Dance-opera to emphasize fear, betrayal

Heather Getschow

Domestic violence is a problem that is often kept secret due to deceit and fear. However, the University will soon be lightening the issue through the arts.

The dance-opera, composed by Dr. Heather Getschow, professor of musical arts, will take place Thursday, April 14, at 8 p.m. in Ribeau Hall of the Moore Musical Arts Center. It is free and open to the public.

The opera will explore the themes of deceit, trust, betrayal, and heroism; as well as ubiquitous responsibility associated with a society that has allowed the victim of sexual and domestic violence to remain in silence, according to Celeste Haraszti, artistic director.

"The live performance of the dance-opera tells the story and compels the attention of people," Haraszti said. "It initiates the discussion between the community, the survivors, the families and artists."

Candidate stands alone for Board's final vote

A vote to determine the next University of Findlay president will be taken next Wednesday, May 3, by the Board of Trustees. Out of the three candidates that were asked to come to campus for visits, the only candidate scheduled to be at the University on Friday, April 14, will be Dr. Larry Ribeau, currently vice president of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

The Trustee body meets in executive session on Monday to vote on the final contract of the new president. "The meeting will take place at 10:30 a.m. in the Found Hall. The ceremony will be televised live on W28, the University's closed circuit channel," said Waddell.

"We have left as the only candidate when Lee Jones re-" Stephenson said. "He had no "personal reason" for removing himself from the race."

Lester Barter, executive assistant to the President, said he had no reason to believe Jones was going to remove himself when he visited last weekend.

"It was an obvious situation. Both of these individuals were first class academics and definitely fine human beings," Barter said. "Unfortunately, it is the University that is the key. Ribeau is the name he is going to pursue to title position."" (See Mackinnon-Slaney, vice dean of women of the Pennsylvania State University, Department of sociology, for comments on this story.)

"It think Ribeau is going to remove himself when he visits this weekend," Barter said. "He is an able leader who has a vision for the University as a learning community."

Ribeau is currently vice president for academic affairs at Pennsylvania State University, University Park.

The Colleges, which sponsored the event, is a project sponsored by the Victims' Advocacy Program of the University of Findlay. The event is being cosponsored by the Army Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC).

Professor arrested for stalking

Jay Young

University Professor Benjamin Morse was arrested twice in the past week for allegedly harassing a University student.

On Friday, a University student filed a complaint at the Bowling Green Municipal Court against Morse, a tenured professor, in the department of natural and social sciences, charging him with stalking by making visual contact.

The University issued a restraining order on Friday, preventing any contact between Morse and the student.

On Monday, a University director of public relations said a warrant was issued for the former Faculty Senate chairman's arrest on Monday for allegedly violating the restraining order. He said Morse, who teaches several classes at Pennsylvania College and one class at the University's campus, voluntarily went to the police department and was arrested and charged with violating the order court.

On Wednesday, he was released on bond.

He said Morse, who teaches several classes at Pennsylvania College and one class at the University's campus, voluntarily went to the police department and was arrested and charged with violating the order court.

"It is great to be recognized," said Kurt Landes, a sports management major. "It is also about taking and giving back." The finalists were initially nominated by organizations on campus. The finalists said they were honored to be nominated by their peers. "Because people go out of their way to recognize you, this award means that much more," said Jennifer Armstrong, a journalism major. "I think it shows the administration what is being done on campus." Both White and the finalists said they believe this award only recognizes outstanding students of today, but also of tomorrow. "These seniors are our future leaders," White said. "This looks at what can be done. Landes said he believes this is a foundation for future seniors. He said it gives others a chance to be recognized for their contributions to the University. "It is great to be recognized," said Kurt Landes, a sports management major. Eleven BG seniors vie for award

"This award shows that for some students, education is not just for going to class. It is also about taking and giving back." Sabrina White, assistant director of Alumni Affairs.

All the finalists are well-rounded University seniors, said Sabrina White, assistant director of Alumni Affairs.

"Students had to, at least, meet the minimum requirements of a 3.5 grade point average," White said. "Other than that, we were looking for a well-rounded student who has already been recognized by the University, and is strong in the areas of leadership, community and campus.

Once the finalists were chosen, an interviewing process took place to select the winner. Students were asked questions mainly about how they enhanced the University and prepared for the workplace.

"There are many different majors and personalities. This made the decision process difficult. The members of this year's committee consisted of Chris Kell, Richard Wause, Tina Stewart, Jeff Johnston and Katie Shanahan. "We had people very qualified, some very qualifying, and others brought a sense of realism," White said. "This helped to make the process better."

Several of the finalists said they expressed excitement about being nominated.

Arafat issues ultimatum

Leader orders militants to register guns or face collection

By Donia Ali-Alaray

The Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — Palestinian Attorney General Mahmoud Zahar said Wednesday that Hamas militants and the Islamic Jihad must register their weapons and hand them over to authorities or face arrest. He warned that the registration drive is a "high-stakes game" for Palestinian leaders, who are under pressure to end the current conflict with Israel.

"Tough measures will be taken against those who do not give up their weapons," Arafat said in a surprise move.

Arafat, under pressure from both the Israelis and Hamas militants, has vowed to act against those suspected of planning attacks against Israel.

Hamas and the Islamic Jihad have been accused of firing rockets and missiles at Israeli targets, but rejected Arafat's ultimatum.

"We have no intention of giving up our weapons," a Hamas spokesman said.

"We will continue our struggle against the occupation until we achieve our goals," he added.

Arafat said the registration drive is aimed at preventing the militants from using their weapons to attack Israel. He warned that anyone who fails to register their weapons will be arrested and tried in a secret court.

"Those who refuse to register their weapons will be held responsible for their actions," Arafat said.

The registration drive comes as the situation in Gaza remains tense, with clashes between Hamas and the Palestinian security forces.

Arafat has said he will take "drastic measures" to bring the militants under control.

The militants have been battling the Palestinians for years, with both sides accusing the other of attacks.

Arafat said the registration drive is a "necessary step" to ensure the safety of the Palestinian people.

"We are determined to take all necessary measures to protect the Palestinian people," he said.

The militants have rejected Arafat's ultimatum, saying they will continue their struggle against the occupation.

"We will never surrender our weapons," they said.

IRVING, Texas (AP) - The Buffalo Sabres have agreed to sign Brian Holzinger, the third baseman for the University of Michigan, to a three-year contract.

Holzinger, who began his career as a baseball player in 1982, had been hinting they might move. At Hollywood Park, which would be to keep the Rams in Los Angeles.

The Rams are currently located in St. Louis, and it stands to gain tremendous value in the second game.

Thome wants to be an everyday Indian

The Associated Press

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. - Third baseman Jim Thome of the Cleveland Indians believes he needs to be in the lineup every day to maintain his hitting and fielding. He appears to get that chance this baseball season.

"I've always been the kind of player that needs to play every day to maximize his hitting and fielding," Thome said. "At the end of the day, a player that needs to play every day is a player that needs to play every day."

"I played Manny quite a bit last year," Hargrove said. "He's here on a 15-day DL, so I'm going to give him 15 days and see how that goes."

"It's not just a matter of playing him, but I have to do what I can to help him. That's all we have," Hargrove said.

"He's our guy, our guy. We're going to work on the field," Hargrove said, "and it's the same with the hitting. There's nothing more important than that."

The Reds are trying not to put too much pressure on Jim Thome this spring. He's 29 years old, the team's third baseman.

"The way this team is built, it's not a pressure on him," said general manager Jim Bowden. "Whatever he does is a bonus."

Thome's role was in line to become the Reds' starting third baseman last spring. But he lasted up with another injury, and re-signed with the Indians, where he hit .278 and played in 117 games.

NEW YORK - Brett Butler, Todd Stottlemyre and another free-agent signing found itself on the sidelines Wednesday.

Andy Van Slyke is still waiting.

Butler, one of the major free-agent stories of the winter, got the biggest deal Tuesday, a $2 million, 1-year contract with the New York Mets. That's $1.1 million less than what the Reds were willing to pay him to remain in Cincinnati.

Infielder Randy Ready also returned to the New York Yankees. He will be worth $300,000, less than what the Reds were willing to pay him for his $1.15 million salary.

Pitcher Jered Weaver, who pitched last season with Cleveland, went to Texas for $550,000, less than a quarter of his $2.15 million salary.

California reached the Majors late in the season with pitchers from the farm system, and Mike Jettison, Sanderson in 38 and Heintzelin in 40.

"They're both guys who will get a chance to fit into the rotation," Angels manager Marcel Lachemann said.

Butler, among the top 10 outfielders in the game, was offered $35 million over 5 years by the Red Sox. He signed for $20 million with Cleveland in the off-season as a free agent.

Thome made just two errors in 128 starts at third base last spring. But he also hit .270 with 20 home runs and 52 runs batted in. Thome played about three-quarters of his games against left-handers last year. Against lefties, Thome had a .320 batting average with 20 home runs and 52 runs batted in.

Ex-Buckeye turns rich Viking

HELEN PRAIRIE, Miss. - Five years ago, the Minnesota Vikings spent $500 to grab Chris Carter off waivers. On Tuesday, they agreed to pay him more than any player in the history of the team.

Carter, who set an NFL record with 121 sacks last season, agreed to a contract extension that will pay him $12.5 million through 1998. That makes him one of the highest-paid receivers in the game and eclipses the $11.5 million contract the Vikings gave Chris Doleman in 1991.

"This is a time in my life that I can rejoice," said Carter, a former Ohio State player. "I've been able to overawe. The Vikings have believed in me when nobody else believed in me. I'm thankful for what they've done." Carter, who could have become a free agent when his old contract expired after the 1995 season, will earn $7.7 million next fall under the terms of the previous pact. His new deal includes a $2.7 million signing bonus that will be paid over the next two years.

The four-year average of $2.9 million is about $500,000, short of the yearly average of the five-year, $17 million contract Andre Rison recently signed with the Cleveland Browns. Rison is the NFL's highest-paid receiver.

"This shouldn't surprise anybody," Dave Huffman, Minnesota's former teammate.

"At the end of the year, his friends in Kansas City were telling me that Joe was just tired, really tired. This shouldn't surprise anybody."

SAP FRANCISCO - This time, Joe Montana is set to go.

Montana's long-rumored retirement from football is becoming fact early next week with a public sendoff in San Francisco, a source told The Associated Press on Tuesday night.

Montana's fans will be able to say goodbye to him in a ceremony downtown before his football career is formally wound up at a hometown gala to be attended by former teammates and executives of the San Francisco 49ers and the Kansas City Chiefs.

The ceremony is being coordinated by International Management Group, the company that has long represented Montana, an IMG representative told The AP.

Montana, in San Jose for a police benefit Tuesday night, said he still wants to talk to people with whom he's spent his football career.

"It's one of those things I have to sit back and look at," he said.

Friends and family of the quarterback will be in San Francisco for the ceremony, IMG said. The exact day has been decided because it will depend on when the participants can arrive, but likely will be Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday.

Montana, who spent two years with the Chiefs after leading the San Francisco 49ers to Super Bowl championships, is retiring at 38 because of injuries and at a time when he knew.
