Wright rebuts alleged House ethics charges

Police confiscate beverage

Testing part of Kappa Sigma investigation

by Dennis Robaugh

Campus police have sent a glass container holding an unknown beverage to be tested as part of an ongoing investigation of the Kappa Sigma fraternity's alleged violation of liquor laws.

The container was confiscated at a party at the Kappa Sigma fraternity house on April 7.

Police said the investigation stems from an incident that occurred the night of April 7, when a member of the Alpha Phi sorority was transported to Wood County Hospital because of possible alco-

The police have one suspect in the case and are considering filing charges, but said they cannot reveal any details until the beverage has been texted.

"We don't think there are any drugs. We just don't know what is in the container," said Barbara Waddell, campus police public information officer. Police said Greek Life was notified about the incident and may be conducting an investigation of their own. However, Wayne Colvin, director of Greek Life, said details regarding their investigation would not be released.

"Any allegations are always investigated," he id. "But, according to University policy, we don't discuss anything.

Possible nuclear patent freezes publishing

Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK - Universities are racing to cash in on cold nuclear fusion with a haste that shows how scholarly research often is tinged by big business.

A broad patent on cold nuclear fusion could be worth billions of dollars if the invention turns out to provide a new way of pro-But the lure of money inhibits exploration of cold fusion claims as leading researchers withhold information in order to protect ton, said this week.

Scientists trying to test the cold fusion claims announced at a news conference last month have been stymied because the two researchers have withheld important details of their work.

The University of Utah applied for three patents even before the March 23 news conference featuring its own B. Stanley Pons and his co-investigator, Martin Fleischmann of the University of Southampton in England.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology said this week it has applied for patents on work done by a researcher, Peter Hagel-

Brigham Young University plans to apply for patents as well, although mainly to es-tablish the credibility of its researcher, Ste-ven Jones, rather than to make money, spokesman Paul Richards said.

Pons and Fleischmann announced last month they had achieved fusion using ordinary laboratory equipment at room tempera-ture — the so-called cold fusion. They said their device produced four watts of energy for every watt it used.

Widespread skepticism about their find-ings has continued despite partial confirma-tion by other researchers. Still, the stakes are so high that virtually every major chem-ical research laboratory is believed to be looking into it.

Alumni telefund surpasses goal

by Angela Blandina

An annual spring telefund already has generated $13,000 more than its goal of $105,000 in private contributions to the University.

According to Linda Ault, assistant director of development at the Mileti Alumni Center, more than $118,000 to date has been raised during the eight-week event.

Ault said the spring fundraiser is carried out in three segments. The first segment is focused on first-time donors, she said.

This spring 35 student cal-lers contacted about 13,600 University alumni who pre-viously had not contributed and asked if they would make a donation on behalf of their

Lead levels need testing

W hat is the price tag for good health? According to the Environmental Protection Agency the cost can be as little as $8.

More specifically, the EPA announced earlier this week that high levels of lead in U.S. schools' drinking water may be contributing to damage in the brain and nervous systems, hearing impairment and interference with the formation of red blood cells. Young children are in the highest risk

Furthermore, the test by which high lead levels can be determined costs only $8 per drinking fountain. Considering the potential dangers involved in consuming lead, the cost appears to be a pittance.

The EPA has also offered its services to help implement the test - a test which they say is very easy to implement.

Local school officials should avoid the cavalier attitude that they do not need to test for lead in Bowling Green's water.

Federal studies show that at least one in 10 faucets in each school produce water with high levels of lead. Nationwide, there may be as many as one million fountains with high lead levels, the study suggests. Figures like that are difficult to ig-

Some precautions must be taken by local schools to ensure students are not drinking lead-contaminated water. Testing of the water is an inexpensive and simple beginning to solving the

Utilities do not need protection

O hio's privately owned, profit-making electric utilities are throwing their weight around in the General Assembly again in an attempt to freeze the service areas of municipally owned electric systems.

It was a bad bill last year, and it's still a bad bill.
House Bill 27 passed in the House last week 68-31, supported by, among other things, the peculiar argument that it's in the consumers' interest to cut the legs off the competition and preserve the territorial monopolies.

The power companies may have their influential friends in the House, but the Senate, one hopes, would stand up for the reasonable, legitimate interests of the public

The bill's sponsor would have the public believe that municipal power plants constitute wasteful duplication of generating capacity. Baloney.

A prudently run, privately owned utility makes money. The industry is regulated in such a way that it's almost impossible for a wisely managed utility to lose the money over time.

Those utilities simply don't need protection from the modest little municipal power plants.

The Senate ought to take House Bill 27 and zap it into oblivion.

Combine April '500' events

Quick, what's the most famous opening line in modern literature? No, it's not "Everybody was Kung-Fu fighting." It's "April is the cruelest month," from T.S. Eliot's "The Waste Land." Those of you who have never heard of it can relax because it carely comes up in converging unless rarely comes up in conversation, unless you're at a party where the host is serving

On the surface, Eliot's assertion appears to have ample support. After all, April brings us the deadline for filing our taxes. Here at the University, it also brings us the proficiency exam and the Beta 500, on the same day, no less proficiency exam and the Beta 500, on the same day, no less.

I've offered a solution to this particular scheduling problem, by the way, and it's this: Combine the events. Composition students will be required to produce 750 words or 500 laps, whichever comes first.

But I digress. Despite the initial evidence, Eliot's famous line raises some questions. Is April really the cruelest month, or did Eliot just have a bad day in April one year? Do other writers share his view of April? Is it possible Eliot was referring solely to the '89 Detroit Tigers?

Let's ignore the first and third questions

Let's ignore the first and third questions for the moment since they do appear to be somewhat ludicrous. But what about the second question? Do other writers share Eliot's view of April? And if so, by what time do they have to get it back to him?

"Whan that Aprille with his shoures sote/
The droghte of Marche hath perced to the

This is the opening line from the prologue of "The Canterbury Tales" by Geoffrey Chaucer, a man who proved that you don't have to be able to spell a lick to become a famous poet. You'd think he would have at least been able to spell "Jeffrey." Oh well. It's no skinne offe my nose. It's no skinne offe my nose.

Anyway, the prologue goes on to say that even as April affects the crops and the birds and other nature-type stuff, it affects people, too. It makes them want to go on pilgrimages, one of the few words Chaucer spelled correctly, although he did mispronounce it.

"From you have I been absent in the spring/ When proud-pied April, dressed in all his trim,/ Hath put the spirit of youth in

This is a line from William Shakespeare's 98th sonnet. What it demonstrates, more than anything I think, is that even the great ones were capable of an off day. Here we see one of the greatest writers of all time —most critics would say greater than McCartney even — referring to April as being "proudpied." And Shakespeare doesn't even tell us what flavor the pie is. "The sun was warm but the wind was chill./ You know how it is with an April

Robert Frost, who wrote these lines in "Two Tramps in Mudtime," doesn't know the half of it. This year, not only have we had warm sun and cold wind in the same day, but sun and snow, and snow and rain. Even if April isn't the cruelest month, it's certainly the most schizophrenic.

"It is not enough that yearly, down this hill, April/ Comes like an idiot babbling and strewing flowers." strewing flowers.

This line, from Edna St. Vincent Millay's "Spring," sure helps April's cause! I mean, it's not bad enough that Eliot called April cruel: Millay says it comes like an idiot! By this point, one thing is clear: April is in dire need of some good public relations. "T've got pieces of April, but it's a morning in Mov."

This line is from a song by Three Dog Night, and, as far as I can tell, it doesn't mean anything except that songwriters should just say "no."

Hergert, an instructor in English from Slayton, Minn., is a columnist for The News. Being a Democrat, he thinks November is the cruelest month.

BGSU Band will be missed at ceremony

I would like to bring a little known fact to the attention of the members of the 1989 graduating class of the University.

As is traditional at BGSU. commencement ceremonies are time of celebration and reflection. However, this year will be different. It has recently come to my attention an important segment of our commencement ceremonies will not be present. This segment is the Bowling Green State University Sym-

The reason the band will not be playing is the University has decided it would be too great an expense to feed the members of the symphonic band following the completion of the students' final exams.

I feel it is the right of the graduating class of a university this size, with one of the best band programs in the state, to be able to enjoy the quality and tradition of the Bowling Green State Uni-versity Symphonic Band during the most traditional day of our college career. I invite other seniors to rally in support of the symphonic band and your commencement ceremony.

Construction of facility will make deadline

You published an editorial on March 28, 1989 titled "Building Facility is a Good Idea; Just a Little Late." A number of the statements in that article indicate a good understanding of the cate a good understanding of the need for a facility of this type during the next decade of major campus renovations.

It will provide a location for temporary housing of faculty and staff while their buildings are being are renovated as well as eliminating any over- crowding as was experienced during the renovation of Williams Hall when the occupants were housed in Founders Quadrangle.

The point that seems to be missed in the article is the pre-mise under which this project mise under which this project was undertaken: that the facility is to be ready for full occupancy in October, 1989. The process being utilized, "Request for Proposals" (RFP), is a technique which allows individual design construction teams to present a total facility concept for consideration on a competitive basis. One of the major retive basis. One of the major requirements of this RFP is the occupancy date of this facility enforced by a substantial pen-alty clause for late completion.

A significant number of major firms have expressed an interest in participating in this project and all indicate that the completion date is realistic. Everyone involved with this project, including those faculty and staff members to be reloand starr members to be relo-cated, are very optimistic about the success of this project. We in the Operations Area share that optimism and encourage you and your staff to join us in pro-moting a "can-do" attitude when problems of this type are

Departments combine efforts

Theater students make video for Philosophy class

by Roger McCoy

A collaboration between the University's philosophy and theater departments is helping students learn introductory logic more effectively.

According to Donald Scherer, philosophy professor, theater students acted out skits which illustrated certain logical concepts and were videotaped and presented as part of a logic class.

The project was the idea of Scherer and another philosophy professor, James Stuart. They wanted to provide the logic students with concrete examples of the points they made in their lectures.

"Logic is very abstract," Scherer said. "A good example to hang onto allows the stu-dent to know what you're talking about." In May 1987, Scherer said he contacted Karen Gygli, graduate student in theater, about helping with the project. She agreed to assist Scherer, who proceeded to give her descriptions of 19 logical points he wanted to

"I had never taken logic before in my life, so it was really a learning experience," Gygli said.

Gygli said she spent the summer writing and revising the scripts according to Scherer's and Stuart's specifications.

For the actual taping, they enlisted the aid of WBGU-TV. Gygli had never directed for television before, but she said the television people were helpful.

The actors involved in the project received.

The actors involved in the project received academic credit and a letter of recommendation, according to Scherer. Gygli said she received no academic credit for her

"It was totally extracurricular," she said, "but it's an interesting thing to put on a resume."

The videos were first shown in a philosophy class on logic during the fall semester of 1988, Scherer said. Students' reactions were mixed, but the results were consistent, he

"I have been told that some of the skits are a little corny, and some are very realistic," he said. "All the students agree that the logical points come through."

The students' academic performance supports this, he said. According to Scherer, average exam scores increased as much as 11 percentage points last fall over past

"Watching tapes gives students a better understanding of what the professor is saying," Scherer said.

Scherer also said the videotapes hold the students' attention better than a standard

Kim Chandler, a graduate as-sistant for SRC who worked on the poll, said the retention factor is "very significant."

In addition to student opinion of the Rec, Parsons wanted to see if there is a correlation between amount of exercise and if Student stress was another factor examined in the survey, Parsons said.

hospitals. In northern Haiti, the ISOH sends supplies to the Pignon Christian Center, which is the only medical center serving 500,000 people, according to Doenecke.

Since the center first opened, "we have been supplying 80 per-cent of their supplies and equipment," he said.

In Guatemala, supplies go to an institute of dermatology which treats leprosy, Doenecke said.

In each country, informants are used to determine what is needed, he said. The contacts investigate the facilities to see if the places are properly run and worthy of receiving the supplies,

TC team claims second title

by Tina Diorio

The University's ROTC Ranger team added another championship to the one it won in the state earlier this year.

The team captured one of four regional titles with a 146-144 victory over Lincoln University, March 17-19 at Fort Knox, Ky.

Lincoln was in first position until the end of the roadmarch event with first place finishes in four of the first five events. But the University's squad came from behind to edge Lincoln, taking first place in the grenade assault, patrolling and roadmarch. The latter two events earned the team double points.

The team also earned a second place finish in the weapons firing and assembly category.

Eight teams competed 30-straight hours toward the title.

One of the better outings was turned in by Jarret Deerwester, junior political science major, who led the team to 344 out of 345 points in the patrolling

The cadets said the support they received from fans was "incredible." Mike Barnard, senior political science/history major, said the "fan support was great."

The team said the victory was especially impor-tant because Sgt. Major Emmett Hiltibrand, their coach/adviser, will retire later this year after 20 years of military service.

BG gets break from MAC

Falcon softball plays host to Michigan State and Akron

sports reporter

If one judges Bowling Green's softball team merely by its cur-rent record (10-18) it will probably seem like the 1989 campaign is destined for failure.

BG, however, has won nine of its last 12 games, and currently rests in sole possession of third place in the Mid-American Conference. Head coach Jaquie Joseph, who is in her initial season at BG, said she feels her and its earner around picely.

squad is coming around nicely.
"We're on the right track,"

BG faces

Bobcats

Joseph said. "It's still real said. It's still real early, but we've made great strides. I think we've proven we're a pretty good ballclub and can win and that's important. We have put the early season behind to be a season behind to be a season. behind us, and are concentrat-ing solely on the MAC."

Toledo currently resides at the top of the MAC heap at 7-1, but are being pushed by Western Michigan (4-2) and the Falcons (6-4). BG is the defending league champions, and Joseph said her team has as good a shot as any-body to win this year's title. "I think the MAC is pretty even this year," Joseph said.

"It's anybody's league, and I think the team that plays with think the team that plays with the most consistency down the stretch will come out the winners. I really feel it may come down to the last few games, so it's important to hang in there."

This weekend, BG will get a break from MAC action with Michigan State and Akron coming to BG to tangle with Joseph's troops. BG plays Michigan State in a twinbill Friday starting at 3:30 n.m., and Akron Saturday 3:30 p.m., and Akron Saturday at 1 p.m.

Joseph came to BG from the University of Indiana where she season. She played softball at Central Michigan from 1982 to 1985 and earned ALL-MAC honors in her junior and senior seasons. Upon graduation she was an assistant at Central for two years, before she exited for Indiana.

Joseph feels like BG's pro-gram has a solid base, and said she hopes to continue and build upon the success the program has enjoyed.

"They won the conference title last year, and that's a defi-nite plus because the players know how to win," Joseph said.

axers cruise past UT

After a successful two week homestand, the Bowling Green baseball team takes to the road for a pair of doubleheaders on Friday and Saturday at Ohio University.

The Falcons won six of the seven games played in the friendly confines of Warren E. Steller Field during the stand, with the lone loss occuring last Tuesday when Toledo won a 7-3 contest in the first game of a doubleheader.

Head coach Joe Carbone is in his first year at the helm of the Bobcat pro-gram. OU is 6-7 overall and 3-3 in the Mid-American Conference after splitting a pair of games with Miami on Tuesday.

The Falcons, 15-3 overall and 1-1 in the conference, split a four game set with the Bobcats last season at Steller Field.

Some things never change. Like the Bowling Green club la-crosse team's dominance over the University of Toledo.

The Falcons defeated Toledo, 9-0, Tuesday afternoon at the in-tramural fields on the strength of hat tricks by captain Geoff Knapp and Mark Card.

"I expected to win big, because we beat them 21-2 in an earlier scrimmage this year," Knapp said. "But I think that's bad because we were a little lackadaisical. I wish we would have taken them a little more seriously.

This Falcon-Rocket contest was its usual physical affair, but it was apparent by halftime that UT would get blown out.

"They had the ball in our defensive zone a fair amount the first half, but they couldn't get any offense going because of their low shots on goal," Knapp hand, had plenty of pressure in the UT defensive zone as they led 5-0 at the intermission.

"Actually we had a ton of op-portunities which we didn't capitalize on," Knapp said. "The score could have easily been 10-0 at the half and an 18-0 final"

Knapp said offensive pressure was not the only key to the victory, though. "Our goalie, Mark Koldan, played really well and our de-fense made them take their shots mainly from way outside." he said. "Our transition from defense to midfield was also a lot better because we worked on it in practice this week."

The practice payed off as the Falcons cleared the ball from defense to midfield by waiting for the Rockets to commit themselves instead of rushing passes and taking chances.

The Falcons now will prepare for this weekend's tournament at the University of Dayton.

our shooting the next two days," Knapp said. "We have to work the ball around on offense and get quality shots on goal.

"But this was such a hard game to judge what we need to work on because when we made a mistake, we wouldn't get puni-

Although the Falcons should Although the Falcons should be this weekend's favorite to win the UD tournament, no weak competition will be present. Dayton, Ohio University, Kent State, Miami, DePaul, Wright State and Denison will all participate in the two day tourney.

"I see no reason why we shouldn't at least make it to the finals." Knapp said. "It bink was finals," Knapp said. "I think we can definitely win it if we play up to our potential; I wouldn't be surprised if we were the first seed."

Pairings in the first round and seeds have not been released at this point, but the first and semifinal rounds will be held on Saturday while the consolation and championship finals will commence on Sunday.

Falcon runners look to continue winning ways

by Mike Drabenstott

The women's track team, coming off an impressive victory over Toledo Tuesday, will host Ashland College Saturday in a dual meet beginning at noon.

It will be the women's only home meet this month.

Even though the Falcons will be without five team members, who are at the Dogwood Relays in Knoxville, Tenn., they have the edge over Ashland in the form of quality and quantity of talent, according to the Falcon coaching staff.

Meanwhile the men's team, after challenging perennial Mid-American Conference power Eastern Michigan Tuesday in Toledo, will compete in the Miami Midwest Invitation Saturday in Oxford, Ohio.

The team will be without 12 of its better performers who are also competing in the Dogwood Relays.

Still, co-coach Sid Sink said the team should have a respectathere, even though some of our best people will be in knowlle," he said.

Sink said the invitational will give some of his runners an opportunity to recover from injuries while giving others a chance to begin nearing mid-season form.

Both the men's and women's meets will help prepare the team for next weekend's All-Ohio Invitational in Oxford, where Sink said both teams want to do especially well.

"The All-Ohio is the first meet we've been pointing to all year," Sink said. "Winning this weekend will be instrumental in getting the winning feeling in the teams' blood."

Select members of the men's and women's track teams are competing this weekend in the Dogwood Relays in Knoxville,

The men's contingent features five throwers, who comprise the backbone of the Falcons team. In addition, Ron Heard will be competing in the 100-meter dash and the long jump and Brian Donnelly will run the 5000. The men will also enter a two-mile relay team in the competition.

BG's women will take three throwers — Beth Manson, Vicki Roseberry and Tammy Asher — and a two-mile relay team.

"We're only taking the healthy and most capable ones to the meet," Sink said.

Rifle club takes second

by Chris Cheuvront

The University rifle club ended its collegiate season recently with a second-place finish in the NCAA sectional meet at Akron University.

According to John Cummings, coach and temporary instructor of biological sciences at the University, the results of each sectional meet are cent to Washing.

versity, the results of each sectional meet are sent to Washington, D.C. for team ranking.
"We placed seventh in the state the past two years," Cummings said. "I don't know how we placed this year because we won't receive the rankings until August."
Other teams which competed

Other teams which competed in the sectional included Xavier University, University of Kentucky, University of Detroit, The Ohio State University and Akron University and Akron University.

Besides placing second in the sectional meet, Cummings said rifle club shooters won many in-dividual awards from the Ohio Regional meet held Feb. 4-5 in Meeker, Ohio. Rifle club mem-bers used iron sites, which are rifles with basic round discs used for aiming the gun at tar-gets, Cummings explained.

According to Cummings, other teams at the meet used scopes, which are rifles with nine to 22 power magnifiers shooters look through to aim at their targets. their targets.

"While they could see the grain of paper of the targets through their scopes, our team was on the ground seeing grey patches as targets through their iron sites," Cummings said.

"And we still won more awards than the other teams."

Cummings and Chip Tokar, Rifle Club president, agreed that a major problem the team faces is the closing and remodel-ing of Hayes Hall, which will begin next fall.

Once Hayes Hall is closed, Tokar and Cummings said the team will not have a place to practice. Cummings said he will try to get permission to use the Bowling Green City Police's shooting range. shooting range.

"I would like to have the University buy some air rifles for our team to practice with in the archery room at the Student Rec Center," Cummings said.

Shooting the air rifles in the archery room is similar to shooting real rifles at a rifle range, and Cummings said the University could offer riflery courses if it purchases the air rifles.

"Once a week, though, I'd like to take the team to Toledo to use the Adams Conservation Club's range since there are no other ranges in Bowling Green except the one the police use," he add-

Falcon tennis prepares for weekend challenge

by Matt Schroder

The Bowling Green men's tennis team will have to tighten their strings this weekend as they prepare to challenge two of the perennial favorites in the Mid-American Conference, Miami and Ball State.

Feeding on the emotion of a seven-match winning streak, the Falcons' confidence continues to rise, but head coach Gene Orlando realizes this weekend's competition will be tough.
"These two teams (MU and BSU) have been the top two for about the past six years, so we'll definitely be challenged," Orlando said. "What it will do is help us to rise and play up to a higher level."

Currently, the Falcons are 1-0 in the MAC following their 5-4 win over Toledo last week. The victory marked the first time a Falcon men's tennis team had earned a victory over a conference rival since 1987, when BG beat Eastern Michigan 5-4.

Getting that first conference win under their belt has given the team a big lift going into the next two matches.

"We're definitely the underdog," junior J.P. Green said. "But if there was ever a time we could win these matches, this is the time. This year has been different for us."

Orlando says it will work to his team's advan-tage to play the two powerhouses in the middle of a long winning streak.

"The guys really believe they can win. I always want the guys to believe in themselves," he said. "It may sound old-fashioned, but you've got to believe to achieve."

Friday's match at Miami will be at 3 p.m. and Saturday's meeting with Ball State will begin at 1 p.m. in Muncie, Ind.

"The worst we can do is give a great effort, and the best we can do is win it," Green said.

Stand-up contest winner to perform

by Shelley Benson

Closed courses. No parking spaces. Lake Erie winds.

Despite all the stressful situations associated with a college environment one student has managed to keep a sense of humor.

Dave Lockard, sophomore theater major, is on his way to becoming a recognized stand-up comedian. He took first place in the UAO-sponsored competition in February and soon after was named in the top 10 nationally.

His three-minute video tape from UAO's competition was sent to a panel of judges for review. These judges placed him second in the Eastern time zone category and eighth overall. Lockard's success, coupled with his previous stand-up experience, has already resulted in opportunities for advancement.

"I'm going to take this as far as I can," Lockard said. He plans to sign a record contract in the near future and he will also continue performing in the area.

Even with experience, a performer still worries about audience reaction. "Every audience is different," Lockard says. "If they don't laugh at my material I usually start picking on them."

Lockard will be performing tonight at "B'Dazzle!" in the Union and again on Tuesday, April 25 when he opens for comedian Dennis Leary in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom. Both shows will begin at 8 p.m.

Undergrad art winners exhibited

by Susan Reddish

It's the end of another University school year and that means it's time for the 38th Annual Undergraduate Art Exhibition.

The exhibition officially started Sunday, April 9 at the opening reception where the winners of the various awards and and the various awards are shown is located in the School of Art Gallery in the Fine Arts Building and will be open for visitors until April 27.

All eligible undergraduate art students were able to submit work produced in courses taken in the School of Art during the past year. This 38th show received 677 entries of work during a day and a half period in the last week of March. Jacqui Nathan, the exhibition administrator, credited the student directors and their committees with doing the bulk of the work to put together the student show.

"It just couldn't happen without the students' contributions," Nathan said. "There's no way it could be done without the time the students put in working."

In her fourth year as exhibition administrator, Nathan noted that University students have "always taken a great deal of interest" in becoming involved in the show and are willing to work hard for long hours to make sure everything runs smoothly.

From the 677 entries, it was up to committees of three faculty members to select the 267 final entries in the 13 categories which ranged from drawing and painting to ceramics and enamelling. The 267 works of art belong to 103 participating artists.

"It's always a very difficult choice,"
Nathan said, adding that the number of entries is limited mainly by the amount of wall space that is available for two-dimensional works. The faculty teams choose work on the basis of excellence, although outstanding effort or improvement can be taken into consideration.

This years judges picked over 80 winners of awards, achievements and honorable mentions.

Housing woes caused by estimates

by Julie Tobin

"No more room. We have no more room for more students."

As each year rolls to an end the admissions office totals its final count for admittance into Bowling Green State University.

Each fall there is always static about the students who have no rooms in the residence halls and are bustled into the Falcon Plaza Hotel until spots can be freed up for them.

Unfair, yes. Inconvenient, yes. Unavoidable, no.

Much to the distress of the students who come to the University and do not have a place to live, the University is in a Catch-22 situation, according to several University officials.

According to Chris Geib, assistant director of admissions, the University plays ball with large numbers. BGSU accepts approximately 6,650 students for admissions, and of those they target about 3,050 to enroll. With such a variable difference it is not always easy to stay in the ballpark.

In fact, the number of entering freshmen has stayed fairly consistent, dropping 15 percent the past five years from approximately 3,400 in 1982 to 2,900 in 1988. So, why is there a housing problem?

"The admissions process is based on a series of estimates. We don't know the percentage of what number of students offered admission will come," said Tim King, director of planning.

These estimates pose a problem. If the planning office, admissions office and the housing office are off in their estimates, perhaps 1 percent, 60 to 80 students may not have a place to live. If the estimates are off three percent, 180 to 200 students may not find beds.

The problem is cyclical and dependent on the number that actually attend, better known as the matriculation rate.

"A lot of students wonder how we can end up with more students and it is somewhat like the situation with airline reservations. We know a certain percent don't show, what we don't know is that exact percent," King said.

"We are always comparing trends to societal trends ... we try to estimate our plan Both the offices of planning and admissions use statistics and the science of coming as close to capacity as possible.

There are several reasons why, with smaller numbers of seniors, the University can still keep enrollment constant, King said. There is a higher participation rate of students interested in higher education, a higher number of women and of part-time and non-traditional students, which reflect trends on a national level.

"Hopefully we have monitored the process closely," King said, "so that unless there are basic changes in matriculation, we think we are in good position for housing this fall." University officials will have a better sense of the situation in June.

One major phenomenon that has inhibited the planning office from more pre-here, we can't handle them all," Geib said "We would still get 10,000 applications anyway. We don't have to go out and recruit ... we all want the same type of student — that's the problem."

The quality of the student has increased in the last few years in terms of ACT, SAT and other measurements, according to King. Bowling Green has a good reputation and is considered a safe school in a small community.

But regardless of its appeal, the University still shoots for improvement and the admissions process is no exception.

"The process here is a good one," said Lisa Chavers, an admissions counselor. "It seems to work well and I often get people who go through the system come back and say thanks."

Trying to keep freshmen in school is so important because it affects their impressions of their college experience, she added, and the admissions office tries to do all it can to avoid the "sour taste" that lack of housing may create.

Chris Geib, who started this fall as assistant director of admissions, "came in running." He said Chavers and has done an excellent job of monitoring the system.

"It is a numbers game," Geib said.

"It is an inexact process and we control one thing ... the number of students we admit, (approximately 6,650,)" King said. "Our goal is like everyone else's ... to open without overcrowding."

"We would still get 10,000 applications anyway. We don't have to go out and recruit." — Chris Geib based on a sure set of history; a number shown representative of how a given year will be," Geib said. And history is all but predictable.

"We plan as best we can what we think is adequate," King said, "and any changes in our environment we take into account. For example, we see a 20 percent decline in the number of high school graduates. That can be a problem ... just something we need to stay on top of."

cise estimates in the past decade is the number of students applying to more and more colleges, which has caused a decline in the number of students who actually enroll in the fall.

"Another side in looking at the equation is the indication that BG is popular and a lot of students want to come here ... I think that is a good situation," King said.

"We (the University) are in a luxury position because so many people want to come

Major League lacks depth and sex

by Brian Lumley

With the success of "Bull Durham" last summer, it was inevitable that a wave of baseball films would slide onto the silver

Past films concerning America's favorite pastime have not been that successful. 'The Natural" (1984) was an ambitious flop, evoking a nostalgic feeling but still typical of the "success" of nearly all base-

"Durham" combined baseball with America's other favorite pastime - sex. Perhaps that's the reason the film did so

Last Friday saw another of these hardball sagas hit the screen early in the season. "Major League" is an entertaining film, but lacks any depth or character development (or the sex that "Durham" had.)

The story concerns the faltering Cleveland Indians' new owner and her scheme to move the team to a much warmer and promising Miami. She has been offered a better deal and a big, new house if the club will relocate. The only problem is the team has a contract with the city of Cleveland only to be broken if the attendance level falls below a seasonal minimum. As scheming as she is, she tries everything she can to lower attendance.

Her right-hand man hires over-the-hill players and some talented men with a few problems. Charlie Sheen (himself an accomplished pitcher) plays the wild-armed pitcher just paroled from prison. Desperately in need of glasses, he is affectionately nicknamed "Wild Thing" by his fans.

Tom Berenger takes on the role of an over-the-hill catcher, who, in one last season, tries to salvage his career. He beLuke Skywalker.

Other assorted characters add some comedy to the film. A voodoo-practicing outfielder thinks his religion will help his batting average. A devout Chri tian prays before every game. The clash between these two is funny at times, cliched at oth-

Fresh from "L.A. Law" is Corbin Bernsen, an aging player who refuses to dive for a catch - he doesn't want to ruin his face for any post-career commercial endorse-

Once the team is told of the owner's scheme, they band together and play 'real" ball, advancing the club ever and ever closer to the pennant ...

"Major League" is an entertaining film, but not coherent. The characters are never fleshed out and the story lacks sustaining life. A love story between Berenger and a former girlfriend creeps onto the screen. She is engaged to a stuffy businessman and ignores the advances of the ever-pursuant catcher. This situation is never given a chance to develop, and a few lopsided scenes seem to be pieced together to give the film some semblance of a romance.

As a baseball film, "Major League" falls flat. The season is covered through a series of scenes. The Indians winning. The Indians losing. The Indians winning again, and so forth. As the season winds down, the Indians are in (wow!) first place.

If only life imitated art.

Other failings of this film lie in its originality. Many of the situations and characters have roots in other films, most notably in "Bull Durham."

The voodoo-practicing ballplayer is pulled directly from that film, as is the prayer-pushing vet pitcher. Berenger's catcher is Kevin Costner's Crash Davis of "Durham." They are both over-the-hill, praying for one last hopeful season to prove their greatness.

Being a Cleveland-raised individual, it's difficult to criticize a film showcasing my home team. "Major League" is entertaining, but come on, the Tribe deserves better than this. Give 'em a good script, noncliched and somewhat original.

John Sayles' "Eight Men Out" proved that baseball history is a great topic to tackle, so wouldn't it be nice to see a film about Bob Feller and the golden age of Tribe baseball? That would make "great" screen drama

At the risk of sounding cliched myself, this umpire says that "Major League" strikes out.

Maynard Ferguson and his band High Voltage showed no lack of energy in the second of two shows last Saturday night in Kobacker Hall.

Ferguson, legendary jazz trumpeter, proved his mettle and allowed his musical proteges to stand on their own in the short — a little over an hour —yet very sweet show.

The engine was still running from the evening's first performance when High Voltage sped into "Omaha" with Ferguson at the wheel for an hour of upper-register chops and high-tech fusion.

High Voltage complimented Ferguson's lead well with their fresh sound. Their concert tour coincides with the promotion of their latest album High Voltage II.

Members of High Voltage include percussionist Billy Halting, Chris Ishee on keyboards, bassist Les King and Matt Wallace on saxophone. Ferguson, who achieved status in the '50s playing for Stan Kenton and later with his own Birdland Dreamband, had little trouble keeping pace with his youthful band.

Following "Omaha" the leader of the band blew a tribute to another trumpet great, Dizzy Gillespie.

"This ('A Night in Tunisia') is his song ... here's what we did to it," Ferguson said as he and his musical cohorts whipped the crowd into a froth with their contemporary rendition of this jazz classic.

The frenzy was accompanied, as was the entire show, by perfectly timed lighting that had the concert hall surging with each note. Spectrum flashes bathed the stage as the Tunisian jaunt screamed to a brass crescendo.

High Voltage kept jazz on track with "Get Off the Bus," a number that kept its shape yet showed its pliability as it bounced from an up-tempo pace, down to moody strains and then back to even further and more frantic heights.

Halting's original ballad, "Till Then," followed and found Ferguson roaming into the audience to play soft notes and press the flesh

Although the tempo for "Till Then" was not as "up" as most of the tunes, Ferguson's notes were anything but down. As he made his way among listeners to the upper levels of Kobacker, the musician seemed to be trying to seek notes that had just escaped his MF horn.

Yet, Ferguson was not lacking any notes in a display of prowess and showmanship that had him playing his trumpet with one hand while he threw out his other like a conquering matador.

Ferguson gushed appreciation for University hospitality and huffed several other comments before joking, "I talk a little bit after the harder tunes, because our bass player gets winded."

King, the "tired" bassist, is a brand new addition to High Voltage and performed in the public eye with his new mates for the first time Saturday, Ed Sargent, road manager and lighting director, said.

Sargent praised the facilities and the technicians available for the concert, saying, "The facility (Kobacker) is great ... the community should appreciate it.

"Keith Hofacker (University stage technician) is one of the best ... he could go to Carnegie Hall and work," Sargent said.

The talent of those offstage and those in the limelight took flight to "Birdland," the show's finale.

Ferguson and company were not yet done and gave the big man's biggest hit as the single encore.

"Gonna Fly Now" — Bill Conti's theme to Rocky with which Ferguson scored a knockout on his 1977 album Conquistador—closed the show in championship fashion.

Ferguson showed why the tune is one of his most popular by playing with precision and emotion.

The song and the concert ended with a silhouetted Ferguson triumphantly thrusting his trumpet into the air.

Bowling Green served as the launching pad for this tour that will take Ferguson and his band to Japan in July. Perhaps anticipated opening night bugs and the presence of a new addition forced the brief performance for a group trying to find its groove.

However, if Saturday's blasts were a precursor to future notes, Maynard Ferguson and High Voltage should have no trouble playing entertaining, cohesive jazz.

Hero's chain letter sparks column

by Dennis Robaugh

I got this letter, sent through campus mail, in my mail box the other day.

"Kiss someone you love when you get this letter and make magic, this paper has been sent to you for good luck." Thanks, I need it.

"The Original Copy is in New England. It has been around the world nine times." And so have some girls I know.

"You will receive good luck in four days of this letter, provided that you send it back out."

I'm not superstitious but I need my luck to change. So far it has been rotten. But not as rotten as Joe Elliot's.

Joe received $40,000 and lost it because he didn't send out the letter. So I figure I'll cover myself by printing out portions of the letter here and having 15,000 copies distributed. I'll never have bad luck again.

So, whoever sent me the chain letter, thanks for caring.

A columnist's mail box is almost never empty. Letters come in from almost every demented weirdo in the city. And it makes for some very entertaining reading. Unfortunately, we cannot print the good ones because they use words in the most creative way possible.

Someone once suggested that if you have an opinion, write a column. I wish he wouldn't have done that.

Why?

Well, then people would figure out this isn't really work at all. That's why columnists become columnists. We don't want to do real work. So, if you are lazy, shiftless and don't want or can't handle a real job, become a columnist so you too can get a lot of mail. But don't do it in my town.

Because I've got a monopoly on columnist hatred in Bowling Green. Especially feminist issues. I'm not really sure why, though. I think I'm up on the feminist kind of thing, just as long as they shave their legs.

About 99 percent of the quotes I put in here are actually said by somebody I know. I just can't put their names in here because they would rip my face off and pour salt on the open wounds. If it weren't for that everything would be peachy.

(Incidentally, what do you think of this stream-of-consciousness thing? You can tell I sat down at the typewriter with no clue about what I was writing, can't you?)

But people misunderstand the intent of certain things columnists write and then they write angry letters calling them racist, sexist evil Ronald Reagan clones.

Hey, there is only one Ronnie Reagan and no one can equal him. Thank the good Lord. You know, even atheists prayed that Reagan would leave office.

Now I'll probably get letters from the militant Reagan Youth.

But columnists are pretty nice guys. Especially after they get chain letters promising that they will win the lottery. I wonder if I have to buy a ticket? Maybe I'll be really lucky and just find one.

Or maybe one of my wonderful readers will send me one in the mail.

Or we could just bypass that and each of the people who read this could send me a dollar. I would put it to good use. Honest. But please don't send me a dead fish.

Cats, wilderness topics of talks

Earth Day celebrated

Two lectures by nationally known environmentalists, a tree planting ceremony and a plant sale will highlight the University's annual Earth Day celebration.

The 19th annual Earth Day is Saturday (April 22), but the University will begin its observance at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday (April 18) when Dr. John Becker, executive director of the International Society for Endangered Cats, will speak in 121 West Hall.

Then on Wednesday (April 19), students in the University's Environmental Interest Group will participate in the annual Earth Day observance by sponsoring a series of programs from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Union Oval. The activities include information displays, a T-Shirt sale, a tree planting ceremony and a plant sale.

The highlight of the day, however, is expected to be a multi-media program sponsored by the College of Musical Arts, the School of Art and the English department. University music students will join poets Theodore Enslin, Howard McCord and the Bowling Green Junior High School Enrichment Program, who will do readings of original poetry.

The last event will occur at 7:30 p.m. Thursday (April 20) when Lou Gold, a former political science professor turned mountain man and wilderness conservationist, will speak in the Assembly Room of McFall Center.

All of the programs, which are sponsored by the Environmental Interest Group and the Center for Environmental Programs, are free and open to the public.

A former operations director at the Columbus Zoo, Becker will give a slide presentation detailing the relationship of man to wild cats and the various reasons that cats are dramatically declining in numbers in the wild.

The topic of Gold's presentation is "Lessons from the Ancient Forest: Earth Wisdom and Political Activism."

A former American government professor at Oberlin College, Gold became active in the environmental movement in 1983 when he helped lead a successful campaign to stop bulldozers from cutting the first road onto Bald Mountain in the Siskiyou National Forest in southwestern Oregon.

Since that time, he has maintained a mountaintop sanctuary, where he continues his conservationist activities in the Siskiyou region. He is now in the midst of a nationwide speaking tour to draw attention to the potential destruction of wilderness areas in the country.

Senator Biden to examine U.S.-U.S.S.R. relationship

U.S. Senator Joseph Biden Jr. (D-Del.), chairman of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, will speak at 8 p.m. Thursday (April 20) in 121 West Hall.

Entitled "New Directions in American Foreign Policy," the lecture is free and open to the public.

A candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in the last campaign and the chair of the committee which considered the Supreme Court nomination of Robert Bork, Biden is also a member of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee and co-chairman of the Senate Caucus on International Narcotics Control.

In the area of foreign policy, he is the ranking Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and is chairman of the North Atlantic Assembly Special Portinitee on Nuclear Weapons in Europe 12 2013 1134

REM provides bone-crunching show

by Scott R. Whitehead

Embarking on their first world tour since forming in 1980, R.E.M. made its closest stop to Bowling Green on Wednesday, April 5 with an inspired show at Detroit's Cobo Arena. The two-hour and 15-minute concert found the Athens, Georgia-based band at the height of its ability to deliver bone-crunching rock 'n roll, haunting ballads and powerful political statements. All this combined with a healthy dose of self-deprecating humor.

Opening with the Doors-influenced "Pop Song 89," lead singer Michael Stipe led his three bandmates (guitarist Peter Buck, bassist Mike Mills and drummer Bill Berry) through an energetic 31-song gallop. Fourteen of the selections came from their two most recent albums - Green and Document.

Perhaps the finest point of the evening came immediately after one of the few weak moments. Midway through an unspectacular rendition of "Disturbance at the Heron House" a fan jumped on stage and nearly tackled Stipe, throwing the band's rhythm off. Stipe stopped the music and angrily walked over to Buck and called for a new song.

Buck and Mills responded with an incredibly powerful version of "Turn You Inside-Out," with Buck churning out ferocious guitar licks and Stipe practically howling the lyrics. The quartet seemed intent on redeeming themselves from the merely solid start to the concert.

Two songs later, without lowering the intensity one bit, Stipe took center stage with a spotlight and warbled out a cheesy rendition of the "Be all you can be with the Army" commercial. The band then kicked into an assertive and driving "Orange Crush," an accusatory anti-military song dealing with the effects of Agent Orange on American soldiers.

But the show was much more than angry or finger-pointing music. Other highlights included the tenderly chiming guitars on "The Flowers of Guatemala," a rollicking dose of positivism and optimism on "Get Up" and the doleful, plucking notes of the beautiful "You are the Everything."

Halfway through the concert R.E.M. performed what has turned into one of their classic showstoppers. Buck and Mills traded eerie, distorted guitar solos for several minutes before Buck whipped out the unmistakable metallic notes of "Feeling Gravity's Pull," one of the band's most murky and distinctive offerings.

For the first of their three encores, Stipe mocked his own band and popular music when he said, "Now I guess we have to play the dumb song of the decade." What followed was a campy "Stand," complete with Stipe leading the audience in the dance straight from their heavily-played MTV video.

The second encore proved even more powerful as Stipe introduced two of the songs as his personal favorites - "Finest Worksong" and "King of Birds." The latter allowed Stipe to sing some of the most emotion-laden and revealing lyrics he has ever written. "I am the king of all I see / My kingdom for a voice."

Sentiment apparently affected Stipe, Buck, Mills and Berry as they reached back to 1981's Murmur for classics like the infectious "Sitting Still" and "Perfect Circle."

It appears the band who has always had such an aversion to the trappings of popular music is reaching superstardom, and they seem to believe it's not the end of their world as they know it.

Earth Day to focus on environment

by Shelley Benson

What do endangered cats and aluminum cans have in common?

They are a few of the issues which will be highlighted on Earth Day, Wednesday April 19.

This annual event will focus on a broad range of environmental topics. So far, 11 groups will set up booths in the Union Oval with petitions, flyers and other information concerning environmental issues. From Green Peace to Bowling Green Parks and Recreation, the groups will vary in size and interest. John Becker, executive director for the International Society for Endangered Cats, will speak on the existing programs designed to preserve the worlds large cats.

Other Earth Day activities will include "Can Crunching," a pre-Arbor Day tree planting and a paper drive sponsored by Environmental Studies classes. Brett Stewart, president of EIG, said information on the elimination of styrofoam on campus also may be available.

In addition to Earth Day, the EIG assists in the campus aluminum can recycling drive and sponsors environmental films and speakers. Their next presentation is the film "Down Wind, Down Stream" to be shown Feb. 16 at 7:30

As local plans are being finalized for Earth Day '89, leaders of the nation's environmental organizations have united to launch an even larger project, Earth Day 1990. A global teleconference is being planned so environmental and political leaders world-wide can focus on issues such as ocean pollution, global warming and acid rain.

According to Jay D. Hair, president of the National Wildlife Federation, this 20th anniversary commemoration will "rekindle the spirit that launched the original Earth Day and will spur people everywhere to work even harder to build a sustainable society."

urday (April 15) and will run through Thursday (April 20). This year's theme is "From B.C. to B.G.," and offers a variety of activities for students involved in

The festivities begin at 8 p.m. on Saturday when an all-night dance marathon will be held in Eppler Complex, South. Entitled "Twistin' the Night Away," the dance is open to all. Admission is $1.

Four bands and "The Music King," a video disc jockey, will provide the music. There will also be a "Best Pizza in B.G. Contest." For an additional$1 anyone can taste pizza samples from local restaraunts, and then vote on their favorite.

The dance will officially end at 8 a.m. Sunday. Proceeds from the event will benefit the United Way's Big Brothers/Big Sisters program and the Children's Resource Center. The event is sponsored by Greek Week, Sibs Weekend. UAO, Undergraduate Student Government, and Never Again.

From 5-7 p.m. on Monday, the Giant Philanthropy will be held on Old Fraternity Row. Admission is free and highlights include a giant obstacle course and a disc jockey to supply music.

Tuesday's event is the Greek Week Picnic, which will offer musical enter-tainment and an All-Star Volleyball Tournament. Marco's Pizza will supply the food. The picnic runs from 5-7 p.m. on Old Fraternity Row.

From 8:30-10:30 p.m. on Wednesday, the Senior Event will be held at the Northeast Commons. Open to all seniors, admission is free. USG President Tim Peterson will be serving as disc jockey.

Greek Week winds down on Thursday with a talent contest entitled "Entertaining the Troops." Set to run from 6-10 p.m. in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom of the Union, Greek chapter teams will participate by singing and dancing; an awards ceremony will be held. Admission is free and open to all

KISMET An evening of veiled threats and pleasures

A magic carpet ride to Bagdad comes to the stage when the University theatre department and the College of Musical Arts present "Kismet" at 8 p.m. today and Saturday (April 14-15) and at 2 p.m. Sunday (April 16) in the Eva Marie Saint Theatre, University

"Kismet" is a romantic musical about a day in the life of a poetic beggar. In one day he runs the gamut from rags to riches and from near execution as a thief to fame as a wizard. In the process he sees to the future of his daughter, Marsinah, and her young lover, Caliph. He also does battle with the evil Grand Wazir and tries to steal the Wazir's wife.

The music of "Kismet" was written by Alexander Borodin, but it has been modernized by Robert Wright and George Forrest. The musical features a huge cast of belly dancers, beggars, whirling dervishes, princesses and princes, and harem girls.

Tickets for the performance are $6 for students and seniors citizens and $8 for others. Tickets will be available at the door or can be reserved by calling 372-2719.

The days disappear through clear windows your eyes cloud up my view of the world decisions of direction made by the blind are what you say i make, turning the corners walking on slabs of rock-cement that crumbles under the feet of those who tread too softly, you say make a commitment i say i'm not insane. promise my life to a banker of hearts? you charge too much interest and interest is what i don't have. do you understand? Of course not because you like your own explanations, only because you know what they mean. oh by the way, because is not an explanation it is a word.

The clear days disappear through windows you close your eyes and i look for the exit signs on your lids blinkin' like neon signs at the local burger palace thinking about it gives me indigestion you eat your fries with the salt you rub in my wounds. asking if it hurts you laugh and cry a the same time. won't you ever learn to make up your mind.

Day windows disappear through the clear we once said waves travel all the way around the world just to crash on our beach. our beach, are you joking? how can you own something that slips through your fingers, that is your problem. no it's my problem. i like say!

Here to There

My mind wanders ...
warmth
pleasure
joy
Here and there ...
peace
love understanding
When I'm here
I wish I was there
Concentration seems so hard
My brain feels worn and scared
Higher education
I'm paying to participate
Part I love, part I hate

What's in the future?
The trials I endure now
Then supposedly will help somehow
There I cannot see
Maybe someday I will be free
To experience the things I long for I'll search among every shore
Her name I do not know
In my life she's bound to show
Maybe in this Bubble Gum place
Perhaps I've seen her face
My mind wanders
sand flesh
heat
Here to there

but the people are divided Loyalty to a nation with our countryman we are sided
The insane mind
plots its move
Cataclysmic endeavor
but something to prove

Peace (part II)

between them and us

on the Earth's crust

and prosper as one

for bombs and guns

What is the difference

Living and breathing

Let's live together

Eliminate the need

The Earth is one

The point of his actions is mute
The methods and objectives I must dispute
Mushroom clouds are what I fear
Because they can take from me all I hold dear
For What? is the question I now ask
Who are the winners in this horrible task
Shadows of destruction all that would remain
The evil seed of power

fills me with disdain

The Stolen Knife

Mr. Dewitt —
He's the only father I've ever known.
My momma left me in his store when I was two.
Guess she thought he'd love me,
But he don't care 'bout me.
Least he don't show it.
I been workin' for him for the past 'leven years.
Ever since I was three he's made me carry little packages for folks.
He don't trust me, I know.

I can feel his eyes on me every second of the day.
That's why I had to do it.
Yeah. I took his favorite pocket knife.
I caught him sleepin' when he shoulda' been watchin' me
So I took it.
Why not?
If he finds out, he won't be surprised.
He don't trust me anyway.
An' he don't trust me with the gal down the road neither.
Says she's no good and that I'll probably just get her in trouble.
But he's wrong — cuddlin' is all we ever do!

Well, anyway, I carved me an' ny gal's initials in that tree

He don't care 'bout me anyway. copyright, 1989

over yonder-

Aw, forget it!

But I don't know ..

Looks mighty good, too!

I he's not gonna' trust me ...

So maybe I'll give back his pocket knife.

He can kiss his precious pocket knife g'bye.

The Old Guitarist of Barcelona

A blue note sounds Beneath your thin fingers, Stiffened and stretched, Frozen in the familiar position Around the neck of your guitarra. The notes are the same As you played in your youth Although the years have changed you, Arching your back, and The notes have changed your face, Twisting it like your contortionist's body. Nobody remembers where you are from Or the path you took through time To get here; You barely remember yourself. You sing the blue notes, Senor. You play for the sorrows of years For they are the only ones who

I'm a Perch.
Or, am I a Carp? ... anyway,
I'm in this great lake with fresh water and lots of other fish and seals.
Oh, and I have a family!
Lots of little babies who
I love very much.
What's this?
What's this?
What's this slimy black stuff?
Ouch! It's stinging my eyes and my gills aren't working right, they're all sticky.
I can't breathe!

Where are my children?!
Oh, I see them.
They are barely moving!
Great God Above!

The Kiss of Night

Nodding in the morning sun, Heavy with the kiss of night. Tears of defeat—morning ins won. Slowly pulling up its head Full-face to the sun's wormth; The night, it tries to shed. Drinking in the life-giving light, Feeling revitalized and new, It stretches to full height, Yes, darkness has lost the fight Once again to morning sun, Dew is gone—the kiss of night.
