income students.

THE SALARY for teaching summer school is based on the rate for the preceding academic year. This year, tuition and fees for summer school is $199.90 for in-state residents and $221.50 for non-residents.

According to an ordinance of the university, the board must pass an action headlining the issue of whether to raise undergraduate tuition and fees.

On Monday, an extensive search to find a permanent replacement for the ethnic studies director was not a recent one. The search was for having a new running mate. Originally, the deadline for submitting petitions was Friday, April 30. However, the deadline was extended after weighing the evidence and opinion board.

Anita's, Helmick's running mate, out about Anita's withdrawal, said when she found out about Anita's withdrawal, she was unable to contact Helmick. I called him again at 1 p.m. and said he would be my running mate," Helmick said. Support your local contra

By Susan F. Frost

Developing new, creative programs, Amnesty International staff is to be congratulated. While it is important to encourage anti-war efforts, it is not enough. We must also join with others to help the victims of war and political oppression.

If the contra's had more resources, they might be more successful in getting people to support them. They are not getting the support they need because there is so much competition for attention. The contra's are facing competition from all sides, not just from the Sandinistas in Nicaragua. But the contra's are fighting for a just cause and they deserve our support.

Offenahefer thanks staff

On behalf of the Offenhaefer Towers staff, I wish to thank the students who have made the program a success. Our goal was to provide a forum for students to express their views and to foster open dialogue.

We appreciate the hard work of the entire staff, from the editors to the reporters. Without their dedication and commitment, the program would not have been possible.

But there is still work to be done. The program must continue to evolve and grow. We must continue to provide a platform for students to share their ideas and perspectives.

And the future looks bright. The program has established itself as a valuable resource for the community. But we must not become complacent. We must continue to strive for excellence and to provide the best possible service to our readers.

Thank you, once again, for your support and for your involvement in the program.

Off-campus party planned

by Jeff Hohler

The chances for a springfest in Bowling Green this year are getting better. It was announced yesterday that plans for an off-campus springfest are being studied and that University support of the event is one of the last stumbling blocks to be overcome for the organization.

"I'm working with Portage Quarry operator Jeff Rice trying to work out details of a springfest-type event to be held April 25 or 26 at the quarry," said Kelly McCoy, junior political science major. McCoy, who is also Undergraduate Student Government president, although USG isn't involved with the event, said it would be similar to past springfests and would provide a good opportunity to get off-campus support and curb some of the problems that were associated with the canceled event that was canceled this year.

"We've already begun the process by getting volunteer support from the Greek community to set up a designated driver program. We would like to have a designated driver set for each hour," McCoy said. "We're also trying to get the Student Government and the Off-campus Housing to set up a designated driver program. We want to make sure that anyone wanting to attend the event has a ride," Rice said. "We also want to make sure that everyone wanting to attend the event has a ride," Rice said. "We are working on having buses leave from the Union to transport students."

 Drivers en i 7 5 will be greeted with eight-foot tall letters announcing Bowling Green State University when a sign, authorized by the Board of Trustees at its Friday meeting, is painted on the east side of the stadium.

"The sign will be the highest visible from U.S. 25 and will cost about $12,000, according to Jack Gregory, athletic director. More than half the cost of the sign will be footed by a senior challenge fund set up by Ron Jacomini, head design professor of the School of Art, he said. The rest of the funding will be handled by the president's office, he added. The sign will be painted on concrete at the top of the stadium. It will face the road along the back of the stadium and will cover 160 feet of space, he said.

"The sign's letters will be in the school colors, brown with orange trim, and will be painted in a white background with the designing done by Ron Jacomini, head design professor of the School of Art," he said. Work on the sign is expected to begin next month, and should be finished sometime this summer.

Teetering for diabetes

Students are hanging on tilting to raise money. "We can't afford to lose," said Jackie Morris, president of Sigma Pi Phi.

"If all the pho- tographs in the Temple Union were donated today," said Jackie Morris, "we'd have enough money to buy a new bus for the club." She was referring to the Sigma Pi Phi and their "Teeter-Totter-a-Thon," which is being held in the Temple Union. The event, which is raising funds for diabetes, started yesterday at 10:30 a.m. and will continue until 5:30 p.m. Wednesday.

"If Chris would have contacted the board of elections instead of Don, as stated in the election regulations regarding questions about the elections, he would have remained on the ballot," she said. Helmick felt better should have told him to call Helmick right away.

"I think it's ridiculous for kalling to the wrong person, I spoke to the advisor," she said.

After reviewing this evidence, McCoy said the decision was a very difficult one to make. "It is unfortunate that Mr. Helmick's running mate decided to remove herself from the ticket, yet adequate time existed for a new position to be submitted," he said.

Regardless, Helmick felt Miller should have told him to call Helmick right away. "We are definitely going as written. What the hell, we'll give it a try. Besides, I've already spent the money on posters," he said.

R.E. MANAGEMENT

by Pamela Monatia

While one English professor believes that the University's Creative Writing Program is the best in the nation, he said insufficient funding is harming the program.

"Lack of funding for non-teaching fellowships has caused us to lose top candidates for our program," said Philip O'Connor, head of the program. He said he tried to break the program's membership with the English department about two years ago in order to receive increased funding.

The graduate assistantships are all being given to the new program, he said.

O'Connor was frustrated, not only for himself, but for the talented writers at the University, he said.

Wymer said that these assistantships were promised to the . new program a year ago. O'Connor said he has put a tremendous amount of time and effort into the University's Creative Writing program, and he said he has been shown little appreciation from the University.

O'Connor believes many people do not know about the Creative Writing program's national reputation and the critical success of the University's graduate program. He said that the program is one of the top three or four Creative Writing programs in the United States.

"BGSG has one of the major Creative Writing programs in America, and if it is not the most productive and illustrious, it is one of the top three or four Creative Writing programs in the United States."

— Philip O'Connor

He said, however, that students have put considerable effort into the University's Creative Writing program and have written many prize-winning novels, and they are now working with major publishers, including Harper & Row.

"BGSG has one of the major Creative Writing programs in America, and if it is not the most productive and illustrious, it is one of the top three or four Creative Writing programs in the United States," he said.

ACCORDING TO O'Connor, a number of the Pulitzer Prize winners have been students or graduates of the University's Creative Writing program. He also said that no faculty members, and five or six graduate students, have also won fellowships. He had wanted to make the University's Creative Writing program the first workshop in the nation to win the number one short story writing award.

He also said that the University has started a new program, except for members of the Creative Writing program's national faculty, has approved a curriculum for the University's graduate students. For example, at a recent meeting of the University's Creative Writing program, several students and other creative writing students from other Creative Writing programs in the United States were invited to participate.

O'Connor said he believes the accommodations made by the students and other creative writing students from other Creative Writing programs in the United States are all being given to the new program.

"The criteria to apply for the Creative Writing program will be in place by fall of 1988 or spring of 1989. However, the decision will be based on the quality of the written material," Wymer said.

Rep. Traficant may run in Ohio presidential primary

Jame Traficant, D-Ohio, said yesterday he will run for the Democratic presidential nomination. Traficant, who has represented Youngstown since 1984, and many people have long expected him to run.

"I certainly don't consider myself to be a heavyweight down in Washington," Traficant said. "But on the other hand I would be happy to pick a point of winning delegates to the convention to put some pressure on the establishment." Traficant, who said he's been in talks with a number of other candidates, is the most far-left Democrat in the House. He has been in talks with the so-called third party movement, which hopes to field a candidate in November. Traficant said he would receive a determination on whether he would run in the primary by the end of this week.

The meeting was held after a Passover dinner at Shultz's U.S. Embassy with Afghan President Haji Najibullah and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. Shultz attended the dinner, which resulted in a final agreement to hold a summit under the Egyptian, French, and American auspices in the next few weeks.
