Clinton builds case for Haitian invasion

by Terence Hunt
The Associated Press

Forces would help train civilian police

WASHINGTON -- In a terse ultimatum from the Oval Office, President Clinton told Haiti's military leaders Thursday night, "Your time is up. Leave now or we will force you from power."

Against a chorus of opposition, Clinton used a prime-time address to build his case for an American invasion of Haiti to expel a military regime that stole power and stands accused of 3,000 political murders.

"We must act," Clinton said in televised address from the Oval Office.

He said that the United States' mission in Haiti would be "limited and specific" to "remove the dictators from power and restore Haiti's legitimate democratically elected government." He said U.S. forces would help train a civilian police force, but would not get involved in rebuilding Haiti.

Clinton said the "vast majority of our troops will come home in months, not years." Upwards of 20,000 U.S. force were mobilized for the invasion.

"I assure you that no president makes decisions like this one without deep thought and prayer," the president said. "But it is my job as president and commander in chief to take those action that I believe will best protect our national security interests."

Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, leader of the military junta, cautioned the United States not to invade. In a CBS interview, Cedras said, "I will fight with my people and I am prepared to die."

Administration sources said one final option is to dispatch an emissary to try to persuade Cedras to leave. "It's strictly a tactical decision, whether they think it has any chance," a source said, insisting on anonymity.

In Washington and in the Caribbean, every sign pointed to an invasion within a matter of days. One high-ranking official said an invasion was not likely before Monday.

William Gray, U.S. special envoy on Haiti, said "There will be a firm deadline" for Cedras to surrender power but that it would not be publicly announced "because we're not going to jeopardize American lives and our military in case the multinational force does have to go in."

Twenty American warships ominously shadowed Haiti's coast, and two troop-laden aircraft carriers were on the way, expected to be on station by the weekend.

"Obviously, we'll support the

Victims of AIDS, HIV seek solace in David's House

by Melissa Lipowski
The BG News

Editor's note: This is part two in a continuing series about HIV and AIDS.

When he arrived at David's House two years ago, Gerald McDonald was not only suffering from a drug and alcohol problem, but his battle with the HIV virus had left him physically and emotionally drained.

McDonald sought help from David's House staff members and volunteers to cope with his substance abuse and the many different problems surrounding life with the HIV virus. He has since gained a new perspective on life.

"When you walk through the door of David's House, love just smacks you in the face," McDonald said.

Since its establishment in 1989, David's House, a non-profit organization in Toledo that provides social services to people with HIV and AIDS, has been able to help many other people in similar situations.

Serving over 230 people in Northwest Ohio, including 39 women and 12 children, David's House assists its clients by providing a huge range of services, said Beverly Nathan, executive director of David's House.

These services include case management, financial assistance, in-home health care aid, transportation and visiting patients in the hospital or even at their homes, Nathan said.

"We assist clients with nutrition programs by providing them with food supplements, coupons and a food pantry," she said. "In addition, when a client is about to move into a new apartment, we help them with rental assistance, buy them furniture to help furnish the apartment, utility hookups and even house cleaning. We also take them to and from doctor appointments if they do not have a car or are unable to drive."

Former president still active

by Katie Simmons
The BG News

Editor's Note: This is the second part in a continuing series about people who have made an impact on the University.

Twenty-five years after William Travers Jerome III, the main library's namesake, resigned as University president, the 75-year-old professor continues to teach organizational management at a Florida university.

Born in New York City in 1919, Jerome attended Colgate University in New York as an undergraduate. After being drafted for three years, he attended Yale University Law School and received his Ph.D. from the Harvard School of Business.

Following his years as a student, Jerome was a professor and the dean of the college of business at Syracuse University.

During his seven years as University president, Jerome impacted the University on a permanent basis.

"He made a tremendous impact on Bowling Green from 1963-70," said Clifton Boutelle, director of public relations. "During his tenure we had one of the biggest building booms in the history of the University."

Both physically and mentally, that building boom affected the entire moral of the University. Jerome began the talk for and eventually the new construction of a library, emphasizing the importance of undergraduate studies.

Along with the library, both innovative and traditional architecture were developed for more than 10 buildings which cost about $35 million. Among those buildings was the Student Services Building.

Jerome can also be credited with the conception of the Firelands campus, which was planned and constructed during his administration.

"Looking back, I'd have to express the great excitement I had working with and helping eager people in the Firelands project," said Jerome in a phone interview. "We had to raise the money for such a marvelous project, and it was of good fortune to be a part of it."

Local newspapers in 1963 declared Jerome as a new image-holder for the University,

Jerome: "I have always said that the students, people and faculty in that part of Ohio were wonderful people to work with -- they held a really strong sense of values. I felt closer to the soil there, to the people and the students."

ty, stressing student relationships and welfare.

"I try to be honest, simple, direct, nothing more -- and this is extremely confusing to most people," Jerome said at the time.

In his seven-year term, Jerome increased effectiveness of teaching at the undergraduate level with the concepts of the new library, experimental classrooms and labs, improved potential teaching qualities which included television teaching, pass/no-pass courses, the honors program and audio-visual aids.

Jerome started the idea of having student representation on all major policy bodies and was involved in keeping the University an open forum.

Jerome's involvement with the student body seemed to catch on to outsiders while the enrollment of on-campus students rose from 8,238 students to 13,600 students, and the number of faculty members doubled.

"He was successful because he spoke to the students and kept the dialogue and communication lines open," Boutelle said.

Jerome's concern for the welfare of the students centered around the environment at the University.

"I have always said that the students, people and faculty in that part of Ohio were wonderful people to work with -- they held a really strong sense of values," Jerome said. "I felt closer to the soil there, to the people and the students."

The importance of Jerome was sensed outside the University, as well, when a committee was formed in 1970 endorsing Jerome for the governorship of Ohio.

In October of 1969, Jerome announced his resignation from the presidency to accept the position as a special consultant to his former assistant, Charles Perry, in Florida.

After Jerome left Bowling Green in 1970, his career was far from over. Avoiding the administrative aspects of education, Jerome was on the committee to start the Florida International University.

Department plans reunion for alumni

by Lawrence Hannan
The BG News

The department of journalism reunion planned for this weekend will be the first time a single department will have a gathering of its alumni.

Director of Alumni Affairs Larry Weiss said this is the first time a specific department has held a reunion.

"Since people don't always graduate in four years, and since graduating classes are so large now, a lot of people don't identify with the class they graduated with," Weiss said.

"But most people do have a strong identification with their major," he said. "Often a student's best friends are other people in their major that they've studied and had classes with."

Ray Laakaniemi, chairman of the journalism department, said the reunion is open to all journalism graduates and all former members of The BG News.

"We're expecting people from at least 13 states to come," Laakaniemi said. "We'll be having an open house tonight in West Hall. Then on Saturday, we'll be having a brunch at the Holley Lodge, and we will sit together at the football game. There will then be a reception to honor alumni Saturday night." Weiss said about 120 people are expected at the open house Friday night, and 163 people are expected for the brunch Saturday.

E.A.R. to the ground

Anyone driving by fraternity row during the past two weeks probably saw what looked like one big party. What they were really seeing, in case you missed all the fliers, was one of the all-time biggest fraternity rushes in University history.

While Greek life may not be for everyone, it's great to see fraternities put their best foot forward and show the campus what they are really about.

***

It's surprising that many people are aware the Bowling Green football team has won two of the last three Mid-American Conference titles. After all, home attendance over the last three years has hovered around the 15,000 mark -- about half of Doyt Perry Stadium's capacity.

Take away the two home games against Toledo in 1991 and 1993 where over 56,000 were in attendance -- a good portion of those people were probably UT fans -- and the average home attendance dips down to a measly 13,000.

It's not like the product hasn't been good. In fact, the Falcons have yet to lose a home game during head coach Gary Blackney's tenure.

Saturday's game against Navy is a big one, not only for the players, but for the fans as well. It's getting close to being sink or swim time in terms of fan attendance. Hopefully, we won't have to be bailed out by Navy.

Amid the art and unique decor stood a plethora of artists who added a certain spice to the Black Swamp Arts Festival. Without their varied look on life, the heart of the festival would not have beat.

Kudos to all from the performers to the storeowners to those who devoted their time to the clean-up Sunday night. They are the backbone of the festival and the city and without people like them Bowling Green would just be a college with a cornfield.

And God knows we have an excess of cornfields out here in the heartland.

***

A fire burns on the tomb of the unknown athlete. Attention all club sports, E.A.R. would like to give a wholehearted round of applause to those athletes who give their best, even though the roar of the crowd is absent.

Justice prevails, 'Red Stallion' returns

George Burns is on his death bed. Ollie North is running for senator. Brother Jed has imitators. Vanilla Ice is now a "gansta rapper." So's M.C. Hammer. My hamster named "Tits" escaped. And the last sliver of soap I was using to wash myself just fell down the drain and I don't get paid until Monday. I needed some good news.

I felt it -- something was about to break.

The phone rang. "Hello, Joe, this is Detective Brad Conner from the Bowling Green Police Department," the voice in my ear said.

Two things immediately popped into my head. No. 1, I never should have urinated on that church. No. 2, it had something to do with my stolen car.

You see, in an unfortunate turn of events last spring, my car was stolen by a man known only as "Victor." Pay attention as this man's name will become very important in the following paragraphs.

It began, as these stories often do, at a local tavern where my best friend, Shannon, and I were taking in a couple of 50-cent drafts.

As the night wore on, Shannon began talking to this young hoodlum who identified himself as Victor.

Right away alarm bells sounded. "What is the bad guy's name on every soap opera?" I asked myself. Victor.

Anyway, one thing led to another and Shannon ended up taking the would-be hooligan home in my cherry red 1991 Ford

Joe Peiffer

Escort, which I called the "Red Stallion."

And the next morning, poof, no "Red Stallion." And no Victor.

He left us knowing only his name, that he was from the Glass City, attended the University of Toledo and had an earring in both ears.

My car was gone and for a long time nothing could console me. Not even a quick trip to the Woodland Mall to mock those ear-wearing fellas in the Star Trek store.

Speaking of that, Star Trek is canceled, man. Why would you have a store specializing in selling merchandise for a canceled series? To me, that's kind of like offering a class in Latin.

Wait. We do offer Latin classes. Never mind.

Come with me now to just two weeks ago. Shannon and I once again find ourselves in a local tavern enjoying a few cocktails.

"Hey, Joe, look over there. I think that's Victor," Shannon said with a gleam in her eye.

As I turned my head, I heard the songs of angels. And I knew it was so.

Why Victor decided to come back to Bowling Green is a bit of a mystery. But why he decided to go to the bars is a dilemma of epic proportions. The kind of never-understood mystery like where is the band "Falco" now?

I mean he could have gone to the library and not seen me all year. He could have gone to any one of my 8:30 classes and seen me only on test days. But no, he went to the Bowling Green bars, where I have the home-team advantage.

So I moseyed up to the lad, looked him up and down and asked, "hey, man, what's your name?"

"Victor," he said.

"Thwap! I think that was the sound of one nail in Victor's cross."

"You know Victor, that's funny," I said. "Where are you from Victor?" I asked.

"Toledo," he said, performing worse under questioning than Bea Arthur on a honeymoon.

"No way, that is amazing," I said. "Do you go to school up there?" I asked.

"Yeah," he said. "You know I've been drinking since noon."

"Great. Come down here to Bowling Green a lot?" I asked, thinking Dr. R.K. Tucker would be proud. P.S. if you haven't taken assertiveness, it's well worth it.

"Every so often," he said, as unaware of his impending doom as Hillary is of Bill's "late work nights."

When I heard this final answer my first instinct was to spring on him like Haitian peasant. However considering my combat skills rival that of Michael J. Fox, I saw this option as fairly unproductive.

The only other option I saw was to let the police handle it. However, the men in blue would need something to go on. So I asked Victor politely for his social security number.

And he gave it to me.

To be more precise I copied it off his license onto a bar napkin. The next day I gave the information to the police and, WHALLA! Two weeks later I received the call.

"I don't want to spoil Detective Fourtney's surprise, but they just arrested Victor," Detective Conner said.

Eureka! Joy! Fun was restored to Joe-land.

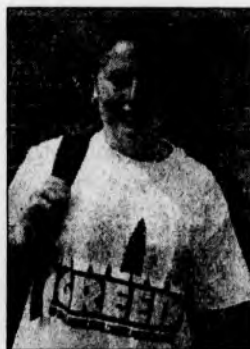

I hope Victor is in jail weeping for his mommy. I hope he's flogged like a vandal in Singapore. I hope he's sharing a cell with the Menendez brothers, and Eric keeps him up all night crying.

No really, I guess I hope he's all right. But I hope he doesn't do this again to anyone else. And I'm glad he didn't hurt my friend. So that's my story. Thanks for listening.

Joe Peiffer is city editor and weekly columnist for The News. He wishes to thank Detectives Ken Fourtney and Brad Conner for their efforts in returning the "Red Stallion," and bringing Victor to justice. Questions, comments and concerns can be e-mailed to jpeiffe@andy.bgsu.edu.

Brinkley engaged

TELLURIDE, Colo. -- Christie Brinkley is engaged to the millionaire developer she survived a helicopter crash with last April, a friend of the model who spoke on condition of anonymity said Wednesday.

Brinkley, the model for Billy Joel's song "Uptown Girl," divorced the singer last month.

She suffered minor injuries in the April 1 crash while on a heliski trip with developer Richard Taubman of Telluride. He was not hurt.

Brinkley, 40, told USA Today she and Taubman became engaged only a couple of weeks after they met.

"He's a wonderful, honest, generous, great person," the newspaper quoted her in Wednesday's editions.

After the crash, Brinkley told People magazine, "Maybe I'll have the patience to be a better mom. Maybe I will simplify my life, because at the moment everything is so sweet to me."

Brinkley and Joel have not disclosed what arrangements they made for custody of their 8-year-old daughter, Alexa Ray.

ACROSS THE NATION

There is a stop sign at the intersection where the collision occurred, but investigators couldn't immediately determine if the car had stopped, Dunlap said. There is no obstruction to visibility at the intersection, he said.

Three of the victims, including the driver of the car, were 17. The others were 14 and 15.

A number of the victims' fellow students at Madison Area High School sought help from counselors who were brought in, Principal Joseph Testa said.

Nuclear Waste

COLUMBIA, S.C. -- The U.S. Energy Department asked a federal appeals court Wednesday to put aside an order blocking two shiploads of European nuclear waste from being unloaded in the United States.

State officials are fighting the Energy Department over storing the spent nuclear fuel rods at South Carolina's Savannah River Site nuclear weapons complex.

U.S. District Judge Matthew Perry issued a preliminary injunction Tuesday blocking the arrival of the rods until the issue is settled in court. But the department said stopping the shipments would undermine the nation's policy of discouraging use of material that can be used to make nuclear weapons.

"This is an issue of grave importance for preventing the spread of dangerous weapons material," Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary said.

The department filed the appeal Wednesday with the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va.

The fuel rods are the first of 15,000 from Austria, Denmark, the Netherlands, Sweden, Switzerland, Germany and Greece that could be put in underwater storage basins at the Savannah River Site, a federal nuclear weapons complex near Aiken.

The Energy Department has said it had no choice but to accept the first shipment of 153 spent fuel rods. When the United States sold the fuel, it agreed to take the waste to limit the chance of nuclear weapons proliferation.

The rods are already on two ships heading for the United States, and a second shipment of more than 250 rods was scheduled within six months.

Compiled from staff and wire reports.

Students killed

MADISON, Maine -- A state-owned dump truck slammed into a car Wednesday, killing five high school students on their way to school.

The victims were "all excellent students and real good athletes," said Police Chief Harley Dunlap. "It's a real tragedy to this community."

There was no indication either vehicle was speeding, he said. Dunlap didn't anticipate any charges being filed against the uninjured driver of the state Department of Transportation truck.

ACROSS THE STATE

Teen curfew

CINCINNATI -- The City Council has extended a curfew for teen-agers for a month before considering making it permanent.

The council's vote Wednesday means the curfew -- modeled after one used in Phoenix -- remains a pilot project. It would have expired Sunday, but the Council extended it through Oct. 18.

The Council delayed the vote to consider several issues, including who will operate the drop-off centers where curfew offenders are taken.

The Baptist Ministers Conference also has asked that additional money be approved to give youths more activities to keep them off the streets. The curfew enforcement now sends youths to city recreation centers, where they can play basketball late at night.

"We need to have all of those questions answered before going forward with a permanent curfew," council member Todd Portune said.

Portune asked several city departments to study the possibility of offering expanded youth programs at city recreation centers.

A recent poll reported that 90 percent of Cincinnati residents want a permanent curfew.

Since it began in July, there has been a 5.7 percent drop in the number of juvenile-crime victims and a 9.4 percent decline in juvenile crime, city Safety Director William Gustavson said.

Gynecologist lawsuit

DAYTON -- A former gynecologist accused by patients of surgically altering their sex organs without permission told a judge Thursday he did not mean to violate a gag order in his malpractice trial.

James Burt, 73, of Fort Myers, Fla., said he granted an interview to WDTN-TV in Dayton because he was frustrated he would not be able to defend himself at the June 1991 trial. He said he was ill at the time and could not be in the courtroom.

Burt is charged with contempt of court for violating a gag order imposed Aug. 22, 1990. If convicted, he faces a maximum penalty of 10 days in jail and a $500 fine.

Compiled from staff and wire reports.

ROTC presents Military Appreciation Day display

by Jim Vickers
The BG News

With the cold war over and no large military threat against the United States, many of today's college students are still exploring the options available to them through the military.

Saturday is Military Appreciation Day at the University. Students will have a chance to see military equipment and ask any questions they may have about the armed forces at a Reserved Officer Training Corp display outside Doyt L. Perry Stadium.

Maj. Nick "Hurricane" Harris, a military science instructor at the University, said a helicopter, an armored personnel carrier and a command vehicle have been borrowed from the Walbridge National Guard Armory for the display.

"[Through the display] we are saying thanks for showing us your support. Stop by our displays and we can show you what we do and how we use the equipment," Harris said.

Harris, who teaches freshman and sophomore military science classes, said in recent years he has seen a definite rise in interest in the military among college students.

"I would say students have a positive view of the military," Harris said. "This year we have 134 students in Military Science 101. I think that's the largest number we've had in that class."

Harris said some students take Military Science 101 due to the adventure training in the class, such as rappelling and fire weapons, while other students take it to explore the scholarship options available to them through the University's ROTC program.

Harris said 203 students are involved in the University ROTC program. The program pays a large portion of a student's college fees in exchange for military service upon graduation. Harris said a student must serve eight years in the armed forces, four of which can be served in the reserves.

Harris said college students involved in the ROTC program have a definite advantage in attaining a job in the very competitive workforce.

"Fortune 500 companies tentatively pick a military officer over their peers because of the leadership responsibilities entrusted to them," Harris said.

"Coming out of the military you are a much more articulate decision maker than someone who has just graduated from college," Scott Hartwell, a cadet corporal in the University ROTC program, said the program instills people with qualities that can be used long after their military careers.

"You learn leadership skills, as well as time management and problem solving that you're going to use all through your life."

Accident victim beats odds University student regains health, inspires others

by Cristl Ellwood
The BG News

To his friends and family, Paul Mortimer is an inspiration.

Seven years ago, he was in a motorcycle accident which killed a passenger and left him in a wheelchair. Though being declared clinically dead numerous times, he fought back and regained his health.

Admitting he has made mistakes, Mortimer is quick to dismiss the past for hopes of the future.

Mortimer, a University student, said he is working toward a degree in social work. He has always had goals of counseling people in rehabilitation.

He advocates responsibility in drug and alcohol use and stresses the need for moderation, he said.

A large part of the success he has had is due, in part, to the constant love and support of family and friends.

"I was mentally and physically demolished [after the accident], but through prayers, love and support from family and friends, I was able to survive, adapt, and now I am moving on," Mortimer said.

Mortimer's family has always backed his decisions and were there every time he needed them.

"I was mentally and physically demolished [after the accident], but through prayers, love and support from family and friends, I was able to survive, adapt, and now I am moving on."

Paul Mortimer
poet

His friend Jodi Hansen said Mortimer has "never been anything but honest," and that he treats everyone like he or she were his best friend.

Mortimer has written a second volume of poetry which is to be released this month. The first edition of "To Be Free," which contains poetry compiled since 1991, has sold out and the book is to be released in a second printing.

"To Be Free," priced at $10.95, is available at the University Bookstore as well as various locations in Northwest Ohio.

A poetry reading and autograph session is scheduled for Oct. 8 at 1 p.m. at the Kaubisch Memorial Public Library in Fostoria.

Mortimer said he hopes to write many more books and is not limiting himself to poetry.

Bowling Green campus plays host to Ohio game show

by Cynthia Kent
The BG News

Students and residents of Bowling Green can get involved in the glitz and glamour of television this Friday.

"Cash Explosion," the Ohio Lottery Commission's television game show, comes to Kobacker Hall on Friday.

Tickets to attend the taping of "Cash Explosion" are available at the Chamber of Commerce office, said Joan Gordon, the director of the Chamber.

"There are only a few tickets left," Gordon said.

She said the game show looked at several different communities in the Northwest Ohio area, but it was the beauty of the city that brought the game show to Bowling Green.

"I took [Cash Explosion representatives] around the city and made them feel comfortable and welcome in our city," Gordon said.

The show will begin at 7:00 p.m. with general admission seating starting at 6:00 p.m. There is a limit of four tickets per person, and they must be picked up at the Chamber Office.

Local park to welcome MS clients, loved ones

by Randy Jaffe
The BG News

The Northwest Ohio Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society will sponsor its second annual "Family Day at Cedar Point" Sept. 17 for MS patients and their families.

MS Society Chapter Services director Jacque Pratt said the day gives people with multiple sclerosis the opportunity to do something they would not normally do.

"While it gives MS clients the chance to meet other people who have MS across Northwestern Ohio, it is really intended to be a fun family opportunity," she said.

Jeff and Karen Keifer of southern Toledo both attended the Cedar Point excursion last year. Mr. Keifer, who has had MS for nine years, is unable to do a lot of things that he used to do, his wife said.

Mrs. Keifer said the numerous volunteers assisting the MS clients is the primary reason why she and her family will return to the event again this year.

"For me to take three kids, my husband and tend to everything else [while at the park] ... it's impossible," she said. "Without [the volunteers], we wouldn't have been able to go."

Dawn Baringer, vice president of the Phi Mu Sorority at the University, heads a group of sorority members that will be volunteering their efforts at the upcoming MS Family Day at Cedar Point.

The volunteers will pair up with MS patients and their families in an attempt to make their day at the park easier and more enjoyable. Volunteer-staffed relaxation stations around the park will be established to allow MS clients the opportunity to temporarily get out of the sun and get something to drink.

"It's basically like being a buddy to the family [of the MS patient]," Baringer said. "We're all really excited about it."

The park gates will be open for registration between 10 a.m. and noon. At that time, each family will receive their tickets, a volunteer host and a Family Day t-shirt.

Multiple sclerosis is a chronic and often progressive disease of the central nervous system characterized by impaired motor capabilities, numbness or tingling in the hands or feet and blurring or double vision. It usually begins in early adult life, but can be diagnosed anywhere between the ages of 15 and 60. The cause and cure of MS are presently unknown.

Locally, Wood County offers the Wood County MS Support Group for MS patients and their family. The group meets once a month in the Commissioner's Office at the Wood County Court House to share experiences and help new members. For more information, contact Joannie Harper at (419) 354-1441.

Jerome: "My key at Bowling Green was the interaction. It was nothing to go to a basketball game and talk to the students. I loved the vibrancy."

Jerome

"I was asked to be president of that university, but I was not too much into the politics of it," Jerome said. "I was extremely excited to be on a committee to start the university. It was very intriguing."

After being drafted to be the academic vice president of FIU for a couple years, Jerome went back to being a professor and still teaches courses in organizational management.

Jerome's interaction with the students in the 60s may have been beneficial, but unfortunately his interaction seemed to end there.

"My key at Bowling Green was the interaction," he said. "It was nothing to go to a basketball game and talk to the students. I loved the vibrancy. Unfortunately, I learned that the advice and wisdom from my generation to the new generation is not wanted anymore. They want to do it their own way and make their own mistakes, so I leave well enough alone."

In 1983, the Jerome Library was named in honor of the former president, and this weekend, after 25 years, Jerome will be reunited with former assistant Perry and another Bowling Green colleague who helped with the architecture of the library. They will attend a dedication to the first building to be built on the FIU campus, which will be named in honor of Perry.

House

In addition to providing many services, David's House also operates a residence for five people who are all HIV positive, Nathan said.

The residents of the home, which is limited to five residents as a result of current licensure capabilities, are all people who require some kind of assisted living, she said.

"Most of these residents do not have any friends or family to help care for them," Nathan said. "So we provide them with a place to live and have staff members with them 24 hours a day who do their laundry, cook their meals and assist them with their health care."

While some may be under the impression that working with the terminally ill would be a depressing job, Nathan said it is just the opposite.

"Although it is very, very sad sometimes because we have so many losses, I honestly feel as if we are making a difference in so many lives and that is reassuring," she said. "While we cannot change the outcome of the illness, we can make a difference in our clients' quality of life while they are still living."

Even though David's House has a paid staff of 17 and a team of 120 volunteers who donate over 2500 hours of service per month, Nathan said the staff believes they get back everything they put into it.

"Working with the terminally ill has given all of us the chance to know the meaning of true friendship," she said. "Once people realize that they have a time limit on their lives, they have a tendency to open up more and express all of the things that they normally wouldn't have since they do not know if they will ever have the chance to say them again. They are really special relationships."

McDonald said he wishes there would be more places like David's House available to people with HIV and AIDS.

Student television station broadcasts to public, campus

by Jennifer Matta
The BG News

WBGU-TV, a non-profit licensee of the University and member station of the Public Broadcasting System, kicked off its fall schedule at 3:30 Monday.

The station, which attempts to reach all audiences, has a basic schedule to accommodate them.

According to Ronald Gargas, program manager, 25 percent of the programming is devoted to children and is aired during the day.

In the evenings, it is aimed toward general audiences, and on weekends, many how-to shows are aired. There are also features, one of which Gargas said should receive good reviews.

"It will be a regular news program called 'Journal', which will be mostly live to allow communication with the host through phone-ins and the Internet," Gargas said.

Not only does the station air to the general public, but WBGU-TV also accommodates the University.

"There are 4,000 videotapes used through closed-circuit television. An instructor may call the station, tell us what program they want, and we will set it up to air at the time of the class," said Tim Smith, director of public relations.

WBGU-TV is likewise responsible for the new teaching facilities in Olscamp Hall.

The station itself, located on Troup Street, is run by 35 University students and reports events in and around the campus on Wood County Cable 12 and on non-cable channel 27 about 18 hours a day seven days a week.

WBGU also has a broad range in which it airs, stretching into some 19 counties lo-

Crafts, historical exhibits comprise Wood County Days

by Cynthia J. Kent
The BG News

General Custer and Abe Lincoln will be visiting the city of Bowling Green this Saturday, not for battle but for the 10th annual Wood County Days festival.

The festival will be featuring several "living historians," including Elizabeth Bacon Custer, Abraham Lincoln and General Custer.

Joann Russell Ward, publicity chairman of Wood County Days, said students can benefit from Wood County Days because it "shows the history part" of Wood County.

Smith describes the festival as more of a "celebration" than education for the students.

"The festival is a great opportunity to invite students from BGSU to look at the museum and see what we are about," Smith said.

Ohio Volunteer Infantry, a Civil War re-enactment group, will portray the 14th infantry, a division from Wood County.

"There is a great deal of Civil War significance in Wood County," said Pat Smith, director of the Wood County Historical Museum. "General Custer was actually born in Wood County."

Comic Burns keeps nurses in stitches, recovery imminent

by Jeff Wilson
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES -- George Burns sat up in his hospital bed and joked with nurses Wednesday, two days after surgery to drain fluid from his brain. The 98-year-old entertainer was expected to be home within a week.

Doctors planned to move the comic from intensive care to a private room on Thursday.

Neurologist Martin Cooper and Burns' personal physician Gary Sugarman "expressed their satisfaction with how well George is doing following the surgery," said Ron Wise, spokesman for Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, bordered by George Burns Road. "He has steadily improved," Wise said.

Burns will continue his recuperation at his Beverly Hills home for a week or two once he's released.

Irving Fein, Burns' longtime friend and manager, told reporters at a hospital news conference that Burns ate breakfast and sat up telling jokes.

"He's had three or four nurses and he's doing his act. He's singing some of his songs that he does in his act. They are all laughing. He's having a good time," he said.

Fein canceled Burns' Sept. 30 performance at the Foxwood casino in Connecticut and an Oct. 4 luncheon at the Plaza Hotel in New York. But Burns will likely make Ft. Lauderdale and Tampa dates in November, he said.

"I'm sure he'll be able to do the Caesars on his 99th birthday on Jan. 20," Fein said of Burns' date at the Las Vegas casino. Burns also is scheduled for 100th birthday celebration performances in 1996.

The cigar-chomping comic underwent surgery after being admitted Monday night. The operation relieved pressure from fluid that built up after he fell in his bathtub and hit his head on a soap dish July 13.

Burns' speech was impaired for a few days after the fall but it came back. The non-emergency operation was performed after the speech troubles returned.

Through much of his career, Burns was straight man to his wife, Gracie Allen, who died in 1964. He won an Academy Award in 1975 for "The Sunshine Boys."

The remains were discovered off Russia's eastern coast 42 years after a spy plane was shot down by Soviet fighters during the Cold War.

Search continues for cause of crash

by Alyssa Gabbay
The Associated Press

CORAOPOLIS, Pa. -- More than 20 people sweated in the afternoon heat of a hangar near the Pittsburgh airport, painstakingly laying out pieces of wreckage on the floor in the shape of an airplane.

Investigators are piecing together the thousands of shattered, blackened shards of USAir Flight 427, trying to determine why it crashed.

A piece of silver fuselage contained a couple of window frames with the glass missing. Part of USAir's logo -- the bright red painted letters "U" and "S" -- could be made out on another piece from the side of the plane. The plane's tail rests in the rear of the hangar.

Some of the larger pieces are the size of a small car. The smallest ones, piled in dozens of laundry-basket-size bins, are mere splinters.

"We are looking for fractures. We are looking for punctures. We are looking for stress in the metal," National Transportation Safety Board spokesman Michael Benson said Wednesday.

So far, federal officials have no explanation why the Boeing 737-300 jetliner suddenly dropped 6,000 feet last Thursday and nose-dived into a ravine at 300 mph. The tremendous force of impact shattered the plane and killed all 132 people on board.

"I can't predict when we'll have something," said chief

NTSB investigator Tom Haueter. "We're working quickly, but it does take time."

The New York Post reported today that one of Flight 427's passengers, Paul Olson, was a government drug informant in a witness-protection program, and that investigators are checking whether the jet was sabotaged to silence him.

Haueter hoped to have all the wreckage collected by Friday and to identify a cause for the crash within six months.

Preliminary data from the flight recorder has led investigators to believe that the jet's right wing rose, forcing it to roll to the left and go out of control. They are looking at the plane's spoilers -- wing flaps used to slow a plane in flight or after landing -- and autopilot.

Two theories have been discounted: that thrust reversers were deployed in flight and that an engine came loose.

About 450 people attended a service in Moorestown, N.J. for Capt. Peter Germano, the plane's 45-year-old pilot.

Germano's only brother, Ernest, said the pilot developed a love for flying from their father. He recalled flying over Long Island in a single-engine plane with his older brother.

"We could see forever," Germano said, occasionally choking back tears. "Peter, I will always remember you. You will be there whenever I see an airplane in the sky."

Hanoi mission discussed

by George Esper
The Associated Press

HANOI, Vietnam -- A high-level U.S. State Department official is meeting with Vietnamese counterparts to discuss the historic opening of the first American diplomatic mission in Hanoi in 40 years.

Peter Tomsen, deputy assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific Affairs, arrived Wednesday at a time of improving relations between the United States and Vietnam.

The last American consulate in Hanoi was closed on Dec. 12, 1955. The U.S. Embassy in Saigon was evacuated on April 30, 1975, when the Communists took control of all of Vietnam.

Tomsen will inspect proposed sites for the U.S. mission and for the future ambassador's residence, sources said. Although the U.S. has not yet officially opened its diplomatic mission some of the 11 State Department officials who will staff it are already in place.

They are working out of the U.S. MIA office, which accounts for Americans missing in action and is the only official representation the United States has in Vietnam. The MIA office is staffed by about 20 Americans.

Hanoi is also opening a liaison office in Washington at the same time. These offices are a prelude to full diplomatic relations, once the United States is satisfied that the fullest possible accounting of American MIAs has been made.

Tomsen's three-day visit is a follow-up to one by his boss, Assistant Secretary of State Winston Lord, in July. During Lord's visit, Vietnam pledged to intensify its efforts to resolve the cases of American MIAs in return for full diplomatic recognition by the United States and favorable trade status.

Tomsen planned to fly to a site outside of Hanoi on Thursday to observe firsthand a major U.S. operation to recover MIA remains, then meet later in the day with Vietnam's Deputy Minister of Defense Nguyen Thoi Bung.

"Progress continues at a strong level as in the last year," said Army Lt. Col. Melvin E. Richmond Jr., head of the MIA office. He said cooperation from the Vietnamese has been "strong."

Richmond said several sets of remains believed to be those of Americans have been recovered on the current operation. In addition, he said, the Vietnamese had on their own turned in a number of remains, and those are being examined by a U.S. anthropologist in Ho Chi Minh City.

The United States lists 2,229 Americans as unaccounted for from the war, including 1,639 in Vietnam, 505 in Laos, 77 in Cambodia and eight in China. Half of the total number were killed in action, even though the remains have not been recovered, U.S. officials said. More than 400 others were lost over the sea and their remains probably will never be recovered, officials said.

Tomsen is scheduled to meet with Deputy Foreign Minister Le Mai on Friday to discuss the formal opening of the liaison offices.

President Bill Clinton is interviewed by news agencies.

IRA's cease-fire continues, group expects concessions

by Shawn Pogatchnik
The Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland -- Senior IRA prisoners in Northern Ireland's top-security prison say they support the group's cease-fire as a lasting step away from violence, but expect political concessions in return.

British Prime Minister John Major said Wednesday he still wasn't sure whether the Irish Republican Army's 2-week-old truce would last. He is seeking firm assurances from Sinn Fein, the IRA's political partners, that the truce is permanent before talks could begin.

A night of street violence in Belfast between the mainly Protestant police and hard-line Protestant "loyalists" starkly demonstrated how the IRA's gesture has divided sentiments in Northern Ireland's pro-British majority.

Several people were injured and 10 vehicles hijacked and torched late Tuesday in clashes that began after officers separated Protestants and Catholics trading taunts and punches at a court hearing for a Catholic accused of attempting to murder a prominent loyalist.

Protestant political leaders met police commanders Wednesday and complained afterward that heavy-handed police tactics would ensure more violence. Police promised an investigation, but said civilians had been bent on starting trouble.

Hard-liners within the pro-British Protestant community suspect the IRA must already have won secret concessions from Britain to make them end their 24-year campaign against British rule of the province.

The reality seems to be more complex. Sinn Fein, long isolated politically, has found faith in a political process that for the first time has won them allies among moderate Catholic nationalists, Irish government leaders and American officials.

Sean Lynch, the IRA's commanding officer in the Maze prison southwest of Belfast, said his men want success for the "unarmed strategy," which he said would last "in all circumstances."

"The big question emerging now is not does the republican movement intend to keep the peace, but does the British government want peace? What bold and courageous initiatives has it taken to match the truly historic nature of the republican decision?" Lynch wrote in a letter published Wednesday.

The IRA prisoners are influential opinion-formers within republican ranks, and were consulted before the IRA announcement Aug. 31 of "a complete cessation of military operations."

The IRA and Sinn Fein leaders are seeking the early release of their side's prisoners. Sinn Fein also insists Britain end the 6-year-old ban on broadcasting the voices of IRA supporters.

Protesters on Wednesday picketed the offices of the British Broadcasting Corp. and Ulster Television in Londonderry appealing for an end to the ban.

Clinton

American forces and hope and pray that nobody is injured, innocent people," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole. "Plus, the initial assault may not be too difficult, but then you've got the occupation and the mopping up and continued danger for American young men and women, in some cases."

Clinton signed an executive order authorizing the call-up of 1,600 reservists to support the invasion force.

The president sought to explain why American lives should be risked to restore deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide after three years in exile. He noted that more than 20 nations have pledged to contribute to a police force.

Americans overwhelmingly oppose an invasion, according to polls, and there is widespread opposition in Congress. The White House acknowledged Clinton couldn't turn around public opinion with one speech.

It is widely assumed that most of Haiti's ragtag forces would run from a fight, throwing off their uniforms and trying to melt into the civilian population. The fear is that Americans would become targets of ambush and guerrilla warfare.

Blaming the military rulers for abusing Haitians and driving them deeper into poverty and despair, Clinton said, "I know that the United States cannot and should not be the world's policeman. But we have a responsibility to respond when inhumanity offends our values."

"And we have a particular interest in stopping brutality when it occurs so close to our shores," he said.

Clinton said Aristide had pledged to step down when his term expires in February 1996. Aristide's lawyer, Mike Barnes, said it has always been Aristide's intention to abide by the constitutional schedule.

Aristide has not made that commitment publicly. There had been speculation he would add his time in exile to the end of his scheduled term of office, enabling him to have five full years as Haiti's president.

Defense Secretary William Perry said there was no indication that Cedras, Lt. Col. Michel Francois, the police commander, or Gen. Philippe Biamby, the Army chief of staff, were ready to leave, despite an offer of safe passage to a comfortable life in another country.

He said there have been reports from Haiti "indicating a fair amount of turmoil in the ruling regime there."

Clinton emphasized allegations of human rights abuses.

"Cedras and his armed thugs have conducted a reign of terror," the president said. "Executing children. Raping women. Killing priests. As the dictators have grown more desperate, the atrocities have grown ever more brutal."

As long as Cedras rules, Clinton said, Haitians will continue to seek sanctuary in the United States. More than 14,000 Haitians are housed at the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba, and the United States has spent $177 million to support them and maintain the economic embargo on Haiti, Clinton said.

Some 300,000 Haitians are in hiding in their country, eager to flee, Clinton said.

"If we do not act, they will be the next wave of refugees at our door," he said. "We will continue to face a mass exodus of refugees and a constant threat to stability in our region and control of our borders."

BG setting sights on Midshipmen

Bowling Green's Ryan McElroy dives for an errant pass.

by Mike Kazimore
The BG News

When the Naval Academy invades Doyt Perry Stadium Saturday, the Falcon football team will be looking to bomb them with both an aerial and a ground attack.

Gerry Faust, head coach of the Akron Zips, recently experienced BG's explosive offense. Last weekend the Falcons racked up 438 yards in a 45-0 thrashing of the Zips.

"This may be Gary's [Blackney, BG head coach] best football team that he has had," Faust said after the game. "I think that team is more developed offensively than other teams in the past. Their quarterback can do so many things that it just makes the whole team better."

While Ryan Henry was a near perfect 13-14 against the Zips, he struggled against the Midshipmen last season in the Falcons' 27-20 loss. In that game, Henry, who has completed 68 percent of his passes this season, struggled through a 13-36 performance.

"I think that I'm a lot better quarterback than I was a year ago," Henry said. "I'm a lot more patient in the pocket, and I'm not trying to force passes and make all the big plays myself. I realize that we have a lot of different offensive weapons and I don't have to do everything myself." While Henry struggled, his counterpart Jim Kubiak shredded the Falcon secondary for 314 yards and two touchdowns.

This season, however, Kubiak has been doing the struggling, throwing five interceptions in his first two games. "Navy has a solid program, and Kubiak is a dangerous player," Blackney said. "He's off to kind of a slow start, but we expect him to play up to his capabilities. We'll have to be prepared to play a good game."

While the Falcons won't shy away from throwing the football, their revamped running game should be the focal point of Saturday's contest.

After netting just 24 yards on the ground in its first game, the Falcons rebounded with a 261-yard performance against Akron. Leading the way was sophomore surprise Keylan Cates with 91 yards.

"Keylan had a very good game and we expect him to continue to develop," Blackney said. "I think all of our backs had a tremendous game, and a lot of that credit has to go to the offensive line."

While the Falcon offense was expected to be able to move the football this season as they have in the past, being able to consistently walk away with points was questionable.

Last season the Falcons were only able to score touchdowns on 53 percent of their drives in the red zone (inside the opponents' 20 yard line). A week ago, against Akron, the BG offense managed to find the end zone on all six trips to the red.

Another problem area from last season in which the Falcons have made tremendous strides is the kicking department.

Senior place-kicker Brian Leaver has connected on all four of his field goal attempts, including a career-best 47-yarder.

"Their kicking game is excellent this year," Faust said. "The whole kicking game is the best that I have ever seen them have."

Volleyball squad set to begin MAC play

by John Gibney
The BG News

Forget those matches last week against Nebraska and Arizona State, both ranked nationally in the top 10. The Falcon volleyball team hungers for some real meat — the Mid-American Conference.

The Falcons begin conference play in their home opener against Western Michigan University at Anderson Arena Friday night. Traditional rival Ball State University visits BG for a Saturday competition.

Both weekend matches feature teams expected to compete for the MAC championship. Ball State enters as the preseason favorite in the coaches' poll.

"This is one of the biggest weekends of the MAC regular season," said Falcon co-captain Carlyn Esslinger. "Western Michigan's reputation (125-29 in MAC play since 1983) is enough to get us up. With Ball State, we have a huge rivalry. We lost to them in some key matches the last couple years."

If the Falcon team had one wish, it would be for an enthusiastic crowd to pack the arena this weekend. Nebraska pummeled the Falcons last Friday, but the BG players loved the support from the couple thousand Cornhusker fans in attendance, according to head coach Denise Van De Walle.

Senior co-captain Jessica Andrasko said home crowds for volleyball games have increased the last few years, and she sees no reason why the Falcons cannot attract 1,000 people for their matches.

"It is so much more exciting to play in front of 1,000 people. It really gets the players going," Andrasko said.

For faculty and students who have never attended a volleyball game, Van De Walle offered ample reasoning to potential first-timers.

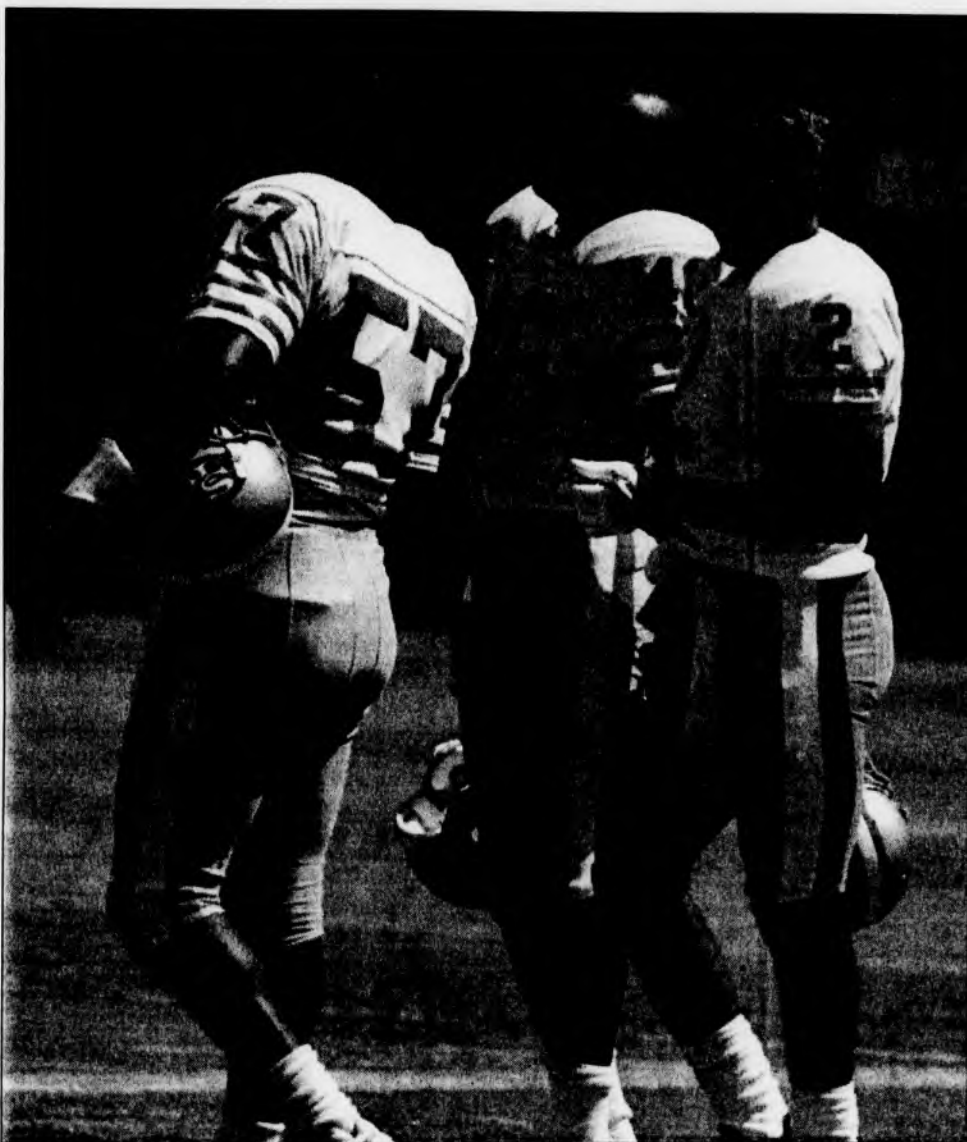

"We play a very competitive level of volleyball," she said. "If you have never seen Division I volleyball, you need to come out and see us play. It's much quicker than high school or club competition. It's fast paced and exciting to watch."

Students should not be disturbed by the Falcons' 2-5 record. It is misleading. Most of BG's losses came against teams ranked near the top in the country.

"We'll see no one like those teams in the MAC this year," Esslinger said. "We learned a lot [from those pre-conference matches]. Not just by playing, but by watching."

Andrasko said the team realized they must compete until the end in every match. "We have to fight to get the 15th point," she said. "The pre-conference schedule was tough, but it definitely prepared us for the MAC."

Both weekend matches start at 7 p.m. Students with a valid ID are admitted free.

Newly-signed San Francisco 49ers' Deion Sanders shares a laugh with teammates Ricky Jackson (57) and Tim McDonald (46) during practice.

San Francisco still waiting on Sanders

by Dennis Georgatos
The Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. -- Deion Sanders' free-agent odyssey appears to be nearing an end.

San Francisco 49ers president Carmen Policy and Sanders' agent, Eugene Parker, wrapped up daylong negotiations late Wednesday night after reaching what Policy called a "meeting of the minds" on a one-year deal.

He declined to discuss details of the proposal, which still must be approved and signed by Sanders and reviewed by the NFL Management Council to ensure it complies with salary cap regulations.

"I think finally at the end of the day what we've submitted should be approved," Policy said. "Will Deion accept it? That's what it boils down to."

A free-agent cornerback and Cincinnati Reds outfielder, Sanders shopped his services to several NFL teams while idled by the month-long baseball players strike.

Owners on Wednesday called off the season, and with his baseball job wiped out, Sanders turned his attention to football, particularly the 49ers.

Sanders told an Atlanta television station he had decided against rejoining the Atlanta Falcons and intended to sign with the 49ers.

"I have a very, very good feeling about this but it's not done 'til it's done," Policy said. "I think they know we've gone as far as we can go [financially]. We've done all we could do in the framework of a one-year deal. Everything has been put on the table."

Sanders rejected a more lucrative offer from the Miami Dolphins, plagued by injuries in the secondary and badly needing a reinforcement.

"I'm disappointed," coach Don Shula said. "I thought we were in it and had a good chance. We pursued it hard these last few days."

In their bid to sign Sanders, the 49ers freed $1.3 million under the salary cap by restructuring the contracts of linebackers Gary Plummer and Ken Norton and safety Tim McDonald.

Just two weeks ago, Policy said the 49ers couldn't afford Sanders because of salary-cap constraints. Now he was optimistic the two sides could come to terms. However, he was wary of competing offers.

"We're not in there alone," Policy said. "If I was to stand here and tell you it was done, I would be really acting foolhardy. I don't know what's going on behind the scenes. His coming out here may be nothing more than priming the pump to get Atlanta to really come through with a final offer."

Falcons president Taylor Smith said the team still assumed Sanders would sign with the 49ers.

Indians players say they did right thing

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- The last thing the Cleveland Indians wanted to do was end their best season in 40 years, but the players believe the owners left them no alternative.

"I think we did the right thing," said pitcher Eric Plunk. "With the changes the owners are trying to make in the basic agreement, we had no choice. It had to be done."

Pitcher Dennis Martinez, a union activist, said he realized fans probably don't understand the players' stance.

"We struck for principle -- not for money," Martinez said. "The fans don't think that. But they don't understand the salary cap. We're fighting for our rights. It's like the people in Cuba who are escaping on rafts. They want to be free, and so do we."

"We want to be free to play for what team we want and earn as much as we can," he said. "That's what this country is all about. We all want a chance to better ourselves. With a salary cap, we wouldn't be able to do that."

Despite losing millions of dollars during their strike, players believe their action will pay dividends in the future.

"This isn't helping us now," pitcher Derek Lilliquist said. "But it will help the kids playing Little League and minor league ball right now. We want them to enjoy the same benefits we enjoyed when they get to the big leagues. The players before us fought for it, and we have to do the same."

But many players still found Wednesday's announcement to cancel the rest of the season difficult to accept.

"I'm a little surprised this happened," Carlos Baerga said. "It's very hard for our team because we've worked so hard all year. And every player dreams of being in the playoffs and World Series."

The players also have to accept that there may not be a next season if an agreement is not reached.

"It's a shame to cancel the season," Candy Maldonado said. "It's bad for the fans, players and owners. Now no one knows what will happen this winter."

Soccer hosts Hilltoppers

by John Boyle
The BG News

The Bowling Green soccer squad will attempt to keep two winning streaks intact Sunday when they host Western Kentucky at Mickey Cochrane Field.

The Falcons (4-1) hope to extend this season's four-game winning streak alive and a career unbeaten streak against the Hilltoppers. BG is 2-0-1 in three career meetings.

Last season, BG defeated WKU 3-1 in the opening round of the Mitre-Classic in Bowling Green, Ky.

After losing their season opener 3-2 to Loyola (Md.), the Falcons have run off four consecutive victories against Coastal Carolina, Dayton, Southern Indiana and Ohio State. The 2-0 victory against the Buckeyes on Wednesday was the Falcons' 21st in 28 meetings.

BG's ball possession and movement has been paramount to its recent success. Midfielder Joe Burch collected two goals against the Buckeyes, his fourth and fifth of the season.

"I'm real happy with the way the team has been knocking the ball around," Burch said.

By possessing the ball, the Falcons are better able to distribute the ball offensively and defensively. BG has outscored its opponents 14-6 in five games for an average of nearly three scored and just over one given up per game. Goalkeeper Dan Traver currently sports a 3-0 record with a paltry 0.75 goals against average in four games played.

If Coach Palmisano has one concern at this point in the season, however, it's the Falcons' propensity for mental errors.

"We have to cut down on mental mistakes," Palmisano said. "We've given up six goals and two of those were mistakes. Ohio State couldn't capitalize on those mistakes, but good teams will."

Sunday's 2 p.m. game is Gatorade Youth Day. The first 400 youth soccer players attending the match in uniform will receive a free squeeze bottle courtesy of Gatorade.

Cincy linebacker anxious to return

McDonald ready after knee injury

Cross country teams looking to beat KSU

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI – Less than a year after wrecking his knee, linebacker Ricardo McDonald could return to help the Cincinnati Bengals beef up their defense against the run.

McDonald, 24, is testing the surgically rebuilt left knee in practice this week. If all goes well, he could start Sunday at the right outside linebacker spot.

The San Diego Chargers, led by running back Natrone Means, rolled up 166 yards rushing last Sunday in the Chargers' 27-10 win. That dropped Cincinnati to 0-2 and 24th in the NFL against the rush.

The New England Patriots, who play the Bengals on Sunday, lead their running game with 250-pound Marion Butts, the former Chargers star.

McDonald could help the Bengals jam Patriots tight end Ben Coates at the line of scrimmage. Coates is the AFC's leading receiver with 17 catches.

McDonald, a 1992 fourth-round draft pick who became a starter in his rookie season, was inactive for the first two games this season. He is eager to return.

"I'm excited, I've waited a long time," said McDonald, who played in all four exhibition games. "I would say I'm nervous."

Linebackers coach Joe Pascale said McDonald looks as if he has gotten over some of the tentativeness that comes with reconstructive surgery.

McDonald tore the knee ligament nine months ago against the Los Angeles Rams, suffering an injury that commonly sidelines players for a year. He missed the season's two final games, but still was Cincinnati's second-leading tackler with 102 tackles.

"I'm ready mentally. I think the two games off were the best thing that ever happened to me," McDonald said.

Bengals offensive coordinator Bruce Coslet dismissed some grumblings by running backs Derrick Fenner and Steve Broussard, and several wide receivers, that they aren't getting the ball more.

The Bengals have been criticized for not trying to have quarterback David Klingler throw long passes.

Fenner carried the ball five times in the first half for 31 yards last week, but carried just twice in the second half. He shrugged when asked about it.

"Sure, I want the ball more. Yeah, I'd like to see us throw down field. That always opens up the running game," Fenner said.

The men's and women's cross country teams are both expecting to have successful weekends against Kent State.

"We're really expecting to win at Kent," said women's head coach Steve Price. "Kent isn't as strong as they have been in the past, so I really think this is a good opportunity for us."

While the course at Kent offers the BG runners a different outlook because of the hilly terrain, Price said that his team should be able to meet the challenge.

"Cross country is a very difficult sport because a lot of it is mental," Price said. "I don't really think that Kent will have an advantage because it's their home course. We just have to stay focused on what kind of race we want to run and we should be okay."

According to Price, the strategy is very simple for a one-on-one meet like Saturday's.

"Our first goal and No. 1 strategy is for each girl to beat her counterpart," Price said. "I would also like to see our top five runners to finish within 60 seconds [of each other]."

The men's team is also looking to capture a victory against the Golden Flashes, despite losing soundly to Mid-American Conference foe Ohio University in a meet last weekend.

"We're expecting a very close meet, but in our minds we're expecting to win," said head coach Sid Sink.

Sink said that although matches early in the season don't count as much as those at the end, a win at Kent would do wonders for his young squad's confidence.

"We really don't want to push them too hard, but at the same time you need to have some success in order to help that confidence level. When you run with confidence you run a lot better race."

Like Price, Sink also stressed that it would be very important for the men to stick to their game plan.

"It's really important that we follow our plan. Otherwise, we might not run as well," Sink said. "We want to go out, stay relaxed and be competitive for the first two or three miles, but we also want to save something for that fourth mile."

Gooden fails drug test

by Bob Greene
The Associated Press

NEW YORK – Dwight Gooden, his Cy Young-winning days a dimming memory and his career already in doubt because of a drug suspension, faces additional disciplinary measures after again failing drug tests.

The New York Mets said Thursday that Gooden "has committed additional violations of both his aftercare program and the commissioner's office drug policy."

"After the investigation has been concluded, including receipt of a report from baseball's medical advisor, a determination will be made regarding Gooden's status," the commissioner's office said in a statement.

"We're still trying to absorb all of this," Ed Lynch, a special assistant in the Mets front office, said during a telephone news conference. He said Gooden's future with the Mets has become a secondary consideration.

"Our concern right now is for Dwight as a person, his concern as a human being," Lynch said. "We're rooting for him to get his life back in order."

Gooden's agent, Jim Neader said the No. 1 priority is to get Gooden's life straightened out, "then think about baseball after that."

"I personally think he'd like to play there again," the agent said.

Gooden voluntarily checked into the Smithers Center for treatment of cocaine addiction in 1987 and missed a month of the season. He has been regularly tested since then.

On June 28, he was suspended for 60 days without pay when he failed two random drug tests.

"I'm truly sorry it happened," Gooden said then. "I want to apologize to the club, my teammates and to the people of New York. I want to thank everyone for their past support. I will be back stronger and better. I want to earn your respect back."

Women's club team hosts Sunday match

The BG News

The Bowling Green women's club soccer team – which hopes to become a varsity team next season – hosts its first home event of the season Sunday.

BG will take on the Golden Flashes of Kent State in front of Doyt Perry Stadium. Game time is 11 a.m.

The Falcons are coming off an impressive 3-0 victory over Ball State last weekend.

Because of NCAA regulations, Bowling Green will be looking to add another women's varsity sport next year. The University currently has 19 varsity teams – 10 men's teams and only nine teams playing host to women athletes.

While the current women's soccer team is only club status, it is currently playing varsity teams from various surrounding universities.

The 22-player team will first play a Saturday match at Eastern Michigan where it will try to post its second win of the season.

ders would give Atlanta a chance to match the best offer from another club.

"If the [money] is what it's rumored to be ... then I know we can be competitive with that kind of offer," Atlanta coach June Jones said.

Should Sanders sign with the 49ers, he would be the sixth defensive free agent added to the team. San Francisco (1-1) earlier added Norton, Plummer, Toi Cook, Rickey Jackson and Richard Dent.

San Francisco coach George Seifert has called Sanders the best defensive back in the game today.

Sanders had been seeking a long-term, $4 million-a-year deal, but apparently has conceded the NFL's $34.6 million salary cap makes that impossible. He earlier rejected offers from New Orleans, Miami and Detroit.

INSIDE FALCON FOOTBALL

Three years ago when Ryan Henry first put on a Bowling Green uniform his immediate football future didn't look too promising.

"After seeing Eric [White] play that first year it sure didn't look good for me until he graduated," Henry said. "I tried to use the time I was behind him as a learning experience and a chance to develop my skills a little more."

Over the last 12 games Henry has developed into one of the premier quarterbacks in the MAC.

Henry no longer has to answer questions about whether he will be able to fill White's shoes - it's obvious he already has.

Another giant step in Henry's career will be taken Saturday when he, and the rest of the Falcons, will battle Navy. Last season, Henry suffered through a 13-36 passing performance against the Midshipmen in a 27 - 20 loss.

A victory this weekend would go a long way in showing the MAC, as well as the rest of the nation just how far Henry has come.

Favorites:

"Quotable" RYAN HENRY

Why he came to BG:

"The coaching staff is really what sold me on BG - the way they recruited me. I had a couple of people who kind of negatively recruited. They most talked about what other schools had or didn't have.

"The thing that I really found attractive about Bowling Green and its coaches was that they just pushed the University. They only talked about what Bowling Green had and what they planned to do - I really liked that."

Thoughts after being named starting quarterback:

"That's what I had strived for ever since I started in Pee Wee. I kind of wanted to pinch myself to make sure that it was all really happening. It was really neat. Basically, it was a dream come true."

Spare time fillers:

"Sega's really a big thing in my house, so that's definitely one of the things I like to do. But, I'm a big country music fan so I took a guitar lesson this past summer. I'm pretty bad at guitar so anytime I get a chance to practice, it's a good way to take up some time."

Best/worst part of being a Division I quarterback:

"It's nice because you're in the spotlight all the time and any quarterback who tells you that he doesn't like the attention is probably lying.

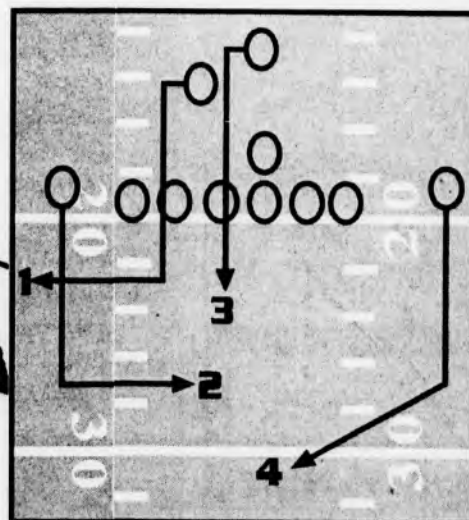

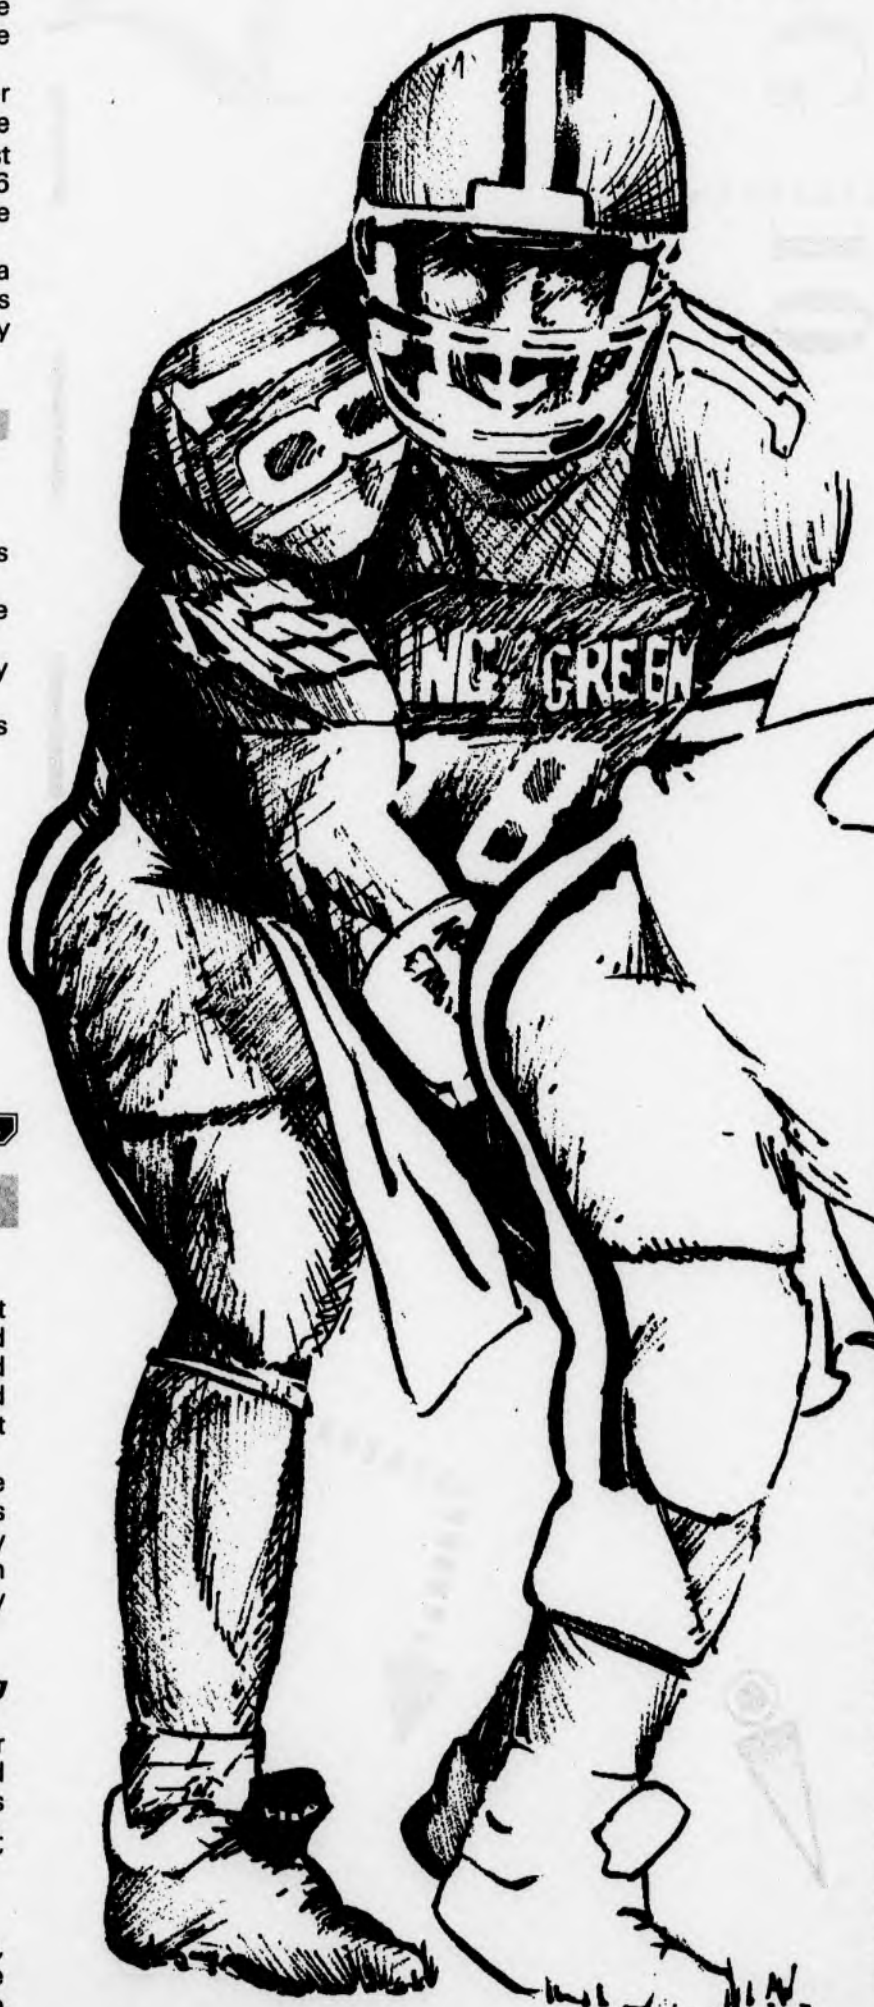

"But, then again, you have to shoulder the blame when things don't go your way. But, I wouldn't say that's too bad. Really, I don't even know what's bad about it."

RYAN HENRY

Awards and Accomplishments:

- 1994 - Eclipsed the Bowling Green single game passing accuracy mark (91.7%) with a 13-14 (92.9%) performance against Akron
- 1993 - Threw for a career high 286 yards against Central Michigan
- High School:
  - Career passing leader at McKinley High School with over 3,000 yards
  - Started more games at McKinley than any other quarterback in history
- 1990 - Named the top player in Stark County by the Akron Beacon Journal
  - First team all county selection

Description of play and responsibilities:

"This is a pretty basic play for us. My first read is to the fullback in the flat. If they jump the fullback that opens up the area for the deep in route - most of the times that would be Rameir [Martin].

"If they bring a linebacker over to cover that, after a play-action fake we have the tailback hooking up over the middle. If for some reason the tailback would have to stay in and protect then the last read is the inside post. That's the one that we hit for a homerun last year against Akron."

editor's letter

Sex.

The word stands alone, as does its meaning.

The thought of all the possibilities its vast definitions entail bring instinctive feelings and thoughts to the surface. As humans we reason with its purpose, as animals, we covet its pleasures. Such a dual standard!

In our youth, sex dominates our lives like never before. It drives our hopes, our ambitions, and our craziness. But with the insanity that accompanies the inflated instinct comes a responsibility to reason and restrain the animal within. In this day of ever-growing STDs and AIDS cases, control and responsibility of one's drives not only is an act of maturity, it is also a crucial step in possibly saving one's life.

Its irony is tragic.

Andy Dugan
editor

Chowin' Down on the Corner

Corner Grill is Greasy Haven for Late Night Burger Fanatics

by Michael Zawacki

A young student, probably a freshman, naive in the ways of Bowling Green's night life wandered into the Corner Grill Friday night. He found a seat, sat down and waited for service. The waitress arrived and the young man, in an innocent voice, asked, "Does this place have a menu?"

What this young man doesn't realize is that The Grill, as it is commonly known, isn't a menu kind of place. Instead a list of a dozen or so items are spelled out in black plastic letters on bulletin boards on both sides of the establishment. The second hand on a big, red square Coca-Cola wall clock keeps pace with the relentless passage of time. A large stainless steel refrigerator towers behind the counter. On top is a sign attached to a hand grenade with a number laced into the pin which simply says, "Compliant Department, take a number."

Windows constructed of glass blocks turn downtown Bowling Green into an El Greco landscape. You see, The Grill is as unique as its clientele. It is so many different things to the immense number of people who go in and out of the one door during any given week.

The Grill is a meeting place. Open 24 hours a day, except Sunday, the smell of eggs, coffee, grease and cigarette smoke permeate the air and tempt the palate. Signs written in neon marker state that loitering will not be tolerated, though The Grill's atmosphere is the perfect catalyst for this forbidden activity. Students can be found studying. Third shift workers, either waiting to go or coming from work, get that last meal in. Police, sitting on worn stools bolted to the floor, take a break with a cup of coffee at the counter. Friends catch up on lost time. A young man and women sit alone in a booth the color of lime sherbert and fall in love over yellow plastic glasses of Cherry Coke.

It's an eating place. If Grill patrons were asked what to order they would say one of two things: the Breakfast Special or the Tater Boy fries. The Breakfast Special is a culinary work of art: two eggs how you like them, toast, homefries and, at an extra charge, bacon, sausage or ham. In short, you will never have anything like this. The meal melts in the mouth. The tongue's taste buds verge on an orgasmic overload with every mouthful. It probably is the best meal in town for only $1.99. Coffee is extra, but definitely a must. It is rumored that alumni specifically come back to Bowling Green just for the Breakfast Special.

Certain eccentric food historians have traced the origins of the Tater Boy back to ancient Greece and Mount Olympus.

Tater, the Greek God of fried foods, cholesterol and heart attacks, apparently angered Zeus by offering him french fries which were not only spicier on the outside, but slightly hotter than the fires of hell on the inside. In a fit of rage and lightning bolts, Zeus turned all of Tater's sons into the spicy fries and sent them to Earth to plague drunken college students at 2:30 in the morning. A word of advice: the only way to squelch the napalm like heat is to douse them with lots and lots of catsup.

The Grill is Mecca at the end of a long beer pilgrimage. On any given night at 1:55 a.m. a buzz comes over every downtown bar. "You wanna go to The Grill?" "A group of us are meeting over at The Grill," "Grill anyone?" "Dude, I think I've got enough change for a Breakfast Special!" By 2:15 it's standing room only. One guy is in the kitchen frying eggs, dropping Tater Boys into a basket of hot grease, slapping bacon onto the grill. The waitress, typically only one during the busiest times, dance around customers and back and forth from behind the counter with a pot of coffee in one hand and a platter of food in another. Student's feast on their food, get in that last laugh of the evening with their friends and then head home to bed, leaving open another stool or booth for a different set of students and the cycle begins again.

The Grill has a 50's diner atmosphere. It's a place you expect James Dean or Marlon Brando would have walked in to for a late night cup of Joe and a Camel. To say that The Corner Grill is a greasy spoon is to pay it one of the highest possible comments.

The Grill is a piece of America. It's place you can go where the coffee is always hot, the food always tastes good and the service is as fast as they can get it to you and without any hassel. In an age of fast food, sterile impersonal service and corporate conformity, The Corner Grill provides an with the quiz. Indeed.

This week, in honor of the theme idea, the salty twist will be throwing tunes evolving around...yep, you guessed it....SEX! What a concept, huh?

This week's champion is Matt Shiverdecker, of 224 Chapman Hall. Matt answered all 10 questions correctly, and these were the answers: "Der Komissar," was by After the Fire; "A View to a Kill" was Duran Duran's James Bond hit; David Lee Roth sang "Yankee Rose"; Billy Joel sang "It's Still Rock and Roll To Me"; Prince sang with Sheena Easton; Dee-Lite's hit was "Groove Is In The Heart"; Tommy Tutone sang "867-5309/Jenny"; Talking Heads sang "Burning Down the House"; AC/DC sang "Money Talks"; and Dire Straits sang "Money For Nothing." Matt, like all of Pretzel Boy's winners, will enjoy a free promotional cassette or compact disc, compliments of Madhatter Music Co., 143 East Wooster. Be sure to turn in all entries into 210 WEST HALL by Wednesday at NOON. And so to all the sexy people, here's the quiz:

1. Who sang "I'm too Sexy" in 1992?
2. What former Wham! member sang the controversial "I Want Your Sex" in 1987?
3. What "Bad" group hit it with "Sex You Up" in 1991?
4. What artist had a buffet of songs you know by heart, including "Why Don't We Get Drunk and Screw"?
5. "Like A Virgin" was this diva's second album title as well as one of many of her hits.
6. "Sexual Healing" was this Motown artist's last big hit before his father shot him.
7. This meaty singer cried out "Let me sleep on it..." to his woman's demand for commitment in this classic tune.
8. This American Fool sang "Hurts So Good" in 1982.
9. Bon Scott and this band sang "The social papers say I've got great balls of fire" in what song?
10. What current NIN song includes the line "I want to F@#$ you like an animal"?

When you party, remember to...

Dawn: What's your name?
John: John Grey.

Dawn: Are you a student at the University?
John: No.

Dawn: Are you a resident of BG?
John: Yeah.

Dawn: Have you always lived in BG?
John: No, I've lived all over.

Dawn: All over Ohio?
John: Yeah, Ohio.

Dawn: There's been a lot of research about whether homosexuality is biological or not. What do you think?
John: I never chose to be gay. I started having a preference. I never had one toward women. I don't understand bisexuals, (chuckles). To me it's like it is one or the other. Why both? For me it's always been just one kind, one gender.

Dawn: What did you think about Clinton's policy with homosexuals in the army?

John: I don't think - I mean I am glad that gays can be in the army, but I don't think it is a matter of sexual preference. It is a matter of if you can do the job. Are you going in there trying to escape? You got no money, you got nowhere to go, you got no home or whatever. Are you going in to escape or are you there do to something? If you are going there to do something, if you are gay or not gay, who cares? Just do the job.

Dawn: BG is an extremely conservative area. Have you ever run into any discrimination here?
John: Yeah, all the time in BG - not severe things, but minimal things.

Like if I'm wearing my earring like this (points to his left ear), I see glances. It's not just like people give me an 'I'm-looking-at-you-and-minding-my-own-business look.' The glances are like ... (gives contempt-filled glance). Me and one of my best friends were dancing at Uptown and a guy said take that s-- somewhere else. And he's partially deaf and said 'What?' Someone signed it to him and we kept dancing. And the guy kept saying stuff. I signed what the guy was saying. That was major discrimination at Uptown.

Dawn: Do you find that you are more discriminated against from students or residents?
John: Both. Where I live, this one person, like, if he is coming toward the stairs to go down from his apartment, if he sees me coming up, he'll go the other way with that look on his face. It's like I am not going to touch him, I want to get to my apartment. My apartment is the first one here. And a lot of people don't want to think about or deal with homosexuality. Me, I have bumper stickers in my window that say we don't want more rights - we want equal rights. But that's not all I have. I have a picture of the Lion King. I'm really into movies and stuff.

Dawn: Really?
John: Yeah. A lot of neighbors in that complex, a lot of people in BG, they don't understand it, though. It's different - it scares them.

Dawn: Any other discrimination?
John: I went to Foodtown and had, what is it called, those special braids coming down, and someone said they couldn't decide if I was a woman or a man and my friend heard him. It's just all over - there's prejudice in town.

Dawn: Are you working for political rights for homosexuals?

John: I used to do the phone lines and I used to be very into LAGA, but it got too political and there was less of the support. Now it's they are getting more into the support. This is my second meeting back. I don't really do that much for gay rights because I think sometimes more attention is bad attention. It depends how people go around getting the attention - having signs and stuff. I went on a march and we had signs and were screaming 'We deserve this and we deserve that.' I don't think that is positive attention. I think that is a lot of negative attention. There's really in Bowling Green not much you can do to try to improve the gay rights around here because you can't change people, you can only change yourself. And if you know you're gay and accept your gay, that's okay, but it doesn't have to be put on other people.

Dawn: Where do you work?
John: I don't.

Dawn: Have you ever been discriminated against at work in the past?

John: I haven't worked in a while. Every once in a while, the looks I get from the public at me instead of toward me - I experience that weekly. I've experienced that in AA in Bowling Green. I've experienced that sitting in Grounds For Thought just shooting the s-- with a friend. If I'm in Ben Franklin looking for crafts, 'cause I make crafts. People look at me weird like, 'What is he doing buying doll hair? What is he doing buying this and that?' I experience it anywhere. Dancing - I can't go dancing if it is with a guy here, which leads me to go to more unhealthy places, which I believe the bars are maybe not unhealthy. I guess I think all bars are unhealthy unless you are going with a friend to have fun.

In the Flesh: Sex has

An on Campus Call of the Wild

College Life offers Students an ideal environment for Breeding

College is a place of discovery. Personalities emerge, identities unfold and self awareness peaks. It is also a time for a sexual explosion.

Hormones race and newly-developed bodies itch with a desire for the opposite sex. College is the perfect environment for sexual exploration and discovery. For some students, it is the first time in their limited lives that they are away from their parent's watchful eyes. Sexual expression can be vented on the canvas of the Bowling Green nightlife. It would be naive to deny that one-nightstands, or "hooking up" do not result after a few drinks, some good lines and the right looks. Sexuality is used here to sate the need for adventure, to orgasm as no one has orgasmed before.

"People in college are now past their adolescence and their sexuality has become heightened," said Jeanne Wright, University director of health education. "College provides more opportunity for sexual relations without parental consent."

The college atmosphere also allows people to discover their sexual orientation.

Campus life offers a more secure atmosphere for people to "come out."

Wright said statistics show that homosexual males have more frequent sexual experiences during their pre adolescent and teen years, while females experiences increase during their late teens to thirties.

Sexual orientation has a wide continuum, Wright said. Very few people are considered exclusively heterosexual or exclusively homosexual. People may have an attraction towards someone of the same sex or prefer to be with the same sex. The question is whether they act on these feelings.

For couples committed in an exclusive relationship, sex is an intimate form of communication. Others find the absence of sexual relations to be fulfilling.

Sex.

Just the word makes the palms sweat, the pulse quicken and the throat go dry and tight. A taboo has always hovered over the subject of intercourse. The fact is that everyone does or will do at one time or another. The incentive of the orgasm is enough to encourage people to partake in the forbidden pleasures.

"Sexual activity and arousal raise the endorphine levels in the brain," Wright said. "It's a natural high."

Double standards are always prevalent: a promiscuous male is a hero, a promiscuous female is a whore. It is a fact though that a majority of the college student population, that is people 19 to 21, are engaging in some sort of sexual activity.

"Statistics show that overall, by the age of 20, 80 percent have engaged in sexual intercourse," Wright said.

This leaves a few questions for those who fall into that age group and are sexually active. Is there such a thing as not enough sex, and how much sex is too much sex. Is their a workable definition of a healthy sex life for people 18 to 21?

Wright said the 80 percent statistic is not a definition to base a healthy sex life on, and the frequency of sexual encounters is by no means part of that definition.

She said people should not become frustrated if they are not as sexually active as their peers. Men and women may experience sexual pressure indirectly from more promiscuous friends. They may start to question their ability to perform in a sexual situation. They start to wonder "if I'm not doing it, can I?" Another form of pressure is generated from myths pertaining to penis and breast size.

"Size has nothing to do with one's ability to perform or to provide one's partner with pleasure," Wright said. She uses an analogy of a journey to explain that all good things come with time.

"Imagine your in a car on the freeway and people in faster cars are passing you by," Wright said. "Soon you start to feel frustration because you want to go as fast as they are. A ways down the highway you notice those cars that past you by have crashed on the side of the road and they'll never reach their destination. It may take you longer, but you eventually get to where you want to go."

She stresses that everyone should progress at a pace which they feel comfortable. Sexual satisfaction and a healthy sex life is an individualized concept. Wright said some people may feel comfortable living a very promiscuous lifestyle, while others are content in a monogamous relationship or with celibacy.

Wright said it is difficult to define exactly what a normal or healthy sex life is. She said sexual satisfaction is individualized.

"People use sex for many different things — solely for pleasure, intimacy and even procreation," Wright said. "You've got to know what the boundaries are and feel comfortable with them."

She said she believes the three criteria for a healthy sex life are that it is consensual, satisfying and non-exploitive.

"No one needs to be exploited," she said.

There are other ways for partners to engage in intimacy that don't involve sexual intercourse.

"Sexual intimacy is very healthy," Wright said. "But it does not necessarily mean sexual intercourse with the exchange of bodily fluids. Couples can engage in massage fantasy, exploring each other's body parts and even masturbation."

Sexuality is a natural part of being a human being. The need to be with intimate with one another is as strong as our need to eat, sleep and exist.

A wise man once said: "Love is not a race, but a dance. Just because you finish first doesn't mean you've won."

Passion Might Burn

The term "sexually transmitted disease" (STD) can refer to more than 20 illnesses, all transmitted through sexual contact, such as the exchange of body fluids - semen, vaginal fluid, and blood. STDs can also be transmitted from a mother to a baby, and some STDs, like herpes, can be transmitted by kissing or by coming in close contact with infected areas. Anyone who is having sex can get a sexually transmitted disease.

The only way to not contract an STD is to not have sex. If you don't want to give up having sex, you should take precautions to reduce your risk of getting an STD.

- Having sex with only one faithful and uninfected partner reduces the risk. The risk of contracting an STD increases with the number of partners you have, and increases much more if you have sex with an infected person.
- Always using a condom during all forms of sex (anal, vaginal, and oral) can protect you by preventing contact with skin and bodily fluids that carry infections. Condoms must be used properly and each and every time during sexual intercourse to help reduce the risk of contracting STDs.
- Since Nonoxynol-9 has been found to kill many STD-carrying bacteria and viruses, use spermicidal foams, creams, and jellies containing this chemical in combination with condoms.
- Anal sex and oral sex without a condom should not be practiced unless you are having sex with only one faithful and uninfected sexual partner.

Below are ten of the most common STDs, their method of contraction, symptoms, and treatment.

Syphilis is bacteria called "spirochetes" that usually enter the body through sexual contacts. Once inside, they enter the bloodstream and infect vital organs. Syphilis is spread through sexual contact, including oral and anal sex with someone infected with syphilis. Symptoms of syphilis occur in two stages. During the first stage, 1 to 12 weeks after having sex, a painless reddish-brown sore appears in the mouth or on the sex organs. This sore may last up to five weeks, but when it goes away, you still have syphilis. The second stage may show up anywhere from 6 weeks to 6 months later, and includes rashes anywhere on the body and flu-like feelings like sore throat and fevers. Syphilis is treated with large doses of penicillin (or other antibiotic) for as long as needed to kill all the bacteria.

Chlamydia is a virus that causes infections in urinary and reproductive organs: NGU (Non-gonococcal urethritis) in men and PID (Pelvic Inflammatory Disease) in women. Chlamydia is spread through sexual intercourse, including oral and anal sex, with someone infected with chlamydia. In women, the symptoms include discharge and between-period bleeding from the vagina, and pain and burning sensations during urination. Men experience a white discharge from the penis, and pain and burning sensation during urination. Chlamydia is treated with antibiotics.

Gonorrhea is an infection caused by gonococcus bacteria that live in dark, warm, moist places in the body. It is spread through sexual intercourse, including anal and oral sex, with someone who is infected with gonorrhea. Women's symptoms include thick yellow or white vaginal discharge, painful urination, extremely painful periods, and lower abdomen cramps. Men experience a thick yellow or white drip from the penis, and painful or burning sensation during urination. Gonorrhea is treated with antibiotics. Chlamydia often occurs with gonorrhea, so both conditions should be checked at the same time.

Herpes Simplex Virus-II are blister like sores that appear on and in the penis, vagina, and anus; and in some cases in the mouth. It is spread by sexual intercourse, including oral and anal sex with someone infected with herpes. Some people have no symptoms of herpes, but if symptoms do occur, they include flu-like feelings, small painful blisters on the sex organs or mouth, and itching and burning where these blisters appear. There is no cure for herpes. Only have sex when herpes attacks and always use condoms. Never have sex when the herpes is active or in the shedding stage.

AIDS - Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome is caused by HIV, the human immuno-deficiency virus that attacks and destroys the body's immune system, leaving the persons open to infection and many fatal diseases. HIV is spread through sexual intercourse, including oral and anal sex with an HIV infected person. It can also be spread by sharing IV drug needles, and from a mother to her baby while still in the womb or during birth. You may not be able to tell if you are infected with HIV - the only way to find out if you are HIV+ or HIV- is to have a blood test done that detects the presence of antibodies to HIV in your blood. If you are infected with HIV, you do not know when or if you will develop AIDS. At this time, there is no cure for AIDS.

Hepatitis B is the most dangerous of the hepatitis viruses. It is spread by having sex with someone infected with Hepatitis B or from contaminated blood, such as through sharing IV drug needles. Signs of Hepatitis B include loss of appetite, weakness, nausea, vomiting, stomach pain, and yellowing of the skin or eyes. These are signs of liver damage caused by the virus. There is no cure for Hepatitis B, but pills or shots can be given to help control the liver damage. There now exists a Hepatitis B Vaccine that prevents the transmission of the Hepatitis B virus. It is given in a series of three shots over a span of six months.

Venereal Warts are wartlike bumps caused by a virus and grow in both dry and moist areas of the body. Venereal warts are spread during sexual intercourse, including anal and oral sex with someone who has venereal warts. Venereal warts are small, bumpy warts on the sex organs that do not go away. Warts can be removed with special ointment, frozen off with dry ice, or burned off with an electric needle and local anesthetic.

Pubic Lice or Crabs are parasites that live in the hair around the penis or vagina. Crabs can be passed on through sexual contact, and also from infested towels, bedding, or clothing. Symptoms of crabs include severe itching and blood on underclothes where the crabs have gotten under the skin. Over-the-counter and prescription lotions, creams, and other preparations will kill crabs.

Scabies are small bugs that burrow under the skin. Scabies is spread by close sexual contact and close physical contact. Scabies shows itself in reddish zigzag furrows under the skin, usually in the genital areas, and is accompanied by painful itching. It is treated with prescription creams and lotions.

Trichomoniasis is caused by tiny parasites and causes vaginal infections in women and urethra infections in men. It is spread through sexual contact with an infected person, and damp clothing or towels shared with an infected person. Women's symptoms include greenish-yellow discharge, painful urination, inflammation in genital areas, and lower abdomen pain. Men may experience a discharge from the penis. "Trich" can live in the body for years and never show any symptoms. The medication Flagyl is used to treat trichomoniasis.

Getting Testing and Treatment for Sexually Transmitted Diseases in Bowling Green

The BGSU Student Health Service and the BGSU Women's Health Clinic provide testing and treatment for a wide range of STDs, including herpes, syphilis, and gonorrhea. They also provide free, anonymous HIV testing, which includes pre- and post-test counseling. For more information or an appointment, call the Student Health Service and the Women's Health Clinic at 372-2271.

Planned Parenthood (920 N. Main St.) offers STD testing, diagnosis, and treatment for both men and women, with the fee adjusted to income. They also offer free and anonymous HIV testing Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 9am to 3pm. For either STD testing or the HIV test, you must call for an appointment at 354-3540.

The STD information above was collected from material provided by the BGSU Student Health Services, Planned Parenthood, and the Bowling Green Health Department, as well as The New Our Bodies, Ourselves by the Boston Women's Health Book Collective.

Jack Logan Bulk Medium Cool - Twin/Tone Records

When most bands and performers send out demo tapes, they include maybe four or five songs, just enough to give the A&R people a sampling of what their sound is all about. No so for Jack Logan. When he sent his demo to Peter Jeperson of Twin/Tone Records, it consisted of nearly one hundred songs spread over three tapes. Jeperson was so floored, he began digging through Logan's tape archives of more than 600 songs, recorded over a period of fourteen years. The result is an amazing 2-CD set (neatly packaged in a single CD case) containing 42 songs, running more than two and a half hours long, and appropriated entitled Bulk.

Logan's music runs the gamut from simple guitar-flavored folk tunes ("Heart Attack on the Prairie"), to honkytonk ("Just Go Away"), to fuzzed out distortion ("Opposite Direction"), and blues ("Lazy Girl Blues"). However, there is an overall feeling of gloom hanging over Bulk. Lots of lyrics about broken relationships, isolation, desperation, alcohol (ab)use, and the overall depression of being stranded in the Midwest for a large

Baring It All! Unrated, 85 min. OOO 1/2

When you watch a movie that you know contains sex, you may find yourself anticipating seeing your favorite stars totally naked. Now, thanks to Peekaboo Home Video, you can see all your favorite actors in the buck...in one movie. Baring It All! is the incredibly fascinating documentary which, although unrated, contains enormous quantities of language, nudity, and sexual situations.

Baring It All! features the best sex and nude scenes from stars of yesterday and today. All the obvious stars are here: Madonna, Sharon Stone, and Jennifer Jason Leigh to name a few. But what makes this video so interesting is the practically unknown footage it features. You can see how Sylvester Stallone really earned the nickname "The Italian Stallion" by seeing clips from some of his Italian porno films. Other shockers come from such actresses as Marilyn Monroe, Jayne Mansfield, and Lynda Carter (of TV's Wonder Woman).

The only real weakness of this documentary is how most of the footage was taken off of the video versions of the actual movies and the quality is sometimes extremely poor.

Threesome R, 98 min. OOO

After seeing the movie Threesome, don't be surprised if you think to yourself 'Wow, this movie was only rated R?' because even I was a little bit shocked by this movie's liberal use of profanity and sexual connotations. But, Threesome manages to be a frequently hilarious sex-themed comedy from the mind of Andrew Fleming (Bad Dreams).

Threesome shares with us the lives of two newly acquainted male roommates who after several days in their dormitory suite meet their third roommate who mistakenly turns out to be a girl named Alex (Lara Flynn Boyle, The Temp). The university sees the error but due to a housing shortage they can't do anything about the problem for eight to twelve weeks. The three eventually become friends and Alex falls in love with Eddy (Josh Charles, Dead Poets Society) who is confused about his sexuality and can't figure out if he's in love with her.

This sets up an almost endless stream of sexual tension, frustration, and discussion between the three which gets pretty detailed and explicit. But no matter how rough the language is at times, there are always laughs and clever scenes to follow.

Threesome is by no means the greatest movie ever, but it is fairly fresh and original. It also lacks that "teen exploitation" feel of movies like The Breakfast Club and Some Kind of Wonderful. This movie also earns bonus points for being well photographed plus it is edited to the perfect length, never dragging on while at the same time making sure we are not left short.

The Adventures of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert Original Motion Picture Soundtrack Polydor Records

Disco fever is alive on the soundtrack of one of the most unique movies to hit the big screen in a long time. Three drag queens travel across the Australian Outback, and along the way they perform intricate dance numbers to some of the "grooviest" disco tunes of the 70s.

You'd better get your platform shoes, you're going to need them to "shake your booty" to tunes like "Go West," "I Love The Nightlife," "I Will Survive" and "Shake Your Groove Thing."

Some of the tunes have been remastered to bring them into the age of technology. The disco seventies meet CD quality - no 8-track scratch on these cuts.

Just listening to this 19-song CD reminded me of when I was just a wee young child. My father would put disco hits on the high-fi and I would dance around the living room in my little aqua leisure suit doing my best Saturday Night Fever impression. Oh, those were the days.

While were are in the midsts of a seventies revival, Priscilla offers the listener tunes which might have slipped into the gorge of infinity.
