Waldheim says U.S. decision proves no guilt

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — President Kurt Waldheim said yesterday he did nothing wrong as a German army officer during World War II and the U.S. decision to bar him on grounds of involvement in Nazi atrocities is "incomprehensible."

"I have a clear conscience. . . . You can trust me," Waldheim told the nation in a five-minute speech on radio and television.

On Monday, the United States put the former U.N. secretary-general on its Watchlist of undesirable aliens barred from entering the United States, citing evidence that he aided in the deportation and execution of thousands of Jews and others.

Investigators found evidence that Waldheim "participated in persecutions for reasons of race or religion under the Nazi regime," Attorney General Edwin Meese III said yesterday in Brussels.

A U.S. official at the United Nations in New York said that, if Waldheim sought to attend a U.N. session, "a policy decision would have to be made on whether to admit him."

WALDHEIM, WHO is 68 and was elected to the largely ceremonial presidency last June, thanked Austrians for an "impressive wave" of support expressed earlier yesterday in a government statement rejecting the U.S. charges.

He said he has asked researchers to prepare a "White Book" about his activities during the World War II and "this documentation will be made available to the public shortly," he said.

Charges about his World War II activities have plagued Waldheim since early last year, and he has consistently denied them. Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal told The Associated Press earlier yesterday that Waldheim should allow an investigation by an independent group of military historians, who could make a report in four or five weeks.

In yesterday's speech, Waldheim made no direct reference to accusations that he was linked to World War II atrocities in Greece and Yugoslavia. He did not mention the Nazi Holocaust or Austria's role in the war. Germany annexed Austria in 1938, and some Austrians served in the German army in World War II.

"ONCE AGAIN, as in the last 12 months, there is talk of supposedly new papers," Waldheim said. "Let me emphasize that there can be no proofs of guilty conduct."

"Let me say in all simplicity, but also with clarity that cannot be misunderstood: I have a clear conscience," he said.

"I do not want to belittle what those people had to go through who were thrown then into the terrible happenings of war. It was the fate of my generation, and we will carry it with us all our lives: that is, the knowledge of the horror of war and the will to work for more peace."

"I was on the side of those who worked for peace," he added, noting his 10 years as an Austrian diplomat and the decade he spent as U.N. secretary-general beginning in 1972.

In a government statement read to a packed news conference earlier, Chancellor Franz Vranitzky said Austria could not understand how the U.S. Justice Department reached its decision.

Vranitzky said it was too early to say whether he would make a planned trip to the United States next month.

Foreign Minister Alois Mock told the reporters the U.S. action "has hit us hard" and "has a burdensome effect" on relations with Washington.

Leaders elected in GSS

Larry Jones, a public administration research assistant, was voted the 1987-88 Graduate Student Senate president at the last GSS meeting.

During the past year, Jones has served as GSS representative-at-large and has served on various committees such as GSS Executive Committee, GSS Representative on the Faculty Senate Budget Committee, GSS Representative-University Committee on Academic Affairs and GSS Representative-University Committee on Student Retention.

Ann Reeve, a graduate student in the Masters in Business Administration, was elected as treasurer.

Reeve has been involved with student government at the University for four years, serving as the USG representative to the University Broadcast Committee for two years and to the Student Publications Committee for one year. Reeve was this year's representative for the Graduate Student Senate in the area of Graduate Studies in Business Administration.

Jones told the senate on Friday that some of his goals as the new GSS president include a separate recognition ceremony for graduating graduate students, campus housing for graduates, a possible mid-semester break and an atmosphere at the University where people are more tolerant of those who are different.

Next year Jones will either ask for volunteers or appoint people to the positions left vacant.

Farmers diversify to survive

Editor's Note: this is the second in a three-part series on farming in Wood County. Tomorrow's segment will discuss the role of migrant farm workers at Wood County farms.

by Jeff Keene
staff reporter

If asked, most farmers in Wood County would probably tell you the last five years haven't been the best. And they would probably agree that the next five won't be much better.

But don't expect them to pack up the farm and try something else, unless that something else means experimenting with new crops or technology.

Pemberville farmer Jim Witker has been farming since 1970, on the same land his father farmed since Witker was a child.

Witker has seen his share of good times and bad, and like many other county farmers, he has realized the value of sound management. In Witker's case that has meant holding off on certain equipment purchases and diversifying his crops.

Witker and other area farmers are aided by their ability to raise livestock and grow produce because corn, wheat and soybeans are crops that have witnessed the most dramatic fall in prices in the last few years.

Although the three crops remain the backbone of Wood County's agricultural output (the county ranked first in the state in wheat production, third in corn and fourth in soybean in

adapting to a changing marketplace

1985), the area's weather and geographic position enable farmers to supplement their incomes with other products.

"When prices went down everybody started looking for something else," said Gene Walston, who farms 800 acres in Pemberville. "I've been kind of lucky. My dad farmed tomatoes and pickles and now I grow about 200 acres of different fresh market vegetables."

"It really does help me survive."

Few of the fresh market vegetables farmers produce see stores or dinner tables in Wood County, thanks to the county's unique position in the Great Lakes' shipping and rail network. The majority of produce is eventually shipped from the Port of Toledo or by railroad to various locations on the East Coast and Canada.

County Farm Bureau director Brice Bowman said most farmers in the grain belt (Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas) don't have the same opportunities to export their products as farmers in Northwest Ohio. Neither do they have as many off-farm job opportunities as farmers in this area, another factor to staying in business, Bowman said.

Job opportunities in the agribusiness industry are increasing, although the number of food producers is gradually decreasing, said Bowling Green High School vocational agriculture instructor Mike Shertzer.

"There are more jobs than people in the agriculture industry," Shertzer said. New technology and the changing world market have been the main reasons, he said.

"Things are changing so much in agriculture. There are more opportunities now. This means our program is much more important now, probably more so than at any time in history," Shertzer said.

There are approximately 80 students, 13 of them girls, in the high school's vo-ag program. Shertzer said his students not only receive training in food production, but also horticulture, engineering, marketing and conservation.

"Other people may see us as training students for jobs that aren't really there. But agriculture jobs may be just about anything today," he said. "One-third of the jobs have not even been thought up yet. By the year 2000 it's hard to tell what our needs will be."

Shertzer said he recommends further education to his graduates, since many agricultural jobs will require technical and business training. About 75 percent of his graduates went on to college last year, while the remaining 25 percent already had jobs after graduating. Although the University has only a few courses in agriculture, Ohio State University is recognized nationally for its school of agriculture. OSU is, in fact, the only four-year school in Ohio with an agriculture department.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's forecast on agriculture-related jobs predicts that through 1990 there will be more than 48,000 job openings annually, while only 44,000 college graduates will be available to fill these positions. Most opportunities will be in science, engineering, finance, marketing and sales, the forecast predicted.

Most of today's farmers never received training in those areas, but county Cooperative Extension Services director Tom Hopkins said his office offers area farmers the chance to take advantage of a wide range of programs. The programs extend from research being done at Ohio State's School of Agriculture and Home Economics, as well as from the U.S. Dairy Association.

Hopkins said information and training are offered to farmers through publications, meetings and demonstrations. One service popular with area farmers is farm management. Hopkins said that a technician with a portable computer visits farms to identify their strengths and

Man enters plea

Conspiracy suspect says 'not guilty'

One of three men arrested April 18 for conspiring to murder a city police officer pleaded not guilty Monday in Wood Common Pleas Court.

Ramiro Valles, 35, of Delta, was arraigned in Judge Donald DeCessna's courtroom Monday afternoon. He also pleaded not guilty to a charge of aggravated drug trafficking.

Valles is in Wood County Jail on $100,000 bond.

The arraignment of his brother, Ines Valles, 38, of 214 Napoleon Road Apt. 91, was postponed until Monday, May 4, because his attorney, Robert Candiello of Toledo, withdrew from the case.

Candiello is representing Ramiro Valles and told the court it would be a conflict to represent both brothers.

The arraignment of Jonathan Sheldon, 23, of Bloomdale, also arrested on conspiracy charges, was also postponed.

The three men were arrested April 16 in Rossford by Bowling Green and Rossford police and FBI agents from Toledo. An out-of-state FBI agent posed as a hit man and drug trafficker in a four-week investigation resulting from a tip to Bowling Green police about the alleged plot.

Ines Valles was indicted on one count of conspiracy to commit aggravated murder, one count of aggravated drug trafficking and one count of possession of cocaine. The charges include a specification of possession of a firearm while on probation, according to court documents.

The drug trafficking count stems from an offer Ines Valles allegedly made to sell cocaine to an undercover FBI agent April 16. The cocaine possession count stems from his arrest Feb. 26 in Bowling Green.

He was placed on five years probation after being found guilty of the firearms charge.

Bakker loses PTL pay; ministry president resigns on board's suggestion

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The Rev. Jim Bakker, embroiled in a growing sex and money scandal, will receive no more pay from the PTL ministry and the Rev. Richard Dortch has stepped down as the television ministry's president, the Rev. Jerry Falwell said yesterday.

Falwell's announcement came after a four-hour meeting of PTL's new board, the second such meeting since Bakker turned the ministry over to Falwell on March 19 and admitted he had paid a church secretary, Jessica Hahn, to ensure her silence after a 1980 sexual dalliance. The payment was arranged by Dortch.

"The feeling of the board today was that it would be best if the Rev. Richard Dortch resign," Falwell said, adding Dortch stepped down yesterday.

"There was not a person in the room who did not have an aching heart" when Dortch said he would quit, Falwell said.

Also at the news conference, Roy Grutman, counsel for PTL and for Bakker, confirmed that $265,000 in PTL money had been set aside for Hahn, but that it was his opinion she had violated conditions of the trust fund by disclosing her sexual encounter with Bakker.

Falwell will bring credibility to PTL

So the Rev. Bakker is finally out on his proverbial butt.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell, head of the PTL Television Network, announced yesterday that Bakker will no longer receive a salary from the television ministry following the pay-up and shut-up sex scandal involving Bakker and Jessica Hahn, a church secretary.

But where does Falwell, already a media mogul in his own right, stand in all this?

We believe that Bakker made a shrewd move in asking Falwell to take over his religious empire, which, in addition to the cable television network, includes a $6 million hotel and amusement park complex.

He does not strike us to be a TV preacher that went into this particular line of work in order to line his pockets.

His "Old Time Gospel Hour" program is broadcast from a traditional-style pulpit, as opposed to a talk-show set, and he has not yet asked viewers to buy into timeshare condominiums or implied that he was under death sentence to raise funds.

External considerations aside, as the leader of the Liberty Federation, nee The Moral Majority, he has tirelessly worked to merge the interests of religious fundamentalists and politicians - thus increasing his influence in political circles.

Although Falwell has since retreated from the political arena, his legacy is largely one of respect. Many did not agree with his views or the means he employed to achieve them; yet he has managed to make the "religious right" a force to be reckoned with both on the national and local level.

And it is this reputation which will may well restore some semblance of respectability to the PTL ministry.

Sexism not a valid argument

by Tim Russo

My roommate turned on the television the other morning to watch Phil Donahue. Surprisingly, instead of talking about the pros and cons of undergoing a facelift, a panel of distinguished commentators (including one of my favorites, Robert Novak) was discussing the issue of Nancy Reagan's influence on White House policy.

Several questions were raised during the program. Why is Mrs. Reagan apparently becoming so powerful? Should she be allowed to wield her influence in matters of state? How do her actions affect the president?

This issue is becoming a quagmire for the political community, since both liberals and conservatives find themselves viewing the matter in the same light. It is not as much a political issue as it is a constitutional issue.

Should a person who has never received a vote from the people be allowed to influence policy as she has done? Does Mrs. Reagan have a responsibility to the nation as well as to her husband? Perhaps the most disturbing question addresses the ability of the president to make up his own mind, to work efficiently and effectively, and if (or why) his wife's non-expert opinion is able to sway him so much.

As the panelists voiced their opinions on the subject, members of the audience and telephone callers began side-stepping the issue with frequently heard claims:

The media is just blowing this whole thing out of proportion,

like they always do.

That's the media's job.

Why don't these commentators just stop telling us their opinions and give us the facts?

Why do you think they are called commentators?

All the media want to do is bad-mouth the most beautiful, moral, and God-blessed president this country has ever seen, and they can all just go to hell for it.

Suddenly, out of the past, came a fervent cry.

These men are the most sexist people I have ever seen and if a man were in Nancy's position, we wouldn't be hearing all of this.

Sexism? Excuse me, but did I hear something about sexism? My, aren't we desperate. Or, shall I say, narrow-minded.

It seems to me that sexism has absolutely nothing to do with this whole situation. No one is saying that a woman is not capable of giving good advice, lending a helping hand, or running a government.

The problem is that this certain woman is not employed by the U.S. government, does not have any responsibility in that government, and has never been elected to serve the people.

Her responsibility is to her husband. Whether or not this means that she can wisely advise him on who his chief of staff should be, when he should speak to the press, and when, if ever, he should sign an arms agreement is susceptible to debate. I cannot find sexism in that statement.

The people who make this issue a sexist one are not the columnists who analyze it. They are those who accuse the columnists of being sexist.

Leave it to die-hard women's libbers to take a good issue and plaster their outdated propaganda all over it. Today's writers can make their way through today's issues in relative safety, but when a woman is involved, there is always some zealous feminist ready to leap onto her soap box and spew forth her demagoguery to an audience which is non-existent.

This nation is sick and tired of antiquated activists and neo-feminists running around and complaining about every little issue they can get their hands on. Americans had to change the words in their church hymnals to promote "sexual equality."

Instead of singing the words "brother," "brethren," "let our light shine before men," we now say "each other," "brothers and sisters," "let our light shine before all." Does it matter that the new words screw up the pattern of the song or misquote the Bible? Not to our friends the feminists. Hasn't it gone too far? When will they realize that their movement is dead?

Simply assuming that a man criticizes, analyzes, or raises questions about a woman or her role in a situation in order to keep her inferior is idiotic at best. At the height of this "movement," neither men nor women could do something nice for, make a joke about, or even talk to a feminist without being hated for it. Some people insist on continuing this stupidity, only succeeding in making fools of themselves.

If these people would stop jumping to conclusions and look at this present issue like the columnists whom they criticize do, they would realize that the issue is not Nancy's incompetence but her husband's. Is that sexist?

I am not a male supremacist who would pound down a woman into inferiority at every step. However, the issue of Nancy Reagan's involvement in the White House has nothing to do with women's rights, and it is a shame to see people whimsically labeling everyone who approaches this issue as sexist. It is a sign of a dying (perhaps dead) movement when its fervent members lash out at the slightest perceived threat, while everyone else can only watch in disgust.

Undoubtedly, there will be someone who reads this editorial and completely disregards the original issue, coming to the conclusion that I, too, am a sexist. If that is the case, then I am proud to be in the same league as Robert Novak.

Russo is a sophomore political science major from Berea.

Coping with pressure

Finals are here. How do college students handle taking finals, leaving school, graduating (in some cases) and relationships, all at one time of the year?

Well, for starters, let's look at stress. Stress comes in many forms. We all experience stress in varying degrees. The question is how do college students manage stress effectively?

□ PREVENT STRESS BY BEING ALERT TO EARLY SIGNS AND BY HELPING OTHERS. Make a practice of sharing your feelings with at least one close friend. Look for signs of stress in others, and support your friends.

□ REDUCE THE STRESSORS. One type of stress prevention is to identify and reduce, if not eliminate, the causes. For college students, learning to say "no" may be effective. Also, lighten the load and responsibilities outside of school. In other words, don't spread yourself too thin.

□ CHANGE YOUR PERCEPTION OF THE STRESS. Try to set more realistic goals, where your chances of success are between 30 and 70 percent. Realize we are not "superpeople," and can't do everything that comes our way!

□ MANAGE YOUR PHYSIOLOGICAL STATE. Stress is physical. It's important to learn how to relax without drugs. Get into good physical condition, and try to reduce caffeine and processed sugar from your diet. Take the time to enjoy a ten-minute walk by yourself.

□ IMPROVE YOUR COPING ABILITIES. Manage your time better. Making lists may be helpful. Learn to delegate as much responsibility as you possibly can.

□ COUNTERACT STRESS. Develop positive habits (swimming, biking, etc.). And finally, be good to yourself: go shopping, eat ice cream or do whatever you enjoy.

Party debate revisited

by Linda Higbee
Mandlebaum

As one of the residents of the neighborhood in which the Theta Chi fraternity house is located, I attended the hearing at the April 6 meeting of the Bowling Green City Council. If the article in the April 8 issue of The BG News is any indication, the fraternity members who were there failed to hear what their neighbors were saying.

First, the fraternity members appear to believe their neighbors are gullible enough to believe that every single time a loud noise complaint was lodged against someone at 334 North Main St., it was the fault of one of the non-members living on the fourth floor.

Second, the representatives at the meeting stated that no neighbors had come to the fraternity to complain about noise. They failed to mention that one neighbor who was not at the hearing had come to the fraternity house to complain and got two cups of beer poured on him for his efforts.

Third, they failed to consider what impact a party like the one they are considering would have on the neighborhood. While they made an admirable attempt to plan for such an event, they overlooked or underestimated a few items:

1. The party was scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. and last until midnight on a Thursday. The entrance to the fraternity parking lot is located on the same block as Ridge Elementary School; the parking lot is also adjacent to a preschool. The Bowling Green schools are trying to teach children not to abuse alcohol and drugs; however, children learn by example. What kind of example will be set for those children by inebriated University students going to and from the party?

2. Another consideration for the parents of children living nearby is that Thursday is a school night. Those children would not be getting to sleep before midnight because of the noise caused by a large party with a band.

3. While the Theta Chi members planned to encourage students not to get drunk by offering food and by providing alternative drinks, and while they planned to offer a free taxi service, they cannot guarantee that persons who are legally drunk will not be driving. For that matter, they cannot be sure that party-goers will not get out in the middle of the street and be hit by oncoming cars. The fraternity house is located right on Main Street, where the traffic whizzes by at 35 mph.

4. While the fraternity assured its neighbors that there was liability insurance to cover all damage related to the party, how are neighbors whose properties are damaged supposed to prove that the damage is directly related to the party?

5. If the city gave a permit for the party, it would leave itself

open for a lawsuit by the parents of any students killed because they stepped out in front of a car. Bowling Green is already having financial troubles - it does not need this problem.

6. Those attending the party were to be given one 10-ounce cup each. For $4 that cup could be filled 10 times - that is three quarts (three-fourths of a gallon) of beer. The Theta Chi representatives thought that about 450 persons would attend and they had planned to provide two port-a-potties for the convenience of those attending. Those persons whose bladders would not wait for the lengthy lines that would constantly be formed in front of those facilities would probably avail themselves of trees, bushes, and the foundations of surrounding houses.

7. The Theta Chi representatives failed to adequately explain what provisions were to be made for the cars of those who attended the party. They may discourage people from driving, but they will not eliminate the problem.

8. Finally, these young men fail to understand the impact of the reputation that preceded them when they moved into the neighborhood. The damage done to the apartment building which they occupied last year and to the motel rooms in which they were housed this summer was extensive - less than one year is not enough time to demonstrate that they have changed their behavior.

On the positive side, Theta Chi members were trying to raise money for the Senior Citizens Center. In addition, they had planned to hire two off-duty police officers to keep the crowd under control. Furthermore, they can be proud of the fact that they really handled themselves quite well in what had to have been a difficult meeting.

There appear to be three choices: (a) cancel the party altogether; (b) have the party in a park where they can get a permit; or (c) go ahead with the party at the fraternity house, but give the beer away instead of sell it. If the Theta Chi members are really as concerned about improving their image as they indicated, they will pick one of the first two choices. If they really were not sincere about improving their image, they will go ahead with their party. It will be interesting to see what they decide.

Weather an ally in weekend war games

While most University students spent this past weekend relaxing after a hectic week of classes, more than 80 members of the Bowling Green Army Reserve Officer Training Corps were learning about combat in the cold, rain and mud.

Kathleen Cannon, senior equestrian management major, said the bad weather provided the perfect backdrop.

"It was perfect military weather since the enemy cannot hear or see one approach," she said.

ROTC Captain David Wolf said the spring Field Training Exercise, held at the Mansfield Training Field near Lexington, Ohio, is meant to familiarize students with military training in a realistic way.

Students participated in the Black Swamp Stakes, a type of "war game" in which individual squads competed against each other and were rated on a point system in a series of six maneuvers.

One of the maneuvers, the Tax Lanes, set up simulations of combat by giving directions of possible enemy attack, military fire and injuries.

Sophomore criminology major Brian Allen said the exercise helped prepare him for the reality of combat.

"It gave me hands-on experience with things I saw in a classroom and learned from a blackboard," he said.

Tom Kopko, sophomore computer science major, is the first in line as his squad, the MS 1s and 2s, march down the path leading to the field training camp in Lexington. Squad leader Angelo Serra is marching to the side.

Dave Wiemer, a freshman at Ohio Northern University, listens intently to instructions. Wiemer is seeking a ROTC scholarship at Bowling Green.

Bikes hinder disabled

by Maria Kromer
staff reporter

As the warm weather rolls around, more bicycles appear on campus and the number of problems for handicapped students increases, according to William Bess, director of Public Safety.

The problems pertain to illegally locking bicycles to railings on handicapped ramps, sign posts and meter posts, as well as cyclists failing to give pedestrians the right of way, Bess said.

"For the sightless, it's an obstruction they are unaware of that messes up their routines of getting around and creates a safety hazard. For people in wheelchairs, it precludes their even getting into a building; it denies individuals access to places," he said.

Sharon Spitznagel, a student confined to a wheelchair, is taking only one night class this semester and is still exposed to the bicycle problem.

"When bikes are parked in walkways, a student who can walk can just go around it," she said. "For me it goes past the point of being an inconvenience and becomes an obstruction; it may make the difference of being able to attend class or not."

When an illegally locked bike is found, a Public Safety officer will first attempt to move the bike out of a walkway or ramp to eliminate the safety hazard or obstruction without cutting the lock, Bess said. If this is impossible, the lock will be cut off and the bike impounded, he said. "ABOUT 50 bikes a year are picked up and impounded because they were illegally locked or abandoned and are causing a safety hazard," Bess said.

Public Safety is made aware of specific problems on campus through phone calls from people sensitive to the problem, maintenance and grounds people and sometimes professors, Bess said. However, very few handicapped students call, he said.

"We are trying to be proactive on this problem by getting more people on foot patrol to locate the problem areas. If possible, we'll dispatch someone right away, as soon as we get a call. This is one of our high priorities because someone could be injured," Bess said.

Spitznagel believes the students could do more to help.

"This is definitely a problem of lack of awareness on the part of students, an insensitivity to handicapped needs," she said.

According to Bess, the most frequent complaints received from handicapped students regards insensitivity, especially on the part of drivers, to their particular needs.

Long range solutions would involve bike paths and a greater number of bike racks, Bess said.

But right now, he said, students can do three things: use bike racks at all times; register bikes with Public Safety so they can be notified before their locks are cut; be considerate of other people's needs, he said.

School addition under way

by Amanda Stein
staff reporter

The foundation has been poured for the additions to Conneaut Elementary School.

Despite a late start, all the work is expected to be completed in time for school in August, said Bowling Green School Superintendent Richard Cummings.

"We got started later than usual. We had to wait for a building permit. There was some time lost, but we've regained some of that time through all the hard work they (the construction workers) have been doing," he said. "We've also been blessed with extremely good weather."

Plans for the building include four additional classrooms, a multipurpose/eating area, a library extension, classroom improvements and "built-ins" (chalkboards, sinks and storage units).

Total cost for the project is $642,618. Cummings said available permanent improvement

"We are faced with a rapidly growing and shifting student population, especially in the lower grades. This overcrowding is dangerous. We needed to do something to alleviate it."

— Superintendent Richard Cummings funds will cover the expenses, but it is going to be a tight squeeze.

"We have enough ($714,438) available from old and current permanent improvement funding. We have enough money to do the job but not much to do anything else," he said.

Munger, Munger and Associates is the architectural firm for the project. Individual contracts were given to Floyd P. Bucher & Son, Inc., Warner Plumbing & Heating and Brint Electric, Inc.

The 9,000-square-foot Conneaut addition is being built because the number of students in the Bowling Green school system is increasing.

"We are faced with a rapidly growing and shifting student population, especially in the lower grades. This overcrowding is dangerous. We needed to do something to alleviate it," Cummings said.

He said the tentative plans right now are to add four classes to Conneaut: a first, second, third and fourth grade. In the new wing itself, there will probably be three first- and one second-grade classroom, Cummings said.

The Board of Education has set Aug. 14 as the deadline for completion of the Conneaut project. Cummings said it is important everything be done by then.

"We're going to have the kids. We need to have the room," he said.

Blotter

A Willard man was placed in Wood County Jail yesterday after city police arrested him at 12:40 a.m. and charged him with disorderly conduct with intoxication and persistence.

A University student reported he had been assaulted at Uptown, 162 N. Main St. The incident was reported at 10:55 p.m. Monday. The student was referred to the city prosecutor.

A Maxon RD-1 radar detector was reported stolen from a car parked at 334 N. Main St. at 9:25 p.m. Monday, police said. The owner told police that the $100 detector was stolen sometime Sunday night.

The theft of a boy's yellow Huffy 10-speed bicycle from 835 Fourth St. was reported to police at 9 p.m. Monday.

'Family' stresses openness

Man, 10 'wives' find communication, honesty essential

by Judy Immel
staff reporter

For Jason Phoenix and his 10 "wives," open and honest communication is a necessity.

"The only thing all of us love to do together is talk," Phoenix, a Toledo resident, said. "Communication is the most critical, valuable skill in today's society."

Phoenix and Rhea Diamond, wife number seven and former prostitute, spoke at the "HSA Presents" program Monday at 6 p.m. in the Honors Center, below Kreisler Quadrangle.

The Honors Student Association regularly sponsors different speakers as part of a series to broaden students' horizons.

While the 10 women Phoenix lives with are not legally his wives, he said they are a part of the family and are part owners of the family corporation, worth $1 million.

"The term 'wife' is just a convenient label, and it shocks people," he said.

The family corporation owns a nightclub and typesetting business, among other operations.

The 10 women range in age from 20 to 40. Five children, ages 2 to 14, also live in the household. Phoenix is 35.

NONE OF the women are jealous of the others, they themselves say.

"It's like having a big family with lots of girls and all of these closets to go to," said Roxanne Thomson, wife number four.

Phoenix explains that what he is doing is not a new idea.

"Basically, it's polygamy," he said.

Rhea Diamond and her "husband" Jason Phoenix
BG News/Mike McCune

"There seems to be a sad lack of compassionate, enthusiastic men in the world," he said. "In our family, there is a lot of love."

All members of the arrangement must agree before admitting another woman, he explained, calling it a "group marriage."

Phoenix will not tolerate drugs or alcohol in the house, but otherwise, he said he knows when he can complain and when he should keep quiet.

"I appreciate the effort. For instance, I know not to complain about meals," he said.

Phoenix's past is as unusual as his present.

Ten years ago, he was the business manager of an escort service, until it "got busted."

"I've tried not to break any laws since then," he said.

Phoenix does not hesitate to talk about one of his favorite subjects - sex.

"Human sexuality is my favorite subject, because it's so complex and there are no fixed answers," he said.

"Sometimes, I make love when I sit across the dinner table from a woman and look into her eyes. And sometimes, I do the same thing in bed," he said.

The family group, with Phoenix at the helm, believes the "family" relationship will last a long time, its members said.

The longest relationship in the group has lasted 12 years and they said in 20 years they all expect to be together.

"We're not saying it's for everybody, but it works for us," he said.

Ex-prostitute tells about lifestyle

by Judy Immel
staff reporter

Rhea Diamond became a prostitute at the age of 13 to buy a coat. Her parents could not afford to buy it for her.

"I did it for the price of the coat," she said. "Later, I learned to add a little more for (sales) taxes."

But spending money like that was not the way to do business, said Diamond, who no longer works as a prostitute.

"I had a lot of bad spending habits," she said. "Whenever I needed to pay a bill I went out and turned a trick. That's not a good way to manage your money."

Diamond said being a prostitute is a job like any other.

"It's not all glamour - just a lot of hard work," she said.

"You have to be able to communicate with people from every walk of life, from the factory worker to the CEO. You have to know clothing and fashion and anatomy. You have to learn techniques that work well and quick and get the job done."

And it's a lonely job. You spend a lot of holidays alone." Diamond's perspective of the world has been colored by her work.

"Sex manipulates the world," she said. "It's how contracts are signed and bills are passed."

She said she has slept with corporate executives, ambassadors and movie directors.

She has also worked for corporations.

"I'd take clients out for the evening and pick up my check the next morning," she said. "I'd read the newspaper the next morning and see announcements of multi-million dollar contracts being signed between the company and the client and I would just have to laugh."

Diamond said she drummed up business through word of mouth.

"You try to meet people who can help you, like bar owners and restaurant owners," she said. "There are always men looking for prostitutes and there always will be."

Diamond quit working as a prostitute after 25 years because "it gets boring showing up for a job you don't like."

"You can compare it to a factory job," she continued. "You show up for work because you're getting $20 an hour, but you feel like a fool standing there and doing the same thing over and over."

Farming

weaknesses. A computer program is then used to figure long-range budgeting and planning on an individual farm.

"Record-keeping is not a favorite activity of most farmers, but it is increasingly important," Hopkins said. "Agriculture is more of a business and less of a lifestyle now."

"Many people tend to think of someone in town as a 'business man,' while thinking of farmers as something else. But farmers are likely to have much more invested in their business than the average small business man. And farmers face uncertain markets and higher degrees of risk," Hopkins said.

Toledo waste site reopened

Illegal dumping, toxic leaks spur $10 million improvements

TOLEDO (AP) - A hazardous waste disposal site that was closed for two years because of illegal dumping and leaks of toxic chemicals reopened yesterday after more than $10 million in improvements, its operator said.

Chemical Waste Management Inc. accepted two tanker loads of acid yesterday at its site in Vickery, about 40 miles east of Toledo, company spokeswoman Lorey Roggenkamp said.

The reopening came after the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency approved permits for acceptance of waste. No waste had been received at the site since September 1984.

The site, the former Ohio Liquid Disposal Co., was temporarily closed by the Ohio EPA in 1983 because polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, a suspected cancer-causing agent, were discovered to have been dumped at the site.

Later that year, officials found low levels of dioxin, and found the cancer-causing agent dichlorobenzidine, or DCB, had been illegally pumped into containment wells. About 45 million gallons of toxic waste leaked into the ground at the site from 1976 to 1984.

NO CONTAMINATION of ground water was found.

In April 1985, Chemical Waste Management signed a $20 million consent agreement with the U.S. EPA, promising not to accept waste until it reduced to 50 million gallons the amount of waste in holding ponds. The agreement included a $10 million fine.

Waste is stored at the site in holding ponds, underground wells and a landfill. Five ponds were used as storage for 250 million gallons of chemicals. Two of the ponds have yet to be drained.

The waste from the ponds is pumped out, solidified and dumped in a landfill, a 35-foot mound that is covered with plastic and old tires.

Still pending is a permit from the U.S. EPA to bury the mound.

"We are pleased to be able to offer the industry once again a safe and efficient method for the treatment and disposal of their aqueous liquid wastes," Fred Nicar, general manager of Chemical Waste Management, said in a statement.

"Over the next several months, the facility will gradually increase its daily waste receipts from two loads to an average of 10 daily loads," Nicar said.

ROGGENKAMP WOULD not say precisely how much the company spent on improvements, except to say it was more than the $10 million that was ordered.

The improvements included a system of wells and a monitoring system. The waste is filtered and pumped directly into the wells.

News Digest

Blasting suspected in collapse

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) - The developer of an apartment complex that collapsed during construction, burying 28 workers, said yesterday that the ground at the site was solid enough to support the building and that rock had to be blasted out.

A structural engineer said such blasting may have gone too deep.

"We dynamited for 30 days in rock to prepare the site," said William Lone, executive vice president of Delwood Development of Davie, Fla., developer of L'Ambiance Plaza.

"They had to drill through rock just to get dynamite into the ground," he said.

Lone's comments came in response to a review of building records on file at Bridgeport City Hall. Those records included structural design drawings for the 13-story building that called for the main foundation, called bottom footings, to be built on "undisturbed rock with a minimum bearing capacity of 14,000 pounds per square foot."

Dog owners' indictment sought

DAYTON (AP) - Montgomery County Prosecutor Lee Falke said yesterday that he would ask a grand jury to indict the owners of two pit bull dogs who killed a Kettering man April 6.

Falke told a news conference he would seek indictments of involuntary manslaughter against Joetta Darmstadter and Wilbur Rutledge when the county grand jury meets the third week in May.

Darmstadter and Rutledge were identified by police as the owners of two pit bull dogs, Bouncer and Buford, who attacked Dr. William Eckman, 67, at Darmstadter's home. Eckman, a retired surgeon, died at a hospital in Dayton about three hours after the attack.

"I think the real message in this case is that if you've got a dog that is vicious, you are going to be in trouble in a hurry," Falke said.

Ohio seeks to avoid 21 mandate

COLUMBUS (AP) - Ohio "hasn't lost a dime" in federal highway funds for refusing to raise its drinking age to 21, and the state has not abandoned hope that it can escape the mandate, officials said yesterday.

They said reports that Ohio already has lost $13.9 million in highway subsidies are premature for two reasons.

First, they cited a U.S. Supreme Court challenge of the federal law, and secondly, their ability to recover any lost funds by passing a statute, if still needed, after the court rules.

House Speaker Vern Riffe Jr., D-New Boston, said the Legislature will sit out the court decision before it does anything.

Arguments in the case, filed by South Dakota and joined by Ohio and other states, were being heard in Washington yesterday. The speaker said he understands the court could rule in three or four weeks.

U.S. Embassy files subpoenaed

WASHINGTON (AP) - Accusing the State Department of withholding information, a House subcommittee voted yesterday to subpoena department files on security at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

"I am shocked and chagrined that the State Department would act in this way when they had indicated that they would cooperate," said subcommittee chairman Rep. Dan Mica, D-Fla. who toured the embassy earlier this month and reported lax security.

"We understand they set up a special task force to try to withhold this information," said Mica, chairman of the Foreign Affairs subcommittee on overseas operations.

The panel voted 6-0, with three absent, to issue the subpoena for files dealing with security procedures at the present U.S. Embassy in Moscow, the building still under construction to replace it, and possibly other American missions in the Soviet bloc.

At the State Department, spokesman Charles Redman said a computer search produced thousands of documents about embassy security and a task force was assigned to determine which were relevant to the committee's request.

MATERIALS WERE provided to the subcommittee Friday, Monday and yesterday mornings, said Redman, but he acknowledged that some highly classified cables have not been provided. He said the State Department is trying to work out an agreement with the subcommittee concerning these documents.

Asked about Mica's expression of shock over the State Department's behavior, Redman said, "I just have no idea on what basis he could make such a statement."

Last Friday, Robert Lamb, the assistant secretary of state for diplomatic security, assured the subcommittee that security procedures had been tightened since two Marine guards allegedly were sexually entrapped by Soviet women employed at the embassy and allowed KGB agents into sensitive sections of the building.

Lamb also testified that U.S. officials were aware as early as 1979 of Soviet attempts to bug a new U.S. Embassy under construction in Moscow, but thought they could counteract the devices.

PRESIDENT REAGAN has said that Soviet workers implanted so many listening devices in the new building that he may order it torn down.

"We are looking for a paper trail between the embassy and the State Department ... regarding the old and the new embassy," said the ranking Republican on the panel, Rep. Olympia Snowe of Maine.

Browns trade Banks to Chargers

Buccaneers draft Testaverde first as expected

NEW YORK (AP) - Vinny Testaverde, the Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback from the University of Miami who signed a six-year contract with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers on April 3 for an estimated $8.2 million, was formally named the No. 1 choice today as the 12-round NFL draft of collegiate talent got under way.

The 6-foot-4½, 214-pound Testaverde was a starter for only two seasons and finished his career with 413 completions in 674 attempts - 61.3 percent - for 6,058 yards and 48 touchdowns.

The Buccaneers had the most picks of any team - 18, after trading quarterback Steve Young to San Francisco for second- and fourth-round selections.

The Bucs' early signing of Testaverde had erased any suspense about the No. 1 choice.

The Indianapolis Colts picked second and let the clock run down to 1:49 before taking Alabama outside linebacker Cornelius Bennett, the player they were expected to choose all along.

The Buffalo Bills, who traded their first pick in five of the previous seven years, made it 6-for-8 when they sent their first-round pick to Houston for the Oilers' first-round pick - No. 8 over-all - and a second-round choice which the Oilers had acquired from Detroit.

The Bills selected Testaverde's Miami teammate, 235-pound fullback Alonzo Highsmith, who shares the record as the most prolific touchdown scorer in school history with 25.

The Green Bay Packers then took Auburn running back Brent Fullwood. The 5-11, 209-pounder succeeded 1985 Heisman Trophy winner Bo Jackson as Auburn's tailback and was the Southeastern Conference's leading rusher with 1,391 yards on 167 carries for a best-in-the-nation 8.3 average.

The San Diego Chargers then traded their first- and second-round choices to Cleveland for the Browns' first- and second-round selections and linebacker Chip Banks.

To replace Banks, the Browns then took Mike Junkin, a 6-3½, 230-pound inside linebacker from Duke. Junkin played the entire 1986 season on a severely damaged knee and was unable to practice after the first month but led the Blue Devils with 162 tackles, including 105 initial hits.

The St. Louis Cardinals, with three picks in the first two rounds, used all but 55 seconds of their allotted 15 minutes before taking Colorado State quarterback Kelly Stouffer, who quietly established himself as one of the nation's top passers.

The Detroit Lions, picking seventh, took Reggie Rogers, a defensive tackle from the University of Washington. The 6-5½, 266-pound Rogers was voted Pac-10 Defensive Lineman of the Year by the league's offensive linemen.

The Bills used the first-round pick they acquired earlier in the day from Houston to select Penn State linebacker Shane Conlan.

The Philadelphia Eagles used little more than a minute before grabbing the third Miami player to go in the first nine picks, defensive tackle Jerome Brown, a 6-2½, 291-pounder.

The Pittsburgh Steelers, who had problems in the secondary even before cornerback Dwayne Woodruff was lost for the season with a knee injury, chose Purdue defensive back Rod Woodson.

The New Orleans Saints let the clock run down to 0:45 before selecting defensive tackle Shawn Knight of Brigham Young.

The Dallas Cowboys, who had their first losing record last year since 1964, went for Nebraska nose guard Danny Noonan, a 282-pounder who set a school bench-press record of 485 yards last spring. An outstanding pass-rusher, he had seven sacks, plus five other stops behind the line.

The Atlanta Falcons selected quarterback Chris Miller of Oregon. The 6-2 All-Pac-10 quarterback completed 216 of 356 passes in 1986 for 2,503 yards and 12 touchdowns.

The first round reached the halfway point when the Miami Dolphins, desperate for defensive help, waited until the clock ran down to 15 seconds and then traded their first-round pick to Minnesota for the Vikings' first- and fifth-round selections.

BG trounces Findlay, 7-2

by Jared O. Wadley
sports reporter

If the Cleveland Indians had the solid pitching the Bowling Green baseball team had yesterday, they might have owned a better record.

However, the Falcons took advantage of Richard Norris and Mark Flemming's 13 strikeouts to defeat Findlay College Oilers 7-2 at Stellar Field.

The Falcons, 14-25 overall and 4-12 in the Mid-American Conference, bounced back with the win after a four-game series loss to Central Michigan last weekend.

Norris, who owns a 1-2 record, notched nine strikeouts in six innings.

He also flirted with a shut out until the sixth inning when Oiler Lance Shestina knocked in Michael Grimes, who had reached base on an error.

However, by that time, the Falcons had a comfortable five-run margin.

In the second inning, Dave O'Kresik singled, stole second base and waltzed home on a passed ball by Craig Rath, who holds a 3-2 record.

The Falcons capped a four-run third inning with RBIs from Matt Oestrike, Greg La-shuk and Kevin Ward. The other run scored on a wild pitch.

But the Oilers, with an 18-10-1 record, didn't hand the Falcons a victory easily.

Chris Wilson and Rob Kilgore started a seventh inning rally with back-to-back singles. Henry Stolly added another single to bring Wilson home.

After an infield error, the Oilers were down two runs. However, one run was negated after a runner was called out for missing second base.

The Falcons added two runs from Joe Mueller's RBI double in the seventh inning and Jason Welsh's solo home run in the eighth.

Fleming eliminated any hopes of an Oiler comeback with four strikeouts in the final three innings.

Ed Platzer, Bowling Green head coach, said he was pleased with the team's performance after a tough weekend against CMU.

"I was very pleased with Norris and Fleming's pitching," Platzer said. "They threw as well as they have thrown all year."

The Falcons will need good pitching today when they host MAC rival Toledo in a double-header at 1 p.m.

Platzer said they have to play hard in order to avenge the 8-7 and 6-2 losses to the Rockets last week.

Baab to lecture on drugs tomorrow

Mike Baab, the five-year starting center for the two-time defending AFC Central Division champion Cleveland Browns, will speak on the issue of drugs in athletics tomorrow at 7 p.m. in Anderson Arena.

Baab's presentation is part of the athletic department's continuing drug education program for students and residents of Wood County. Tomorrow's program is free and open to the public.

Baab, a 6-foot-4, 270-pound offensive lineman, joined the Browns as a fifth-round pick in 1982. He then replaced Tom DeLeone as the starting center for Cleveland in the 1983 training camp and has started ever since.

Baab is very active in Cleveland-area charitable organizations and is a former March of Dimes celebrity chairman.

Do you really need new glasses in one hour?

Do you really want to pay the price?

Sure, some places offer you one hour service on your prescription but check out the price. Is it worth it to spend that much more? We don't think so.

At Burlington Optical, we offer one day service on most prescriptions at the same price we'd charge if you waited a week. You get the highest quality lenses and one of the area's largest selections of frames.

We think our way of doing business is sensible... so are our prices.

Single Vision
$34.88

Standard Bifocals
$54.88

Includes glass lenses and frames. Eye exam priced separately.

We made it through high school, and now college, and these seven years have been great. I'll never forget all the memories—especially this year beginning with camping, Quigby's, Homecoming, NY eve, the team, turkey everything, date parties, LSAT, shopping, Sundays together, Blizzards, Krogering, Florida, homework (for you), meetings (for me), waking up at seven, Victoria's Secrets, rubber chicks, M and M's, and just being together. But, our life together is just beginning. I can't wait until June 11, 1988. Hope it doesn't rain. Happy Graduation—Love, Kris.

NOTHING IMPRESSES AN EMPLOYER LIKE DROPPING OUT OF SCHOOL EVERY ONCE IN A WHILE.

After several years of intense study, a lot of college graduates finally learn something. They're not qualified for the job they want. Fact is, many graduates never find a career in their field of study. All their time spent in study. Not enough time in the field. That's why there's a nationwide program for college students called Cooperative Education. It allows students to alternate studies at the college of their choice with paid, practical work experience in the career of their choice. To participate in Co-op Education you don't need to be a straight "A" student either. All you really need to be, is smart enough to leave school.

Co-op Education

You earn a future when you earn a degree.
