ACG campus examination continues

Editor's note: The following is part three of a series on campus groups that received money from the student-paid fee last month.

This series is attempting to not only answer questions concerning various funding criteria used by the Advisory Committees on General Fee Allocations, but also the functions of some of the campus groups that received general fee funds.

Many of the student groups that received ACG campus money this month are promoting the campus with a wide range of programming.

Groups on the World Student Union, the Latino Student Union, Campus Escort Service, Resident Student Association and the Kurdish minority have been busy planning multiples of diverse programs for the students of the University.

This month, which received $10,000 from ACG, provided events throughout this week, which has been designated "International Week." Some of the programs include a tennis tournament, international coffee hour and a karaoke night.

The group is also having an international dinner Saturday, at which different foods from all over the world may be sampled.

Another event presented by WSA is the "International Festival," which takes place every fall semester, according to Jean Hoang, the president of the group.

"Every semester we organize two dance parties, a welcome party, Oktoberfest, Hungary, party and a Valentine's Day party," he said.

The group, which consists of 20 board members and 200 to 300 international students, as well as the rest of the University community, also does co-operations with other groups, like the Japanese coffee hour, which WSA co-sponsored with the Japanese Club, and community service projects, Chung said.

"Right now we are in the process of starting an international section at the Wood County Library," he said, adding that they are trying to get the library to donate space where they can put purchased and donated books about different cultures of the world.

WSA has also donated a lot of money to charity, much of which is seen ACG, page three.

E.A.R. to the Ground...

The University masses have spoken, and Uncle Paul gets an editorial cannon squarely on his presidential pride.

We’re talking about the recent BG News survey that asked if the newly-completed classroom building should be named for Mr. Olscamp. According to 43 percent of faculty/staff members and 65 percent of students, that choice should be listed in The History of the Commonly Banned Just under New Coke.

That got the cynics at E.A.R. to the Ground wondering. Do you have any idea what the Readership Land has any bright ideas for naming our newest structure?

If so, we’ll be glad to hear from you. If we get enough responses, and you can keep them relatively clean, we might even be persuaded to publish them.

Senator Barron’s report on the March 26, 1994, edition of The BG News has been biased against the African People’s Association (APA).

According to Barron’s article, the APA is a college campus group on whose behalf student ברור is said to be writing a paper on the history of the black student movement.

The funding criteria employed by the ASU is available to all student groups, but this particular student group seems to be a real minority group.

Senators踊跃 in the resulting controversy. We would like to point out to Mr. Barron that the APA has done their homework properly, and it would have been difficult for him to know this. University regulations require every group involved with student awareness and funding to have stated goals and objectives.

The organizations are questioned by University authorities because each has different goals and objectives.

A book about Lucas County history in the winning entry in the second annual Local History Publication Award competition sponsored by the Center for Archival Collections at the University.

The short paperback published by the Watervliet Historical Society is titled "A History of the Colburn House." It won a $500 cash award. Dave Britton, chairman of the public history program at the University of Toledo, and Toledo graduate student Susan Blumenbach, Deborah King and Tracey McClary are the co-authors of the winning publication.

"I was particularly pleased on the recognition the [history] program is receiving as a result of the contest," Britton said.

"The focus is now on the students and the program." To be considered for recognition, publications must deal with the local history, geographically defined as the 19 northwest Ohio counties, which include the Firelands and Maumee Valley regions.

Professors explore reflective thought

by Kat Simmons
News staff writer

A University professor has collaborated with a University of Denver professor on a book about the development of reflective thinking from adolescence to adulthood.

Patricia King, acting chairman and professor for King higher education and student affairs at the University, and co-author of the book, said the book was written during a graduate seminar at the University of Minnesota. The two authors decided that there was a need for clarification, or better detail, in the development of young adults.

"The book that came from this decision, "Developing Reflective Thinking from Adolescence to Adulthood," focuses on the question of how students think and react to complex issues," King said. "This stems from King's idea that college-level students believe differently about presenting issues than those students in high school, and these differences should be recognized.

The material in the book varies according to the different audience addressed. "On the level of the faculty audience, the book is made to make them understand that the process of teaching is different from the processes of learning. In the professional literature, in accordance to adolescence, is actually a developmental process," King said.

"In other words, you can't teach this to people in a freshman course and expect the students to grasp the information.

Another audience King addressed in her book are those students in the upper division. These individuals involved with the research behind the book realized to realize the demonstration of the improvement of reflective thinking.

The book is designed to lay out the progression of development in a set of seven stages. The seven stages are an expansion and a broadening of the research and work of other theorists. These seven stages are the make up of the original idea created by the two authors into a Reflective- Judgment Model.

Chapter obtains house off campus

by Courtney B. Sargent
News staff writer

The campus group grows 12 women last fall when the fraternity我当时屋 moved into University-owned property on South Prospect Street.

The fraternity has been working for four years, and their persistence paid off this month when the newers received a letter from the office of Michael Ver- ter, assistant vice president of student affairs, confirming the chapter's acceptance of its request for Greek housing, said Todd Kistman, assistant for Phi Sigma Kappa.

"We're very excited," Kistman said. "We're hoping that the newers received our letter and that the chapter will get its charter sooner rather than later." Kistman said the chapter's charter was pending because the fraternity and a house di- vision were still working on the building of the house at 120 S. Prospect. Kistman said. "There's no doubt that the chapter will have its charter before the end of this month. The chapter is required to get its charter before the end of this month before it can be named.'

These chapters choose to join the house when the house is off campus because it becomes available, according to John Smith, assistant director of greek life. "When we have a house, the chapter," Smith said. "If we don't have a house, the chapter," Smith said. "If we don't have a house, the chapter is always a working chapter." Smith said.

Junior Falcons to play big boys

by Katie Dotrem
News staff writer

All area children between the ages of six and 16 will be given the opportunity to meet and work with their favorite Falcon football player at the fourth annual Junior Falcon Day on Saturday.

The Bowling Green Falcons Football Program will once again be hosting this year's activities for all children eager to meet their favorite Falcons players and coaches, and to learn some basic football concepts with the help of BGSU coaches.

The day begins at 10:45 a.m. for the participants, when they sign in and receive a Junior Falcon Day t-shirt.

After checking in at Perry Stadium and heading with head coach Gary Gilchrist, the kids then go through some basic football drills with the team and throughout the day engage in various competitions, in- cluding passing and punting highlight films from last year and end the day with a hot dog lunch and the players and staff.

"We get the kids out there with our players and put them through some basic demolitions and drills—nothing too strict—and we just have a lot of fun with them," said Terry Malone, as- sistant football coach and director of Junior Falcon Day.

During the program the kids gain the opportunity to work one-on-one with their favorite positions and player on both the offensive and defensive side of the team.

"We have a lot of fun watching the younger kids trying to do some of the things our players are doing," Malone said. "Some- times we tend to think our players get a bigger kick out of it then some of the kids—we all have a great time."

This year the program at Bowling Green originated four years ago through Blackney, who had done something similar when he was at the Ohio State University.

The first year turn out was a mere 20 children, probably due to the snow on the ground. Attendance now is more than 145 children, which was the attendance last year.

Leader addresses cultural variety

by John Stine

Ohio governor leaders will John Gar, George Voin-orich in Columbus today to address a cultural diversity issues at the second "Governor's Challenge Conference."

The conference's theme, "Democratic Diversity: Removing the Barriers," promotes equal opportunity and social justice in Ohio communities, according to Michelle Buemi, spokes- woman for the Department of Administrative Services.

"It brings community leaders together and talks about plans of action to improve cultural diversity," Buemi said.

As many as 240 repre- sentatives from across the state are expected to attend the conference.

The University faculty mem- bers Jon Lowe and Jack Taylor will be in attendance as well.

Lowe, who also serves as chairman of the Bowling Green Human Relations Commission, said he was very excited about the event.

"It's been long overdue. It's the city be- coming more diverse, and along with the problems and opportunities that go with it, it's very exciting," Lowe said.

While Bowling Green has had gradual improvements in population, much more needs to be done, he said.

Restaurant chain parts with Big Boy

by Trudy Tys
The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — The Big Boy needs to grow up, says a New England restaurant chain that's replacing the burger-eating kid in red-checkered overalls with a woman.

Abdow Corp., the region's last Big Boy franchise holder, has dropped its affiliation with the Michigan-based Elite Bros. chain that now holds the rights to the franchise fee, "George Abdow said Thursday.

The chain's 985 restaurants concentrated in the Midwest and South, said Tony Michaels, vice president for marketing for Elite in Warren, Mich. He confirmed Abdow's decision.

"We've been with the little guy for 30 years and you get kind of fond of him," he said. "But we've grown up."
Track travels to Miami
by John Boyle
Sports news writer
Ohio's best 15 men's and women's track teams will descend upon Ohio's campus this weekend for the All-Ohio Track and Field Championships. The goals for BG's two entries are different. The women will try to win their fourth consecutive All-Ohio title while the men hope to finish in the top five.

The women's title chase should come down to BG and Ohio. The Bobcats are the only team in Ohio that gave the Falcons problems, head coach Steve Price said. "We haven't been able to beat Ohio University," Price said. "It's the one fly in the ointment at the moment." The Falcons hope to go out and make a leap in their rivalry this year -- they're strong in every event. "We're doing well outdoors, but isn't quite where she was indoors," he said.

Someone who is producing better than far in the indoor season is sophomore distance runner Tracey Last. Last placed fourth in the Mid-American Conference cross country meet last fall which earned her all league honors. "Tracey Last is having a wonderful year," Price said. "She has the best time in the MAC in the 3000m (9:59.37) at this point."

Nikki Hurrleman and Jesse Meador also figure to be big meets for the Falcons. Meador, the team's best all-around athlete, should place in multiple events. Price said. Sturrupman is the top fresman shot putter in all of Ohio, Price added."We're hoping for our best team performance of the year," men's head coach Dick Stith said heading into this weekend's meet. BG's best performance, however, might not guarantee them a first place finish. "I'm hoping for an improvements and being competitive within the top five," Price said. "It's going to be tough because Miami is very strong and Ohio State, of course, is one of the top five teams," Stith said.

Frustrated? This is the way the Bowling Green softball team is feeling right now. Having games canceled against Miami of Ohio and the University of Dayton this week, the team can't help but wonder about the start to their season. "It's a tough situation for us," coach Rachel Miller said. "Now all we need to do is actually play a game."

The Falcons will try to accomplish this goal Friday at home against Akron. Two games are scheduled for Friday starting at 2 p.m., followed by another doubleheader on Saturday beginning at noon. The Eagles softball program is only in its third year of existence. They do have an excellent record, though, despite their season. Akron, as far as April 11, was 5-4 in the Mid-American Conference and 13-5 overall. "Their program is coming along strong," Miller said.

"We can't wait to show our stuff at home."

The Falcons are coming into the weekend with a 1-3 conference record and 4-6 overall. "Our girls are ready to go," Miller said. "It has been more frustrating than anything else that we haven't been able to play." A bright spot on the team has been Jennifer Wolf. She is fourth in the MAC with a 1.87 ERA and is second in strikeouts, ranking third in total in the MAC. "Wolf and Lisa Meador expect to be on the mound this weekend for the Falcons."

Junior catcher Kathy Kieland is leading the team in batting average with a .336 percentage, followed by Any Patterson at .333. "We can't wait to show our stuff at home," Miller said. "This is our season and I always anticipate wins at our place."

"I'm hoping for an improvements and being competitive within the top five," Price said. "It's going to be tough because Miami is very strong and Ohio State, of course, is one of the top five teams," Stith said.

Junior All-American Scott Thompson figures to be competitive, but BG's other hurdlers figure to be as well. "We can't wait to show our stuff at home," Rachel Miller, Softball

The Falcons are coming into the weekend with a 1-3 conference record and 4-6 overall. "Our girls are ready to go," Miller said. "It has been more frustrating than anything else that we haven't been able to play." A bright spot on the team has been Jennifer Wolf. She is fourth in the MAC with a 1.87 ERA and is second in strikeouts, ranking third in total in the MAC. "Wolf and Lisa Meador expect to be on the mound this weekend for the Falcons."

Junior catcher Kathy Kieland is leading the team in batting average with a .336 percentage, followed by Any Patterson at .333. "We can't wait to show our stuff at home," Miller said. "This is our season and I always anticipate wins at our place."

"Kallage and centerfielder Edie Reeder provided the offensive spark to back the complete game pitching of Kallage as the Falcons cruised to a 13-1 win in the opener. Reeder was the Big Cata-

In a tie for the leadoff position, nizing a steal, napping four hits, scoring four runs and staking ace. "Kallage had a great day," Schmitz said.

Schmitz added. "It would be nice to see a big crowd."

Someone apparently forgot to tell the BGU Rugby team that 13 was an unlucky number. Indeed, the only unlucky ones were the rest of the Mid-American Conference rugby teams as the Falcon ruggers won their 13th-straight tournament title.

Booting Green defeated a tough and determined Western Michigan squad 12-5 in the tournament final to win the championship of the Mr. Spots Mid-American Conference Club Rugby Tournament. In the preliminary matches, the Falcons cruised Ohio University 45-10, beat Central Michigan 19-10 and edged Kent State 5-4 to earn a berth in the finals.

Centurion Brett Buffa of the Athletic Department for giving the rugby club permission to plug the holes in a dike. As he said, "We felt like little kids trying to plug the holes in a dike. As soon as we would plug one hole, another one would open up and the water was just pouring through the dike."

Among the key players were Todd's conversion, the Falcons had Ohio University in the championship Sunday against Central Michigan, BG found its footing to drive over their smaller BG counterparts. At the same time, the Falcons backed off the ground too transversely to permit much lateral movement, Fiber optics and 1995 graduate, then hit wing Kurt Burghardt, "Give our backs a dry field and we'll knock the socks off anyone," team captain Doug Sinclair said.

Against Central Michigan, BG faced an opponent playing for pride as well as the MAC title. In 21 attempts, the Chippewas had three field goals to make the score 12-0 at halftime. The Falcons scored 13 points in the second half with a quick one-two punch early in the half when Tod, fly half Jeff Kamnitzer, anchors Craig Pesq and Buffa all added tries and Tod booted two more conversions in the 34th whitewash.

"It was our backs a dry field and we'll knock the socks off anyone," team captain Doug Sinclair said.

The semifinal against Ohio University Saturday was an even closer game of 10-4 as Buffa had a hard time getting the balls in the open through a gaping hole and fed a plucking Bronco Horner who cut the score to 4-0 and the outside, Hornor, a 1990 BG graduate, then hit wing Kurt Burghardt guttering back to the tee for his sixth try. Tod's conversion kick made the final score 12-5. BG is now 13-1 and will travel to Columbus to compete in the Ohio Championshio Tournament this weekend. The Falcons are defending champions, winning this tournament a record 13th straight tournament title.

"We're looking for everybody to have their best day and play through theups and downs against Ball State," head coach Dave Martin said.

Playing back-to-back games is sometimes the difficulty of winning both contests. The Falcons are looking at Ball State first and worrying about Western Michigan this weekend. "We talked about taking it one at a time, playing Ball State first and then worrying about Western Michigan," Martin said. "The guys know that we have two matches ahead of us."
Moon traded, Rypien dropped

By Jim Everett

The Associated Press

What has free agency and a salary cap in common? Just ask Mark Rypien, the MVP in the 1992 Super Bowl and now in search of a job. Or Warren Moon, traded after losing his seat to the playoffs seven straight years.

Rypien was cut by the Wash-ington Redskins on Wednesday, while Moon was about to be sent from Houston to Minnesota for a pair of draft picks. Because Rypien also changed teams, the Redskins are able to sign him for a two-year contract.

Rypien, who like the Redskin has led the franchise since the NFL expanded to 32 teams in 1976, made $2 million with Cleveland the past two seasons, but was let go after declining to take a salary cut from $3 million to $1 million.

Washington, once one of the NFL's highest paying teams, gets $2 million more with either losing or at least another $1 million by cutting Charlesinnis, Howie Long, Tim Cartwright, and Art Monk. The Skins added the Browns are in-

Carlton denies remarks

NEW YORK - Steve Carlton's denial of anti-Semitic remarks attributed to him in a magazine article is good enough for the American Jewish Congress.

David V. Kahn, president of the AJC welcomed Carlton's statement disavowing a number of inflammatory statements attributed to the pitcher in Philadelphia Magazine, and said the organization would no longer oppose Carlton's induction into the baseball Hall of Fame.

"In fact, nothing short of a full and unequivocal retraction of all defamatory statements Carlton made in the article could have done more to show his understanding of the importance of such remarks to Jews and Gentiles alike," Kahn said in a statement issued Thursday.

Carlton went on to say that "I have never faced competition like this."

Carlton's case can be Interpreted as offensive remarks attributed to "The Elders of Zion and the millions of Americans who believe in keeping with their tradition, so does Mr. Carlton's ball embodies our best American truth in it. I reject it completely. It is wrong about my baseball career, my personal beliefs, my family life, and my new hometown. There are so many errors that it would be foolish to try to correct them individually.

Balding has its setbacks

Victor has my underwear

by Joe Pefifer

Ah, springtime. Birds frolicking in the newly sprung leaves, lovers holding hands in the warm moonlight and snow. Yes, kids, snow. In April, it’s been a weird one these last couple of weeks here in the hill-less city.

This week’s adventure begins innocently enough at that other phallic building on campus. That’s right, I went to the library. And I’m writing about it to tell others it’s okay. I ventured to the bookstalls in a vein attempt to garner knowledge for my cool Jerry Garcia cardboard-lookin’ English teacher.

After finding my copy of Hunter S. Thompson’s latest adventures, I became aware that my bladder was about to let loose. After about 10 minutes of searching, I stumbled upon the best kept excretory secret in all of the hill-less city. The first floor men’s bathroom in the library is a virtual smorgasbord of urinal and toilet fun. How do I go, oh Lord, let me count the ways. I hoisted my bookbag high upon my left shoulder and slapped up to the far left urinal with the confidence of a Kennedy facing a rape total. Hey guys, ever try to urinate with a bookbag hanging from one shoulder? Thought not. It wasn’t pretty. Lesson #1 - set your bag on the sink and you won’t get urine on the kids next to you.

Exiting the freshly caulked restroom, I decided it was time to cut my losses and go home. On the way out, I spied a virtual library goddess. She looked at me and at her. It was magic. I wanted to take her to the reserve room and catalog her cards. I wanted to take her to one of those study carousels and find out how she organized her Dewey decimal system. All of this ran through my head while I was searching to leave Bookville. Then, WHAAAAM!!! Reality reared its ugly head in the form of a cold steel turnstile bar attack to the groin. In the process of engaging in my my-sque life, I was again reminded that the turnstiles in the library only turn one way.

Lesson #2 - When trying to impress girls, talk first and fantasy later.

So I’m home now and I get a phone call from the infamous Shannon Wolf.

“Hey, we’re going out, wanna come?” she asked.

Nursing my swollen groin, I ventured out into the chill of a Wednesday. “Uh, Joe, it’s Wednesday. Do you think it’s very bright to go out on a Wednesday?” my beloved roommates George asked.

“George, pal, I hurl my groin and my pride. In male terms, I have to sound sincere. I have to suffer from male-pattern baldness. I suffer from male-pattern baldness, so I say ‘Hello, you unbeautiful woman, I am bald.’”

“I wait for Shonda’s magic finger, but I am paralyzed. I say ‘Shonda, no matter what you do, I will never walk into the library again. I will never have a real relationship because you are so beautiful. I want to be with you, Shonda. I want to be with you forever. I want to be with you every day of the week.”

Shonda stopped directly behind my chair, and I swear I stop breathing. It wasn’t pretty. Lesson #3 - When trying to impress Shonda, don’t mention that you are bald.

“Shonda, I’ve been thinking about you. I’ve been thinking about you every day of the week. I can’t stop thinking about you. I can’t stop thinking about you. I can’t stop thinking about you.” Shonda said.

I’m sucking on a cinnamon Pez.

It wasn’t pretty. Lesson #1 - set your bag on the sink and you won’t get urine on the kids next to you.

So we went to the place where they call it “Wild Wednesday.” The place where the ladybugs are 50 cents and the women that dance to Snoop Dogg are ... well ... it was everyone’s favorite dance club and that night it was Utopia.

The Wolf got herself a 20 oz. cup of heaven and I had, well ... a cup of ... Joe. Been walking all semester to use that one.

I grabbed a table and quickly began conversing with a fine young vixen.

“Hey, young lady, how do you get Jordan Michael Dorfman out of Major League Baseball?” I asked, thinking this was an especially witty way to lure vixen.

“You gotta tell her mother. I’ve heard that one a million times. Beat it kids,” she said.

Meanwhile, Wolf was carrying on a conversation with a man who only identified himself as “Victor.” This name will become very important in a couple of inches.

As the night wore on I wandered around and finally settled into a table with a couple of kids from English classes past.

“Victor” thought the decision to bring Hamilton should be bogged like a hamlet in 1st century. I observed, acting like I was going to graduate in the ‘90s.

“Cron man, he’s pretty cool for a guy who talks with a lisp. He wears tights and ice dances,” yelled a man from across the bar.

“Yeah and I bet he saw Kerrigan naked during the Olympics, that’s pretty cool,” said a bystander.

And the debate raged on. Until a stereophonic mid-wandered over to tell my former classmate that he was too drunk to be in the bar.

Let me say that again, this guy was locked out for being too drunk in A BAR. To me this is like being kicked out of a restaurant for being too fat.

So with this development I decided to walk home. I was walking because I lent Wolf my red Escort otherwise known as “The Red Station.”

Twenty Questions...

Brother Jed

You see him on campus every so often, preaching his version of The Word, getting people all riled up. That’s right, we’re talking about Brother Jed. We caught up to Jed, tackled him and forced him to sit through one of our infamous interviews.

You have a picture of Bowling Green on the back of your new book. Why did you pick Bowling Green?

Well, because it was a ... uh ... I thought it was a good picture sorta representing my ministry. That’s Cool. How much is it going for?

It normally goes for $10.1 give it to students for five bucks.

Okay. What prompted you to write the book?

I wanted to get my message out. That’s a good way of getting your message out.

What kind of royalties are you receiving?

That’s rather personal.

Why do you call yourself Brother Jed? Why not Father Jed?

Or something like that?

Well that’s commonplace among evangelical Christians. We address one another as brother. We’re all one family under God.

Sports fan?

I’m a fan of the Chicago White Sox. In basketball I like the Indiana University Hoosiers and I’m just not much of a football fan.

Bobby Knight throwing the chair ... what’s up with that?

Dramatics -- part of the game, uh ... get angry lot of pressure.

Are the White Sox gonna win the World Series?

I believe they’ve got a good chance of that.

Yeah, if they weren’t in the Cleveland Indians’ division. This way of doing things seems to be more confrontational. Do you ever fear that you turn more people off than you reach?

Yes, I know I am. When it comes right down to it Jesus turned a lot of people off and they tried to kill him on more than one occasion before they succeeded. The truth has always turned most people off because they don’t want to live it. Isn’t there a better way to do it?

A less controversial way?

There’s an easier way to do it. I could water my message down and get quite a personal following. But then I would no longer be proclaiming the truth.

Ever think of TV?

What? TV ... you know television. Ever think of doing a television show?

That’s uh, uh, something I’ve considered for the future. I don’t really have the financial base of support to do that. But I get on T.V. a lot. I get a lot of uh, news coverage. I’ve been on the Donahue show and uh, the Sally Jessy Raphael show.

Your friend over there, Brother Paul. He called Sally Jessy Raphael a whacked whore. Is she?

I’d like to have you ask Paul that. Sally Jesse or Donahue?

Oh, I much prefer Donahue. Sally Jessy is very arrogant woman. Character factors aside, I don’t like her personality. Phil does have a personality, I’ll have to admit. I don’t like his politics, his views or his character. But he does have an intriguing personality.

What about Sally’s glasses?

I don’t really have any comment on that.

Okay. Out of all the students here, percentage wise, how many are going to hell?

I’d say at least 95 percent of ’em.

Why?

Because they’re not serving the Lord.

Kid in the Cubs hat is definitely going to hell, eh Jed? Are they all going to hell for the same reason?

Or is it a variety of reasons?

Basically they’re all going because they are selfish. You know some of them express their selfishness by getting drunk, some express their selfishness through love of money.

What do you think of that new Zima?

The new Zima? It’s a clear malt beverage. It’s very refreshing, crisp.

I don’t know.

What do you think of David Koresh? Do you think he got a raw deal?

I’m careful about judging people by the media. A lot of things I say are taken out of context. I question whether he was a true Christian, but he had a right to his own religion. I think (Attorney General) Janet Wacko Reno is a mass murderer.

What do you think of homosexuals?

Well, I’ve never met a happy queer in my life. I like to call them the miserable.

What’s your favorite movie?

I like Chariots of Fire. I like the movie The Natural.

What do you think about Spielberg getting robbed for so many years then finally coming through on Schindler’s List?

A few students take time out from Brother Jed’s spiel to read their favorite publication.

I’ve never seen any of his movies.

What do you think about women that go out and work? Do think that is acceptable?

As a general rule for married women, no not for married women. I think being a wife and a mother is a full time occupation. If you could give any advice to Bill Clinton what would it be? Resign. Who would you like to see be president? Ollie North. Did Lee Harvey Oswald act alone?

I have no reason to doubt the findings of the Warren commission. Do you have any good jokes?

No.

BOWLING GREEN
Stanley learns a lesson

Worth the Watch

by Todd Stanley

As you’re reading this article, I bet I know exactly what you’re thinking. You’re thinking, “gee, that Todd fella must spend a lot of time at the newspaper, working his butt off to write these movie articles he has every single week.” O.K., so maybe that’s not even close to what you were thinking (probably wondering if I can write about anything other than movies, but I’m going to tell you about my job anyway. I spend about four hours a week, a little over two hours on the rough draft on my word processor, and a little under two hours on the second draft on the newspaper computers, putting my articles together. This, needless to say, does not take up my entire week. But my editor, on the other hand, Mr. DeRatley—if you can, is in the newsroom no matter what time I walk in to do my article, whether it be day or night. I always wondered what could be taking up so much of his time (I assumed he was hiding from the police or some sort of Bill collector), but after seeing The Paper, I began to see that the life of an editor is not an easy one. So Scott, this review is dedicated to you (although I bet the police are after him for something). The Paper—24 hours in the life of an editor for a second-rate New York City newspaper. Henry (Michael Keaton) is a man being stretched between his pregnant wife (Marisa Tomei), his bosses (Glenn Close and Robert Duval), a potential better job that he doesn’t want, and his deadline for the paper, like he’s being drawn and quartered. The newspaper business is shown as a hectic and nerve rattling. Henry must organize dozens of reporters who bleat and fight like children, and then be able to get a decent story out of them by the end of the day. The weird thing is that Henry loves it, he eats it up and is in for more.

The main conflict centers around two black youths who are accused of murdering a white businessman (sounds more exciting than the crap that goes on in this town, like getting arrested for whistling in a parking lot). Henry knows the story is wrong, but he only has six hours to prove it and get it printed to beat the other papers. In the meantime, there are a few other storylines dealing with Marisa Tomei not wanting to become Just another housewife, Robert Duval dealing with his failing health and reconciliation with his estranged daughter, and Glenn Close trying to live a life that she cannot afford.

Larry Hansen, journalist, the span, bullfighter, dancer and winner, could be yours. That’s right ladies, win a night on the town with our own answer to Gray Gantham. We’re not promising that he’s going to put out or anything, but he’s a lover and a fighter and you can do with him what you wish if you get highest score in the latest Insider quiz.

Just before I left, Wolf approached me and said “Victor” was going to drive my car home to her place.

Fast forward to Thursday morning where I was getting some shut eye after my morning radio show. The phone rings.

“Hey, it’s Wolf, and she says it’s important,” George said as he threw the phone at my head.

“Uh, Joe, did you drive your car home last night?” she asked.

“No, Wolf, why do you ask?” I said.

“Are you sure?” she said.

“Yes,” I said. Getting worried with this line of questioning.

“Well, I think Victor has your car,” she said.

“Have a man named Victor steal my car?” I asked incredulously. “Wolf, you watch soap operas, right?” I asked.

“Joe, she said.

“What’s the bad guy’s name in every soap opera?” Victor,” she said rather sheepishly.

“Exactly.”

As it turns out Victor took off with about 30 dollars of Wolf’s money, her apartment keys, my car keys, and ultimately, my car. The worst part is all my spring break clothes were in “The Station.” So as I am writing this I am wearing no underwear.

Lesson #3—Never trust a man named Victor.

Just when I was really starting to feel sorry for myself, a 10-year-old boy rolled by in a wheelchair. And I thought, God, what am I doing sitting here whining about my inability to urinate in a straight line, my ability to impress girls, and my stolen car? I mean this kid couldn’t even walk. Sure puts things into perspective. Then the little bastard ran over my foot.

One-Act Play Festival will run two nights

by Melinda C. Monhart
thespians magnet

It is time once again for the University theatre department's annual One-Act Play Festival. With a combination of seven plays on two separate bills, this festival brings along a variety of scripts that carry the tradition of Elsewhere productions experimental theatre.

Each of the play bills runs for two nights. The first run is April 13 and 15. Starting off those evenings will be "Calm Down Mother," written by Megan Terry and directed by graduate student. This feminist play features three women who are exploring mother-daughter relationships. The women are played by Kim Schroeder, Nina Pulito and Kimberly Catalano.

Next is "Freezer Bum," an original script by theatre graduate student Mark Burnette, directed by April Hubbard, theatre graduate. This original comedy combines cyborgs and cartoons in a bizarre search for one woman's personal identity. This cast includes Ryan Deheer, Barbara Niford and Cante A. Stremo.

Rounding out the second bill of one-acts is "The Sneeze," adapted from plays and stories of Chekhov by Michael Frayn, directed by Chang-Mel Vivian Chu, theatre graduate student. This play features cast members Bryan Eno, Chris Rohner, Matthew Gray, Judy Gerdeman and Mary Spady.

The One-Act Play Festival takes place in 411 South Hall with all shows starting at 8 p.m. All tickets are $2 and are only available at the door.

Glen Lubbert takes you on a journey to a sex induced future

Good evening. These are the words of Lust. In the next few minutes, we will take you into another world — to a world of electronics, spirit and meditation. Turn off the light, take a deep breath and relax. Start to move slowly, very slowly. Let the monitor be your guiding light.

You have now entered the world of on-line communication where intimacy and interaction are just a phone connection away. This is a world where your fantasies become reality and your imagination becomes your truth. You have entered a world where sexual stimulation is yours for the asking.

Perhaps you need some guidance or maybe you are confused. You have entered a world of computer communication where sexual relationships run rampant. This is a world where people meet via bulletin boards and discuss their innermost fantasies in the anonymity of the faceless computer screen.

This world is available to you at any University computer or in the privacy of your own home with the addition of a modem. This world works within the framework of the Internet, the worldwide information highway.

Reading the Usenet groups with titles such as alt.sex, alt.sex.erotic, alt.sex.binaries.pictures.erotica.female, alt.sex.bondage, alt sex.bestiality and alt.sex.stories you view stories about other people’s sexual fantasies, or post your own fantasies for others to read. You also may acquire sexually explicit photographs to view in order to help visualize your sexual fantasies.

It is a world with stories which know no bounds with postings entitled “Hot, Wet, Wild, and Sweaty,” “Family Lust,” “Beach Vacation” and “The Sleepover,” among pages and pages of others. They are posted in these Usenet groups in lists of titles that attempt to entice you with their seductive titles and detailed abbreviated descriptions. For example, “Hot, Wet, Wild, and Sweaty,” is accompanied by the description mff, mff, mf, ff, fff, sweat, 69, group, fast and “Beach Vacation,” describes itself with the abbreviations mf, ff, anal, ben-wa balls, food etc.

The stories can begin with a short description as did the “Hot, Wet, Wild, and Sweaty” selection. “This is a description of a VERY hot, wet, experience I had with three women that lasted for several hours. If you like anything involving mud, oil, sweat and oral sex (don't we all :-)) then you might like this. I've written in the present tense, because it helps me re-live it when I read this. The names have been changed to protect the people involved.”

Notice the :-) symbolism used in the description. This is one of the common ways to communicate in a world where verbal communication is non-existent. The symbol is a smiling face if viewed from the side and shows happiness or satisfaction, depending upon the situation.

This type of communication is very effective when it is done in “real time” in which a person types directly to another. While this is limited on the Internet, there are other worlds that offer such a forum.

National services such as America On-Line, CompuServe and Prodigy offer such “chat rooms.” The most explicit is America On-Line (AOL), which offers rooms with subjects entitled Single Again, Romance, Flirting, Nook and Gay and Lesbian. As with the other two, AOL also allows you to download pictures. However, they are censored in that no frontal nudity is permitted.

If you are not interested in venturing off on your own into the national services, you can stay in the warm, safe environment of the Internet with a system called the WELL. This California based system admits its users to explore all the aspects that the Usenet story group allowed, in addition to creating real time chatting.

“The WELL has two of two hundred areas that focus on sex,” Gail Williams, Conferencing Manager, said in an e-mail message to Insider.

“One is sex (which is also the place for people who wish to exchange lists of people interested in sex) and the other is for people who want a more intimate setting.”
“This a description of a VERY hot, wet, experience I had with three women that lasted for several hours. If you like anything involving mud, oil, sweat and oral sex (don't we all :-)) then you might like this.”

Kitty is a 19 year-old college student, with black hair down to her waist and brown, twinkling eyes. As a dancer, she has a tight, trim body with the exception of pendulous breasts that look almost too big for her 5'2" tall frame. Iceman is a 5' 11" tall high school senior of 18 years. He has shoulder-length blond hair and hazel eyes. Iceman has a muscular build and plays Lacrosse, weighing about 190 lbs.

The ensuing description details their real time conversation in which the two work out their sexual frustrations with each other. Many times the two respond with posts of :-) They talk of "one-handed typing" and "busy fingers." And by the end, the two are exhausted.

Iceman ends his session with these prophetic words: "BTW, real men don't post anonymously. :)

While this may be Iceman's fantasy come true, it is not what some readers want posted in the Usenet group. As long as there are no illegal activities, Hoy said the Internet is free to all ideas.

"It's all very new to us," Hoy said. "We have not been heavily involved in the network and we will deal with the problems as they present themselves."
The ‘sequel brothers’ fall a bit short

Worth the Watch

by Todd Stanley

Famous actors who also happen to be siblings is a long Hollywood tradition. From our very own Lilian and Dorothy Gish who ruled the silent screen, to Joan Fontaine and Olivia de Havilland whose rivalry was legendary, and on to Warren Beatty and Shirley MacLaine who both won Oscars in the eighties.

The current generation of sibling actors is quite abundant. There’s the Baldwin brothers; Alec, William, Stephen, and Daniel, the Bridge’s Jeff and Beau, John and Joan Cusack, and Rosanna and Patricia Arquette, just to name a few. Probably one of the best known are Charlie Sheen and Emilio Estevez, sons of actor Martin Sheen. These two have recent sequels, both having to do with sports, competing at the box office. Charlie is reprising his role of Ricky Vaughn in Major League 2, while Emilio gives coaching hockey another run as Gordon Bombay in D2: The Mighty Ducks Are Back. Both flicks can be summed up in one word; predictable. Neither movie tries to hide which direction the movie is heading or do they try to throw any surprises the audience’s way.

Major League 2 takes place the season after the original. Most of the cast is back (except for Wesley Snipes whose Willie Hayes character is played by Omar Epps). Fame seems to have gone to everyone’s head after winning the pennant but losing in the AL playoffs the year before. Sheen has traded in his Wild Thing image for a more respectable but boring personality. Hayes is back, but is now coaching, and even Rene Russo, Berenger’s girlfriend from the first film, is back in a pleasant uncredited cameo. New players include Rube, a rookie catcher who can throw anyone out at any base, but can’t throw the ball back to the pitchers mound. Kamikaze Tanaka, a samurai warrior from the Japanese leagues who keeps knocking himself out by running into the outfield wall, and Parkman (David Keith), a cocky catcher who is the team’s jerk, being traded to their rivals the White Sox (since the Yankees are no longer a worthy adversary) who they end up playing in the AL playoffs again. Just like last time, the team starts out very slow, having trouble winning two games in a row, then finds the inspiration to make an impossible comeback. Brother Emilo is In just as unoriginal a sequel, this time coaching the U.S. Junior hockey team after an injury knocks him out of his own professional hockey career. Most of his players are back too, with the addition of a Hispanic speciality who doesn’t know how to stop, a Texan puck-handler who roves people on the ice, a girl golfer that lets nothing by, and a street kid whose specialty is the bruiseable puck. Their adversaries are the ice-land team whose coach has been taking bad guy lessons from the bald, German guy on ‘Hogan’s Heroes’. Emilo also lets fame go to his head, becoming more concerned with endorsements and winning than In having fun.

While watching these films, me and the person I was with kept whispering to each other what was going to happen next, and not once were we wrong. I almost felt that I should have gotten royalty rights for being able to write the scripts before they happened. Extremes are taken in both films as well. In Mighty Ducks Emilo goes from selfish and obsessive to Mr. Rogers in the matter of one brief scene. Willie Hayes Hayes goes to the other extreme, his head, becoming more concerned with endorsements and winning than In having fun. I almost felt that I should have gotten royalty rights for being able to write the scripts before they happened. Extremes are taken in both films as well. In Mighty Ducks Emilo goes from selfish and obsessive to Mr. Rogers in the matter of one brief scene. Willie Hayes Hayes goes to the same extreme, he hasn’t stolen a base all season and when he finally does, he steals his way around from first to home, right after the other. There is no middle ground with these characters, it’s either all bad or good.

With the abilities, the teams either play so bad its ridiculous, or they play with perfection. The acting from both ischemioc at best, Berenger being the only one to keep his self-worth as an actor. Even the hilarious Bob Eucker falls flat as announcer Harry Doyle, a role that was the highlight of the first movie.

The script writers seemed to have merely photocopied the original screenplays, than threw in some new characters to make it seem original. They also thought that by making the stakes higher (the Ducks competing for the national instead of state title and the Yankees in the play-offs rather than the pennant) it would add to the suspense, but it doesn’t end all as it seems. Mighty Ducks becomes so sugar candy-coated at one point that parents should be warned that their kids teeth might rot out upon watching it. Major League 2 seems to suggest that if you let your hair grow nice and rot out upon watching it. Major League 2 seems to suggest that if you let your hair grow nice and rot out upon watching it. Major League 2 seems to suggest that if you let your hair grow nice and rot out upon watching it. Major League 2 seems to suggest that if you let your hair grow nice and rot out upon watching it. Major League 2 seems to suggest that if you let your hair grow nice and rot out upon watching it.
