Students find work at Alumni Telefund

by Cynthia Kent  News staff writer

It isn't every day's dream to work in the restaurant industry or waitress at one of the University's restaurants, but that's one of the many consequences of pursuing higher education.

If working for a little extra cash and spending some of the free time you have is something you would like to pursue, the Alumni Telefund is a place to pursue.

Groups insist on no cooperation

There seems to be a compelling need to keep things secret and the case of University organizations, secrets have become too popular.

Take the case of the Black Student Union, which is listed in the BGSS Organizations Directory as an organization with the objective "to orient, facilitate and to foster model, social and social awareness for black students at the University and to help other students become aware of the issues that face black students." But beyond that stated goal, there is no other information available to the general public — no member information, no description of events they organize or how they differ from other organizations on campus.

The president of the group, Samuel X (formerly Samuel Jackson), has declined to discuss with The News what his group does. Nor does he want to get involved with "the modeling that's going on about the AGCF&B." (chuckles) "Yeah. Only the black students get all the fun of their views,"

"...if everybody was like we were we wouldn't have all these problems, ..." (referring to the group's anti-gay stance)

"You know what I'd do? I'd wear (unintelligible). They'd like the opposite of Jesus."

"Yeah. I'm wearing (unintelligible) pants because I don't support human rights."

"...Homes are really prominent."

"...I'd like to go to a gay bar just to see if someone would try to pick me up. I'm just really curious."

"I'd like to go to a gay bar just to look around and see what they do. Just watch them, you know? I'm just really curious to see the way they do it."

"Yeah, I would too. I'd like to see what it's like."

"That doesn't matter. (Laughter) You just say, 'Yeah. I'm just here to look at the faggots.'" (Laughing) "Yeah. Just here to see the faggots. (サービス) I've never had a problem saying 'faggots.'""}

Woman's death in question

NILES, Ohio — The father of a woman whose death was ruled a suicide by Trumbull County Coroner Dennis Wal- lace and County Prosecutor Doug Butterfield in 1993, said Wednesday that exhumation of her body may answer the family's questions about the case.

"It's really going to happen, we're going to have to know what killed our daughter," Ray Collicott said. The woman's body was exhumed Aug. 28, 1974, in a field north of Youngstown.

Collicott said he believes she was killed. No suspect was ever named.

The order to exhume her body, dated Tuesday by Trumbull County Prosecutor Dennis Wallace and County Prosecutor Douglas Butterfield in 1993, was placed in the possession of Trumbull County Coroner Dennis Wallace.

The Exhumation Order, which stated the woman likely did not die from an overdose of Valium and alcohol, that was the cause of death listed in 1978, Summit County Coroner William Berger said.

He said there was enough evidence to believe the woman's death was a homicide.

Ray Collicott said he believes his daughter was killed.

The woman's remains will be taken from the Ferris Cemetery to the office for an autopsy.

Trumbull County officials said they could not be reached for comment.

Administration cheats on tests

AKRON, Ohio — A school adminis- trator is under investigation for requiring a portion of a high-school proficiency test and distributing a practice test, a state official said Tuesday.

Claudia Lysakowski, an attorney for the Ohio Department of Educa- tion, and David Fieck, an assistant principal at Garfield High School, appeared to include parts of the test in the paper Tuesday, the official said.

She declined to comment further.

"It is an ongoing investigation, and I don't know when it will be completed," she said.

Fieck could not be reached for comment.

The school was relieved of his teaching duties, said the superintendent is under investigation.

The evolution question

AKRON, Ohio — A part-time instructor at Wright State Uni- versity was relieved of his teaching duties after he inserted a personal belief into a class on evolution, the school said Tuesday.

Curt Bowman, 49, of Springfield, diverted from the course curric-ulum by incorporating views of creationists, said Wright State University Provost Lawrence Fink.

Bowman, a religious studies teacher in the course dealing with the school, said he had no knowledge of the incident.

She said, "And his personal relig-ious views were offensive to some students."

Creationists, the Bible's ver- sion of how life began, says God created the Earth and all life in 4004 B.C.

Fink said the course was designed to explore the scientific basis for religions, as required by biology majors, No. Heard said.

Program provides variety

Foreign students exchange culture, share experiences

by Melanie Heider

Now Renting

"Now renting, foreign students exchange culture, share experiences. Choose from choice apartments within walking distance to MID AM MANOR. "

All interested families are encouraged to apply for a student, Heider said. After applications are accepted the families are screened to see if they meet the specifications, she added.

"The main qualification looked for in families is how much time and effort they are willing to put into a relationship with the student," Heider said.

Through her experience with the program, Heider said she has found that although the students are accepted in families they may be disappointed when the families and students are not compatible.

"The bond is so close that they remain friends forever," Carol Baidorf, Toledo representative of ASSE, said.

There are families in the program ranging from the traditional, with two parents and children, to single people living alone who like the company of another person.

Families are able to choose their student right down to their country and hobbies through letter packages, according to Christa Woolsey, a representative for ASSE. However, the students do not get to choose where they want to go, she added.

"Through her experience with the program, Baidorf said she has found that although the students can not choose the family the family may be disappointed when the families and students are not compatible.

"The bond is so close that they remain friends forever," Baidorf said.

There are currently 10 students in the Toledo area enrolled in this program, according to Carol Baidorf, the Toledo area representative for ASSE.

Baidorf has students placed in a variety of family situations, including her own. She is hosting an 18-year-old student from Japan.

Carolyn Carpinski is living with Baidorf in her Perrysburg home and attending St. John's High School in Toledo.

Baidorf will, volunteers at a local soup kitchen, enjoy playing soccer and being active in these activities are reasons he had such an easy time making friends, Carpinski said.

Carpinski said he has found many differences between the United States and Sweden.

"The main difference between here and home is that here, in school, there are strict rules," Carpinski said.

Carpinski also said there is less difference between students and teachers here.

The hardest thing for students to adjust to is the fact that it is difficult to do their best in school when they are not receiving credit, Baidorf said.

Although the students do not receive any credit for their visit, they are all good students with exceptional English skills and tend to take American studies like economics and American history, she said.

At the end of the visit, the student leaves with a one-year diploma and many friends.

"The bond is so close that they remain friends forever," Baidorf said.

Many times host families will end up over to their student's home country to visit, said.

When hosting a student, a family has to be financially responsible, according to Baidorf. Family students come to the United States, Baidorf said, to earn their own spending money, Woolsey said.

Woolsey is interested in hosting a student through the program every year. She 1-800-736-1760 for more information.

He will also address secretaries and fraternity students have regarding the greek unit. According to Gaspardino, Keim will confront students with why they originally joined their particular organization.

"Many college students will not want to miss," Gaspardino said.

Keim is originally from California and received his bache lor's and master's degree from the University of the Pacific in California. He received his doctorate degree from Oregon State University.

"I want to impact the lives of the students and audience members in a positive way," Keim said. "It is my hope to challenge them to think about their lives, and offer them a chance to laugh and reflect."

Keim holds a number of awards for excellence in teaching, advising and serving students in his particular unit. He is a member of Omega and Blue Key, and was named the outstanding graduate of the year at The Ohio State University.

Keim also has published a book called "The Education of Champs," and has various videos and articles that are available to greek students, according to Gaspardino.

Mystery writer will participate in book signing

by Robin Cox
News staff writer

An organization associated with the University Sorority will sponsor a guest speaker involved in the writing of the first of what will likely be a masterpiece of mystery literature. In writing some of the novels, the writer has shown his interest in seeing a woman in the role of a detective. "The novel has been nominated for an Edgar Award," said Dennis Taylor, a News staff writer. "This award is presented to a woman writer who has made a significant contribution to the mystery genre." The award will be presented on March 15th.

Muller has donated various items for the Peony Drive, which is an important part of the Campus Community. "This is a great way to raise money for the University," said Muller. "We are very grateful for their support." The Peony Drive was created to raise money for the University's student activities. "This award was created to recognize a faculty member, student, staff, or chapter director who made outstanding contributions to the mystery system," said Carrie Styflin, President of the Phi Taus. "This award will be presented to a woman writer who has made a significant contribution to the mystery genre." The award will be presented on April 15th.

The Panhellenic and Interfraternity councils hosted their annual awards banquet last night. President of the Peony Drive, Raymond K. Tucker, a professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, was honored with the Outstanding Alumni Award. Tucker has made a significant contribution to the University community, said Andrea Bowerman, President of the Panhellenic Council. "This award was created to recognize a faculty member, student, staff, or chapter director who made outstanding contributions to the mystery system," said Carrie Styflin, President of the Phi Taus. Protesters hold vigil to rally against high taxes

by Tony Keryn

CINCINNATI - With just two days left to the income tax filing deadline, protesters maintained an around-the-clock vigil outside the Federal Building and prepared for their annual "Taxed Enough Already" rally on Friday.

"If it takes pitching a tent for a week in front of the Federal Building and calling the White House to get the attention of legislators ... that's what we will gladly do," said organizer Brenda Kuhn.

The other Tea party members began their vigil Monday and were taking four-hour shifts, passing out pamphlets and urging motorists to "Honk If you are taxed enough already." Over the weekend they were talking to passers-by and planning a "day of action" on Monday, she said.

"We want greater accountability from politicians, and it is passionate about her crusade. But "If the people all come together, the government will look at us," she said.

"It's like people coming together and saying, 'We're not going to take it anymore,' " she said. "They're saying 'We're going to stand up and say no ... we're going to take back our lives back.'"

"It's a way to get our message out there. People are organizing, networking, and doing something."

"It's been very exciting getting the word out, getting folks involved, and talking to people and realizing there are a lot of others out there," she said.

"We need to make sure we get the message out there and get it in the hands of the people," she said.

"If there's less money for groceries and less money to do things with the kids we'll go out for a few hours," she said.

"If Burch was there, it's all part of the campaign," "Voinovich told reporters.

But Burch, who already has the Ohio AFL-CIO and United Auto Workers in his corner, faces a primary challenge from Peter Phillips, a military man, and a challenge from the Ohio Democratic Party if he seeks a four-year term in 1996.

"If the people get up off their dead duffs, we can do this," Duff said.

"We have the money to make a difference," she said.

"It's not enough to just say, 'We're taxed enough already.' You have to get involved and start doing something about it," Duff said.

Kosar signs with Dolphins

DAVIE, Fla. — Bernie Kosar was 31 years old when he signed a two-year contract Wednesday with the Miami Dolphins. He will be the backup quarterback in Miami behind Dan Marino.

"It's exciting and an honor for me to come back home here," Kosar said at a news conference. "It's been always been special in my heart." kosher said.

Kosar, 31, a six-time Pro Bowl selection who signed as a free agent with Miami on Sunday, said he signed four games last season and played in six.

"It's a guy I've always had a lot of respect for," Kosar said.

Kosar played with the Cleveland Browns for six years. He was bested by the Browns last October when a pair of his young daydreams (one in the last 13 months, which is one game) as the Browns accepted the Dolphins offer.

Kosar led the Hurricanes to the national championship as a sophomore in 1983, then turned pro after his junior year. The former Miami star has been an effective coordinator, steering his team well.

"If I was a single guy, the decision-making process would have been a little different," he said. "It's an awesome honor when you've worked so hard your whole life and to even know that you are trailing in the last game and get a win. That's why I love this game."

Kosar, who are neighbors of the Dolphin's training facility in Davie, was welcomed by Miami's starting quarterback Dan Marino.

"Hank, we're honored to have you here," Marino said.

Vice, Florida on Wednesday. Kosar signed a two-year contract but his salary was not disclosed.

With the Dolphins, Kosar will team with Dan Marino. The opportunity that lies ahead for Kosar is going to be pretty fun."
White House honors Olympians

by Matt Tannen

WASHINGTON — After providing tears, thrills and the most controversy, athletes crowded into the east wing of the White House after an eventful year to be honored.

"You are the embodiment of what the rest of us try to create every day," President Clinton told nearly 300 American athletes gathered in the east wing of the White House Wednesday night.

"The 15 American Olympic medalists and 14 medal winners from the Paralympic team attended the ceremony. They were to be honored again during a hokey ceremony Wednesday night that Clinton planned to attend.

Among those absent was figure skater Tonya Harding, who was told by the USOC last week she would not be invited after pleading guilty last month to a conspiracy charged in the Jan. 6 attack on fellow skater Nancy Kerrigan. Kerrigan, who suffered tears, thrills and the most controversy, athletes crowded into the east wing of the White House after an eventful year to be honored.
