Big hairy deal:

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. —
The beauty was hers, but the hair beneath the crown of Miss America Kimberly Aiken was coiffed by other hands.

Miss Aiken admitted
Monday that she hired a stylist to do her hair for the Sept. 18 pageant, despite new rules intended to make contestants do their own hair and makeup.

But she said she did not violate the letter of the policy, which only banned hairdressers from going backstage, or its spirit, because of her natural look: a bun.

And the pageant president, Leonard Horn, did not take issue with what she did.

"I know that the pageant was saying they wanted a fresher look," Aiken said.
"Now, if that hairdresser had made my hair big and poofy and something I did not want ..."

Anyway, she said, "I don't think my hair is what made me win Miss America."

The new rule, announced in July, was part of a pageant effort to make contestants "relevant role models" and to eliminate the "Step-ford Wives" uniformity of the contestants.

Aiken said about half the contestants had hairdressers come to their hotel rooms and do their hair. Aiken's professional hairdo came to light when the stylist, Jim Leone, came forward.

Ford and GM truck recall:

DETROIT -- General
Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. are recalling nearly 1.6 million trucks to fix problems that could cause brake failure and fires.

Ford said Monday that it is recalling 1.2 million 1990-93 F-Series trucks with dual fuel tanks to replace the fuel pressure regulator and install a valve to prevent leaks of gasoline through one of the gas tank covers.

The automaker said it has seven reports of fires that started when gasoline dripped down the side of the vehicle. Ford said it knows of no accidents or injuries as a result.

GM is recalling 76,000 1994 full-size pickups and vans to inspect brake pedal push rod retainers to see that the retainers are in the right position. A retainer out of position could lead to brake failure.

No accidents or injuries have been reported, the automaker said.

GM is also recalling about 300,000 1988-92 full-size four-wheel-drive pickups and certain 1990-92 all-wheel-drive mid-size vans owned by people living in 14
Northeast and Midwest states and two Canadian provinces.

The vehicles have front brake rotors that could separate because of corrosion, causing a loss of braking power. About 70 incidents of rotor separation have been reported, with seven accidents but no injuries, GM said.

wire reports.

Sherlock Holmes (Michael O'Brian, right) and Dr. Grimsby Roylott (Aaron Cook) confront each other in front of the Union Oval Tuesday afternoon. Cook and O'Brian will be performing in "The

Yeltsin fights to break protests

by Deborah Seward
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin tried to break the nerve of defiant hard-line lawmakers on Tuesday, surrounding the Russian parliament with thousands of riot police and troops in his biggest show of force yet.

Trucks and barbed wire blocked roads leading to the parliament building. Senior Interior Ministry officials barked through loudspeakers, ordering the lawmakers and their supporters to surrender their weapons and leave the building by Wednesday.

Police commanders told The Associated Press they might storm the building if the defenders did not surrender their weapons. First Deputy Prime Minister Vladimir Shumeiko said the government wanted the building cleared. "No one needs this hotbed of tension," he said.

Yeltsin's press spokesman, Vyacheslav Kostikov, said the government had no plans to attack the parliament building.

Yeltsin has ruled out compromise with his opponents. The deployment of more troops Tuesday stepped up the war of nerves with the increasingly demoralized and isolated lawmakers who have been holed up since parliament was dissolved last week.

More than 200 lawmakers already have defected from the hard-line cause and are negotiating job offers with Yeltsin's government, according to a former parliament member.

Yeltsin abolished parliament Sept. 21 and called for new elections in December. He has called for presidential elections in June.

Inside the sprawling parliament complex, known as the White House, dozens of guards and volunteers piled rocks and manned barricades as their leaders shouted orders. Russian Orthodox priests in flowing black robes blessed the defenders with crosses.

"Motherland or death," the parliament supporters chanted.

Parliament chairman Ruslan Khasbulatov donned a bulletproof vest under his suit and vowed to fight to the end against Yeltsin's "fascist" government. Other lawmakers put on gas masks as rumors of an attack swept through the building.

Outside, Khasbulatov's supporters and police stood watching each other in a drenching rain. Police ignored appeals by the defenders to defect.

Grave tipping arrests made

by Joe Pelffer
police reporter

The thud of fallen gravestones may soon be answered by the clink of jail cell doors following the arrest Monday of two men on charges of vandalizing Oak Grove Cemetery.

Aaron W. Wentling, 21, of Perysburg, and Tracy D. Snyder, 23, of Fostoria, were arrested and charged with five counts of vandalism in the Sept. 12 tipping of more than 118 grave markers. The arrest came after police received an anonymous tip through the Crimestoppers telephone line.

Each vandalism charge is a fourth-degree felony and carries a possible penalty of five years in prison and $2,500 in fines.

A third man was implicated by the suspects but has not yet been arrested because he is out of state at U.S. Marine Corps boot camp.

According to Bowling Green Police Chief Galen Ash, more charges may follow after a representative from Maumee Valley Memorials assesses the total damage.

"We may end up charging them with either criminal mischief or criminal damaging," Ash said. "It depends on the amount of damage."

Before the Crimestoppers tip, Detective Brad Conner said the police investigation was at a standstill.

"We were kind of stumped and this was a very big break for us," Conner said.

According to the police report, both men confessed to the vandalism but neither could explain his reason for the crime or recall how it happened.

Conner said he believed alcohol was involved.

"I think the bottom line is they had been drinking," Conner said. "It was basically a foolish act."

According to the police report, the anonymous caller said he or she overheard Wentling's girl-

Health hearings begin on Capitol Hill

by Karen Ball
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- Hillary Rodham Clinton met a barrage of questions from doubting lawmakers Tuesday as she opened Congress' hearings on the administration's health care plan. Standing her ground, she told them, "Americans can no longer wait for health care reform."

Clinton led off as the key witness before the House Ways and Means Committee, telling lawmakers that details of the plan will be debated but action must follow. An overhaul of the $900 billion system will require sacrifice from all Americans, she said.

"The upcoming debate is not about any one set of citizens but all of us," Clinton said.

The task is urgent, she said -- "As we sit here today, literally hundreds and hundreds of Americans will lose their health care."

Clinton conceded the plan would probably cost one in 10 Americans more money for the same level of benefits.

"We think we're being as fair as we can, but I want to be honest," the first lady told the House Energy and Commerce Committee, where she had headed after the Ways and Means panel.

About 10 percent to 12 percent of the population will have to pay more for the same benefits, Clinton said.

Roughly 63 percent to 65 percent of people will pay the same or less for better benefits, she said, but 20 to 22 percent will probably pay a little more money for better benefits, she said.

After the two-hour morning hearing, Clinton headed to the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., cracked that "in the very near future, the president will be known as your husband. 'Who's that fellow? That's Hillary's husband.'"

And Rep. Richard Neal, D-Mass., joked that she knew all the answers and should go on the quiz show "Jeopardy!" in her next life.

At the Energy and Commerce hearing, Rep. Cliff Stearns, R-Fla., noted that many Cabinet members show up to testify surrounded by aides who whisper responses to lawmakers' questions in their ears.

"You're making a winning statement by showing up all by yourself at that table," he said.

In the huge Ways and Means hearing room, Rostenkowski kept members' questions to within one minute.

"We could go on, but my red light is on," Clinton said, noting she was out of time as she tried to douse Rep. Sam Gibbons' concerns about how the Clinton plan would trim Medicare costs.

Editorials from across the state

The following are excerpts of recent Ohio editorials:

The Cincinnati Enquirer

A chicken in every pot. Income taxes are temporary. There's a light at the end of the tunnel. No new taxes. A middle-class tax cut.

And now: "The vast majority of you will pay the same or less for health-care coverage and, at the same time, get the same or better coverage than you have today."

President Clinton's Santa Claus speech Wednesday night promised something for everyone -- for virtually nothing.

Health care needs a doctor. Clinton's heart is in the right place -- but his cure is pure quackery.

Clinton deserves credit for starting the debate. But as usual, he's short on specifics, long on sweeping promises and zero on trust.

Portsmouth Daily Times

The North American Free Trade Agreement carries many ramifications, some of which are positive.

But the drawbacks are many. The U.S. has so over-regulated its businesses and industries that to compete with a country like Mexico and even Canada would be unfair.

Now, Mr. Clinton expects America through NAFTA to compete in a marketplace in which we start from an entirely unfair vantage point.

Someday, perhaps through a combination of less government intervention in private business in this country and a raising of standards in Mexico, some middle ground might be reached that makes more sense for the implementation of a NAFTA-like agreement. Until then, NAFTA's benefits to the United States are questionable at best.

The Delaware Gazette

If H.B. 361 becomes law, Ohio will have weakened 61 of its county fairs and threatened the standardbred industry that operates in all 88 counties. Ohio's standardbred industry ranks No.1 in the nation.

Passage of H.B. 361 would allow off-track betting on thoroughbred racing, a practice that has seriously damaged harness racing in Illinois, Pennsylvania and New York.

Many bettors would concentrate on the 18 betting parlors, where they could bet on many more races, even outside Ohio, instead of going to a track.

The total betting on all harness races at 61 county fairs in Ohio is $7 million.

Here's hoping the total welfare of 61 county fairs that feature harness races will count for something more than the greed of thoroughbred track owners.

Big brother Beavis close by

This year, The News has had its share of teething problems. Any regular reader of the paper knows that there have been some typos and errors like that. My own column has been victimized rather significantly on two different occasions, which annoyed me more than a little bit. People would ask me why I had messed up my own column so badly, when in truth it was not my fault at all.

After calming down, I realized that they were just honest mistakes that people had made. They were mistakes that a professional would not make, but we're not quite professionals here yet. We are all trying to learn something about journalism, and mistakes happen sometimes. So, bear with us. Things are improving. In particular, I don't expect any more major problems with the production of this column. I've been bringing a pit bull with me into the newsroom lately.

While attending college, many of us are forced to seek employment to raise funds, or at least appease our grumbling parents. Many of these jobs are not very glamorous, and some of them almost seem like they're designed to frighten you into graduating and getting a "real" job.

When I came back this fall, I set off on the job trail in thriving Northwest Ohio. I did not expect a cushy dream job, but I also didn't expect the corporate paranoia I experienced.

Jack Ihle

From what I understand, lie detectors for employment purposes are pretty much frowned upon by the law. One company I applied to would probably have loved polygraph testing, as well as truth serum, sensory deprivation, etc.

The company shall remain nameless because they probably have undercover operatives planted on all the campuses around here. Let's just say that it is a nationally known rental car company whose name sorta rhymes with Butthead's faithful sidekick.

After I filed my application with Beavis Rent-A-Car, I was called in for an "honesty test." This was an interesting group of questions apparently designed to strip me down to my evil core.

"If a member of your family was stealing from their employer, would you inform their supervisor?" Well, of course I would. My mother once brought home lunch from the clinic where she works. I had no choice but to press charges.

"Have you ever thought about stealing any items from any of your employers?" Never even crossed my mind. Actually, thinking up schemes to rip off my employers is one of my favorite work-time activities, though it's purely a theoretical pastime. I had to lie on the test, though, to prove my honesty.

The test went on and on like this for about 50 questions. I seriously didn't know if I should answer truthfully to prove that I'm human, or untruthfully to make myself look honest. The manager kind of slyly winked as he explained the test, so I lied like Joe Suzuki.

I thought it was quite ironic that taking this honesty test required me to be more dishonest than I can ever recall being. Truthfully, I don't think I have ever taken more than a pencil from any employer.

Two weeks later, Beavis Rent-A-Car called back. I had lied sufficiently enough to be deemed honest.

They hired me and I went in, proved my citizenship, signed some papers, etc. They also made me sign a very unusual document: "Assignment of Ideas and Inventions."

"Any inventions, discoveries, improvements, devices, tools, machines, designs, promotional ideas, practices, processes, services, or products" blah blah blah "which I make, discover, conceive, develop, or secure, alone or with others, during my employment with Beavis" blah blah blah "shall become Beavis' property as soon as made or conceived."

Wow. I am not totally proficient at legalese, but it certainly seems as if all my brain neurons are owned by Beavis while I'm on the clock. This type of all-pervasive management seems a little extreme for an entry-level position. Big Brother is watching, and he doesn't pay so well.

Obviously, this type of document is hardly enforceable (yet). But it is a bit scary that a company would desire so much control over their employees.

To be fair, it is understandable that a firm would want control of an idea related to its business and developed by its capital. This document seems to go far beyond that, though, as far as I can tell from its convoluted language.

Seriously though, these types of attitudes among employers seem a little ridiculous. Trust is something that is earned, not tested for or signed away. I'm not quite sure what they are worried about. There don't seem to be too many undiscovered Thomas Edisons among my co-workers.

These types of things happen, though, because they go unquestioned. Just be careful out there when job hunting. You may encounter an employer more despicable than Beavis.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Food Op manager defends cafeterias

The BG News:

As a student manager for Food Operations, I would like to refute and clarify some comments made by Robin Coe last week. First of all, the Galley and The Amani have never been considered fast food places -- they are snack bars.

Fast food places pre-cook their food and let it sit until someone orders it. The snack bars on campus only cook the food after it has been ordered, thereby refuting the claim that they are a "fast food place."

Second, concerning the closing of Commons and Harshman on weekends, have you ever heard of budget cuts?

As to the "new things incorporated into the campus," private citizens and businesses donate money specifically designed to renovate or construct new buildings when it is needed. That money cannot be used for any other purpose.

Third, as to how Ms. Coe came to the assessment that Founder's food is better than other units is beyond me. First and foremost,

ALL Food Operations units are supplied with the same food from the same supplier, except the Union. And all the units use the same recipes for preparing the food.

Students may think the food tastes better only because of the atmosphere presented in Founder's Keepers. The exception about the Union is that it is organized, operated, and funded by a completely different group than Food Op.

Finally, I have heard many students complain about Food Operations over the years and nothing has come close to Ms. Coe's article. I think it tops them all.

If you think Food Operations is so terrible, maybe you should try another university's food operations. I have, and it doesn't compare.

You would probably find that they don't have the same variety we have. At Ohio State University, students pay a set price for a meal and get only two choices of entrees. I would like to inform you, Ms. Coe, and the rest of the campus that our food operations is rated one of the best in the nation.

Food Operations has received numerous awards on the quality of food it provides, the dietary considerations it takes, and many other factors. Maybe you should take some time and research our food operations here on campus and compare it with other colleges and universities. You will be surprised by the difference.

Melendez picks Ideals rather than party

The BG News:

You've seen the signs, the shirts, the buttons, the chalk. Everyone knows that Sam Melendez is running for First Ward council seat as an Independent. I'd like to explain why he's running as an Independent, as it is unclear to some.

Sam's politics can't be labeled "Democratic" or "Republican" because they are "idealistic." In 1991, Sam campaigned for Independent Jim Tinker for mayor of Bowling Green, because Jim was the best candidate and because Jim was willing to take a stand on the important issues.

In the past, Sam has actively supported Democrats when he thought they were right. And when he thought they were wrong, he actively campaigned against them.

In the future, Sam will continue to support candidates that are progressive and forward thinking, no matter if they are Republicans, Democrats, Independents, Green Party, whatever.

Sam was actively recruited by local Democrats to run for First Ward, but Sam chose to put principle over party and run as an Independent. Why? Because in 1993, it is impossible to tell the difference between the Bowling Green Democrat and the Bowling Green Republican.

Both parties are controlled by corrupt landlords and rich lawyers. Both county party chairs are against redistricting. Both parties are unwilling to take a stand.

Party politics are trite and tiresome to Sam Melendez. By refusing to sell out, refusing to be told by others what to do and by willing to stand up for what he believes in, Sam has earned my respect.

For that reason, I proudly serve as his campaign manager.

Alleged corrupt officer on trial

by Tom Hays
The Associated Press

NEW YORK -- Michael Dowd went from accepting free pizza as a rookie cop to running an $8,000-a-week drug protection racket and sniffing lines of cocaine off the dashboard of his patrol car.

But no one would have guessed it from his 1987 job evaluation.

Dowd had "excellent street knowledge," was likely "to become a role model" for other officers and had "good career potential," his superiors concluded.

"I could do just about anything and get away with it," Dowd testified Monday at the opening of New York's biggest police corruption investigation since Frank Serpico blew the whistle on fellow officers two decades ago.

The arrest of Dowd, 32, last year on a raft of federal corruption charges prompted the creation of a mayoral commission to investigate the nation's largest police department. The panel is known as the Mollen Commission, after its chairman, Milton Mollen, a former judge and deputy mayor.

The panel met on Monday in the same vaulted hall where the Knapp Commission -- formed to investigate Serpico's allegations -- convened in 1971.

The first witness, Mayor David Dinkins, noted that police corruption scandals have surfaced almost every 20 years this century, and he urged the panel to find a way to end the cycle.

The five-man panel -- which presented Dowd's job evaluation as evidence of the department's tendency to close its eyes to dirty cops -- is expected to recommend a permanent monitoring body to weed out corruption.

The hearings were to continue today with the testimony of an internal affairs investigator who pursued Dowd's case.

Dowd, a 10-year police veteran, was fired after his arrest.

U.S. may leave Somalia

President wants U.N. to ensure safety first

by Ron Fournier
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- There must be a "date certain" for withdrawing troops from Somalia, President Clinton declared Tuesday. The White House said the government was negotiating with the United Nations for replacement of some U.S. troops.

The president said he wants the United Nations to first develop a political strategy ensuring that starvation and chaos will not revisit the East Africa nation after U.N. troops pull out.

Clinton's push for an exit comes under pressure from Congress. His comments shifted gears from the hunt for fugitive warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid, placing new urgency on achieving political stability.

"Every peacekeeping mission or every humanitarian mission has to have a date certain when it's over," Clinton said in a picture-taking session as he met with Democratic congressional leaders.

While the administration still believes the capture of Aidid would make it easier to ensure lasting peace in Somalia, the White House is trying to change the view that the U.S. is a combatant.

"The enforcement strategy did not change," Clinton said. "But what I wanted to emphasize at the U.N. yesterday was that there has to be a political strategy that puts the affairs of Somalia back into the hands of Somalia; that gives every country ... that comes into this operation the sense that they're rotating in and out, that there is a fixed date for their ultimate disengagement in Somalia."

His announcement came as the House neared a vote on a resolution asking him to report to Congress by Oct. 15 on the goals of the Somalia operation. It also urges Clinton to seek congressional authorization by Nov. 15 for continued U.S. involvement.

The Senate approved the same provision earlier this month by a resounding vote of 90-7.

White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers would not take a position on the resolution, saying only, "We will continue to work with Congress to figure out the best strategy."

Criticism over the mission mounted after it slowly evolved from a humanitarian effort into a nation-building operation. The cries grew louder

"The enforcement strategy did not change. But what I wanted to emphasize at the U.N. yesterday was that there has to be a political strategy that puts the affairs of Somalia back into the hands of Somalia; that gives every country ... that comes into this operation the sense that they're rotating in and out, that there is a fixed date for their ultimate disengagement in Somalia."

President Bill Clinton

after three American soldiers were killed Saturday in Somalia.

The number of U.S. troops in Somalia has dropped from 25,000 to 5,000 since the operation began last year.

Myers said the U.S. is negotiating with the United Nations to replace "a certain amount" of U.S. troops with soldiers from other nations or with civilians. She said existing U.N. plans call for the United States to draw down its forces as other countries bring in troops. She originally said 2,500 U.S. troops would be rotated out in the next few months, but later told reporters the information was incorrect.

On the timing of a full pullout, she said, "We don't have a date certain."

After the meeting with Clinton, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Congress supports Clinton's actions, but he said some lawmakers are disappointed with the way events have transpired in Somalia.

"The longer any operation goes on there's going to be questions, reservations, arguments. ... And clearly this exists, not just in the case of Somalia, but in Bosnia."

Administration officials concede that the mission in Somalia does not meet those standards. "I think that we've learned something from this process that we'll apply to the next," Myers said.

S&Ls gain contracts State's largest aircraft sold

Voinovich sells plane due to high maintenance cost

by John Chalfant
The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- Gov. George Voinovich is selling the largest airplane in the state's fleet because he seldom used the aircraft and thought it cost too much to maintain.

The 16-passenger Fairchild F-27 that carried governors since 1977 may be transferred Friday to a company that will fly tourists from Quito, Ecuador, to the Galapagos Islands.

John Platt, an Ohio Department of Transportation assistant director, said Aerolineas Galapagos submitted the lone bid of $350,000 for the twin-engine plane.

The state bought the 1961-vintage craft from Westinghouse Corp. for $300,000 when Gov. James A. Rhodes was in office.

Rhodes and Gov. Richard

Celeste used the plane extensively.

Voinovich prefers to drive whenever possible, said spokeswoman Jenny Camper.

"The planes are just something we use when it's absolutely necessary. He feels they're expensive and he can save the taxpayers money by using other modes of transportation," she said.

Platt said maintenance costs were $60,000 annually even if the plane stayed on the ground.

Voinovich flew to Indianapolis and Detroit on state business Tuesday. He used an eight-passenger plane, one of two smaller craft maintained by ODOT's Division of Aviation.

The state originally asked $1 million for the Fairchild but found no takers. A second sales attempt produced three bids of $225,000 or less. The most recent offering set a minimum price of $350,000 and drew the Aerolineas bid.

"People from Ecuador are supposed to be coming here this week and making final arrangements for the transfer," Platt said.

Half the purchase price has been paid, with the other half due upon transfer. The money will go to ODOT, which bought the plane from Westinghouse.

The state spent $59,000 for repairs to the plane that were required as a result of an annual inspection. Platt said the work had to be done in order to use or sell the craft.

Graves

friend talking about Wentling's involvement in the crime.

The girlfriend told police when Wentling came home on the night of Sept. 12 he was extremely intoxicated and began vomiting. His hands were also reportedly dirty and scuffed.

According to the police report, Wentling told his girlfriend that he had "gone tipping." She then asked if he meant "cow tipping." Wentling allegedly said, "No, grave tipping."

He then reportedly told her he had only tipped about 20 graves.

Windell declined comment. Snyder could not be reached for comment.

Ash said this was the first time the Crimestoppers board had met and decided on a reward before receiving information.

"It looks like the main motive for the [call to Crimestoppers] was money," Ash said.

Ash said this case was unusual because of public outcry against the vandalism.

"It's like a slap in the face against society," Ash said. "It's comparable to breaking into a church and stealing."

Conner said he believes the arrests will help the University's image because the suspects are not University students.

Club soccer earns first win

by Jonathan Broadfoot
sports writer

After starting the season with three losses, the BG men's club soccer team added some victories to their record.

The Falcons travelled to Geneva College in Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania Saturday and came back home with their first win.

Arriving in Beaver Falls on a gloomy Saturday afternoon, the winless Falcons were psyched to gain their first victory.

Using an attacking offense, and an aggressive, stingy defense, the club squad shook the monkey off its back with a 2-0 triumph over Geneva.

From the blow of the whistle, BG came out attacking. The Falcons pressured the goal from the start with multiple shots and crosses.

Unlike its first three contests, BG was winning more 50/50 balls, communicating effectively, and taking a higher number of shots on goal.

Although the first half ended in a scoreless tie, BG felt at half-time that a goal was soon to come in the second half -- and it did.

The first of BG's two goals occurred several minutes into the half when freshman left midfielder Scott Withrow dribbled past a Geneva midfielder in the center of the field.

Withrow then looked up, saw freshman forward Ronn Tompot at the top of the goal area, and sent a firm pass directly to his feet. Tompot turned with the ball and ripped a half-volley blast past the Geneva goalkeeper into the back of the net.

After being shutout in each of their first three games, the dubious streak was finally broken. BG held the lead at 1-0.

Continuing to control the play of the game, BG came storming down the field again.

Junior forward Jim Mericksco, after chasing down a long ball from across the field, juked three Geneva players with three spectacular moves. Mericksco then saw two Falcons open near the far post of the Geneva goal.

He crossed the ball across the six-yard line and sophomore defender Seth Droe came diving in for a brilliant header in the upper right side of the net.

BG preserved that 2-0 lead the rest of the game. The Falcon defense was impenetrable, finally proving that a shutout was possible.

Geneva College coach Mike Killian was not upset with his team's play.

"Given the philosophy, 'when in doubt--kick it out,' I think we as a team, considering we are pretty young, did pretty well."

The Falcons second win -- which improved their record to 2-3 -- was at home against Ohio State University on Sunday.

As with any Buckeye sport, the OSU club soccer team offers fairly good competition for smaller schools due to its huge enrollment.

Although OSU's squad began practicing just a week ago, the Buckeyes proved to be a threat once again for the Falcons.

Like a long time rivalry, the two teams emerged from the start of the game with intense, aggressive play and an unusual number of fouls.

With the adrenalin still running in the veins of the Falcons because of their victory a day earlier, the drive to win was even more evident.

BG started off the scoring when freshman midfielder Ryan Mounie received a mistrapped ball from a Buckeye in the center of the field. Mounie, having some room to dribble, began to move the ball up the field. Suddenly, a Buckeye defender ran towards Mounie trying to steal the ball.

Mounie drew the ball away from the Buckeye opponent, faked him out, and continued to dribble toward goal. Another defender tried "sticking" Mounie, but was juked also.

Mounie, now at the six-yard line, faked out another Buckeye defender and slipped the ball past the OSU goalkeeper just inside the near post to put BG up 1-0.

With only a few defensive mental lapses on BG's part, the Buckeye offense rarely had a chance to score.

One of those lapses arrived soon after BG's goal when a Buckeye forward beat two Falcon defenders and took a shot that was just out of the reach of BG goalkeeper Brian Salco to tie the score 1-1.

The remainder of the first half was a constant defensive battle between the two rivals with the score subsisting at 1-1.

The second half became even more aggressive with more fouls resulting in some minor injuries to both teams. The intense play of the match kept on through the rest of the half with BG having several more opportunities to score.

With a mere fifteen minutes remaining in the entire match, BG knew a tie wasn't good enough. After some Buckeye pressure near the Falcon goal, the ball was cleared -- and finally cleared out of dangerous territory.

The ball was cleared out to the far left side where freshman full-back Joel Calkins was running. Calkins moved the ball up the left side of the field, beating one Buckeye.

After taking the ball past the Buckeye defender, Calkins heard junior stopper Jonathan Broadfoot -- who had just made a run through the Buckeye defense -- calling for the ball. Calkins then sent a beautiful pass over two Buckeye defenders.

Broadfoot, running onto the long ball which bent into the box, anticipated the Buckeye goalkeeper coming out to challenge the play, and gently half-volleyed the ball over the Buckeye goalkeeper to put the Falcons in the lead 2-1.

The goal proved to be the game-winner, as both teams were held scoreless for the remainder of the contest.

The Falcon men's club soccer team will be travelling to the University of Notre Dame on Saturday, October 2 and will be hosting Youngstown State University on Sunday, October 3 at 2:00.

Women's club soccer gains winning streak

by Amy Niehaus
sports writer

Bowling Green's club soccer team for women took a road trip this weekend in hopes of ending its recent losing streak.

The weekend included a stop in Dayton Saturday to battle Ohio University, along with the host Dayton squad. Sunday, the Falcons finished up at Kent State against the Golden Flashes.

BG started off strong against OU, dominating on both the offensive and defensive sides of the ball. A powerful outside shot by Michelle Dorman put the Falcons on the scoreboard midway through the first half.

The BG defense then fell apart a bit, allowing the Bobcats to gain momentum and tie the game early in the second half. The teams played even for the rest of the game, and the match ended in a 1-1 draw.

Shortly after the conclusion of the OU game, the Falcons were set to take on the Dayton Flyers. Although BG once again came out with a strong attack, Dayton was able to capitalize early with a head shot off of a lofty corner kick.

The second half was a tribute to BG's offense, as the Falcons came out stronger in the second half with superb passing. Dawn Thompson sent a direct kick from outside the penalty area soaring into the far corner of the goal.

The score was tied, but not for long.

Dorman capitalized twice with overpowering shots, and Mandy Biddle ripped a shot to finish off a cross from Thompson, making the final score 4-1 in Bowling Green's favor.

In the Falcons weekend finale at Kent Sunday, the first half ended with neither team finding the nets. Early in the second half, Krissi Schneider capitalized on a breakaway, firing a shot over the goalkeeper's head and into the goal.

BG never looked back after it took the game's first lead. Dorman, who scored four huge goals in the three weekend games, eluded the goalie's grasp with a strong run.

Kim Elton, BG's goalkeeper, led an outstanding defense as she earned her first shutout of the season, 2-0.

The final weekend record of 2-0-1 gives BG a three-game unbeaten streak

To win, circle your picks on the left-hand side and then turn in the contest form to the BG News, 210 West Hall. The entry with the most correct picks will win two movie passes to the Woodland Mall. Prizes will vary from week to week. In case of ties, a winner will be drawn by a member of the BG News. The previous week's winner will have his or her picture appear in the guest column along with their winning score each Wednesday. All entries must be submitted by 5 p.m. on Friday.

This week's winner is Andy Knight, 233 Compton. Andy correctly picked 12 out of 14 games. Loyal to his home teams, the only games he picked incorrectly were his Bowling Green-Navy and Cleveland-Indianapolis picks. Assistant sports editor Mark DeChant was tops among the BG News fearless forecasters with a 10-6 mark. Sports writer Mike Kazimore (32-19) holds a slight overall lead over sports editor Aaron Dorksen (31-20). Unfortunately, Andy Dugan (third straight week) and Russ Eckard, resident staff NFL guru, earned the "trash award" for garbage picks again. Andy, please get out of the basement -- the people want to see your face. The "guts award" goes to the 4 brave souls who picked the L.A. Rams to upset Houston. Keith Holacker, 543 S. Summit; winner Andy Knight, Maryann Pinkley, 215 E. Poe Rd., and Tommy Montroso, 351 Rodgers were the only four out of 74 entrants to pick the Rams.

The Year of the Kicker

The Associated Press

Three games in Week 4 may have set the tone for the final 80 percent of the NFL season in this, the Year of the Kicker:

1. New Orleans 16, San Francisco 13 -- now it's the 49ers chasing the Saints in the NFC West.
2. Miami, 22, Buffalo Bills 13 -- a statement by the Dolphins' defense.
3. Los Angeles Rams 28, Houston Oilers 13 -- another embarrassment for Jack Pardee, Buddy Ryan, Warren Moon and owner Bud Adams.

It wasn't unusual for the Saints and 49ers to play a 16-13 game San Francisco's last five wins over New Orleans came by a total of 14 points. It was unusual that the Saints won, only the third time in a dozen games between teams that have been just about even.

"I don't think this team needs confidence. It's not like we've been losers or anything," said New Orleans coach Jim Mora, 5-10 against the Niners and a winner for the first time against San Francisco's starting quarterback.

"We've won some good games over the years. We just haven't had many against this team."

This was the kind of game the Saints piloted by Bobby Hebert used to lose.

The first time, Hebert threw an end zone interception from the 49ers' 12 with the Saints trailing 16-10 in the final minute. The second time, they lost 20-19 when Hebert failed to call a timeout with 48 seconds left and just 20 yards to get into Morten Andersen's automatic range.

Wade Wilson doesn't have Hebert's natural talent, but he had enough poise to set up the Saints for Andersen's winner after the Niners tied the game with 1:14 left.

The next test for the Saints will be against the Rams in Anaheim next week.

"If we don't let down, then maybe we're on to something," Wilson said.

As for Houston, what do you say about a 1-3 team scouts and general managers think has as much talent as any in the league, except the Dallas Cowboys?

Does Adams fire Pardee and replace him with Ryan, whose defense gave up 316 passing yards to Jim Everett? Does Cody Carlson replace Moon, 19-of-42 with two more interceptions after his benching a week ago split the team?

"I think changes affect stability," Pardee said. "Our players know what we have to do and I know what I have to do."

The consensus around the NFL is the Oilers still haven't recovered from the disaster in Orchard Park last January, when they blew a 35-3 lead and lost 41-38 to the Bills in overtime. That led Adams to fire offensive coordinator Jim Eddy and hire

Ryan, whose outspoken statements have split the team and whose defense has fallen down at critical moments.

The other consensus is the Oilers are much, much better than the rest of the division. The Cleveland Browns are 3-1, the Pittsburgh Steelers won last year and there's no sign that the dis-sension will end.

"It's a distraction," Moon says of the discussion about a coaching change.

Miami Dolphins defensive end Marco Coleman sacks Buffalo Bills quarterback Jim Kelly during their game Sunday, Sept. 26, at Rich Stadium in Orchard Park, NY.
