Aeronotechnology students made a proposal to the college dean and staff to save the program in a meeting Tuesday night.

In a meeting of the Student Organization, they asked that last week's decision by the Aeronotechnology Program administration be reversed.

Jeff Rose, aeronotechnology major, said it was essential to the reversal is a complete search for a program director.

"We need someone to take the responsibility and get us back from the deficit and on the positive side of the budget sheet," Rose said.

Rose also said the students need to have some way to generate a viable revenue stream for the program.

"The students and staff want to develop a plan by increasing enrollment," Rose said.

"Increasing our student numbers will bring in additional revenue, which could help the program," Rose said.

Thomas Erickson, College of Technology dean, has said there will be another discussion between students and staff.

"Erickson told the audience in the meeting that the program can be re-invited, even with private donors.

"When you're trying to raise money for operational costs it's really difficult," Erickson said.

When you're trying to raise money to improve a program, something extra, some funding, can actually get things moving again.

"It's a little easier."

The students are also planning a drive-in movie this weekend.

"We're having some fun," Erickson said.

The movie, "The Great Barrier Reef," is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on the Education Building parking lot.

The Student Organization is also forming a community coalition to monitor the school's budget problems.

"We're not going to let the college get away with this," Erickson said.

"When the college administration makes decisions that are not in the best interests of the students, we are going to monitor them."

Erickson is also asking the students to come up with some ideas about how to increase enrollment.

"We need some ideas because the college is going to have to make some tough decisions," Erickson said.

"They need to know what they're going to get."}

Food, water scarce for Liberian refugees

Gray Spring

The Associated Press

A few hundred of the thousands of refugees from Liberia who have fled to west Africa were gathered Saturday for a leadership training workshop.

The camp is located in the seaside capital of Monrovia.

There were reports Tuesday that fighters loyal to Johnson were still inside the building where the meeting was held.

"We're going to have a leadership training workshop," Klinger said.

"The meeting is scheduled for 9 a.m. on the Education Building parking lot."}

Student leaders to host workshop at University Saturday

Vince Quintero

The BG News

Nearly 100 resident advisors and other student leaders will converge on the University Saturday for a leadership training workshop.

The RA Drive-in Workshop is now in its 17th year, according to Ron Klinger, head of the RA Committee.

The meeting for the workshop "is a place where students can prepare to succeed," according to Klinger.

Elizabeth Cobb, a residence hall director, and 97 students from 13 residence halls throughout Michigan and Ohio are expected to attend.

He is very pleased with the expected turnout.

"Spring is a busy semester for everyone," Cobb said.

"We're very lucky."}

The workshop will consist of various presentations and seminars focusing on leadership and development, according to Klinger.

Sergey Vilen, RA and Hall Director, will give a presentation about time management.

Kerry Willow, Brethel Road Hall director, will give a presentation about time management.

Willow, previously an RA and resident director, is in her fifth year with the RA Drive-in, but she has given an increasing emphasis on time management and

Senior reflects on jeans past

Oh my gosh! Another member of the class is now wearing jeans! Today, I was forced to listen as my classmate described his latest purchase - a pair of jeans that he had just bought for $25. It was a far cry from the days when I, like my classmates, wore only khaki pants or chinos.

I remember vividly the days when wearing jeans was considered unsuitable for school. In fact, I recall that my parents had forbidden me from wearing jeans to school. They believed that jeans were too casual and that wearing them would make me look like I didn't care about my appearance.

Yet, here I am today, forced to listen to another student's description of his new jeans. It's hard to believe that just a few years ago, wearing jeans to school was considered inappropriate.

In five years. For one I now go to classes more than half the time ing like you.

Last week's presentation of Lee Mun Wah's film "The Color of My Hair" in the movie workshop capped off a week in which racism again occupied my mind. Disturbing news items on white supremacists biding up in Montana and racist FRATI occurrences rekindled in me the fact that racism is alive and well living in our country.

Lee Mun Wah is fully aware of the issues that face her audience in his film in which eight men candidly discuss how race has affected their lives. The discourse focuses on the issue of integration itself, and what man is unable to comprehend about himself, instead of stirring up racial distinctions, how his past has affected their lives. Mike DeWine agree the attention in the Senate Judiciary statute was a major point of contention covered by any new immigration legislation. Some people who entered this country illegally, and-not those who followed the law and legal pathways, was at critical condition at Grant Medical Center in Columbus, hospital spokeswoman Sharron Travis said.

The plane was heading to University Airport in Athens, Ohio, from Meigs Field in Chicago, said Scott Hurh, a traffic control specialist for the Federal Aviation Administration office in Cleveland. He said earlier reports the plane was bound from Cleveland were incorrect.

Jerry Crowell, assistant manager for programs at Port Columbus International Airport, said the plane was at 9,000 feet when it started having engine trouble. It burst power and couldn't hold its altitude, he said.

But his press secretary, Bryan MacCurry, said Glenn, the Ohio Democrat, was backing Michigan Sen. Carl Levin, who was working on immigration legislation.

Glenn is descended from a similar Irish stock. His forebears emigrated from the late 1700s from County Cavan, in Ireland, counting both DeWine and Spence Abraham's proposal to give families the idea that legal and illegal immigration should be dealt with separately.

In speeches, news conferences and a newspaper column written for the Houston (Texas) Chronicle, he invoked the name of his immigrant great-great-grandfather, who left Ireland's County Galway on a cattle boat to move to the United States. 'It's pretty clear that Dennis DeWine came here with nothing but guts and ambition. He took a chance on him,' DeWine said.

Lawyer argues Kevorkian to be reliever of pain

The Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — The deaths of two women were only an "unfortunate secondary result" of Dr. Jack Kevorkian's attempt to relieve their suffering, his lawyer argued Tuesday at the start of Kevorkian's third assisted-suicide trial.

"He's no killer. He doesn't intend to kill. He doesn't have a wish to kill," said the evidence would show that "Dr. Kevorkian is not a criminal," said the prosecutor, Assistant Prosecutor Lawrence Bunting.

Fleger's and Bunting's opening statements were delivered Tuesday when Breck asked Circuit Judge David Breck to take himself off the case.

Breck had argued that Breck deemed Kevorkian's previous actions "non-negligent" or on an "acceptable" level of negligence, in the opening argument that was the jury was seated on Monday as the jury was seated on Monday.

The issue of intent and how it is explained to jurors is significant because of Kevorkian's argument that he intended only to relieve suffering. He was acquitted in both of his previous trials. In 1996, the other last month. Prosecutors argue that while his motive may have been to relieve pain, Kevorkian clearly knew that providing carbon monoxide for illegal relief would do, and that it was his intent. The nonprofit called another trial "the mother of all cases." Prosecutors maintaineven though Kevorkian committed acts that he knew were illegal, it was not the same as murder.

"You can't have the intent to invade a house unless you have a warrant in the world has heard of," Fieger said.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. -- White-collar defendants James and Susan McDougals have failed to set up their own Small Business Investment Company and were partners with then-Gov. Bill Clinton and Hillary Rodham Clinton in the Little Rock store. The government says SBA money in land developments.

The McDougals and Gov. Jim "Buddy" Tucker never followed up with the government activity, that's within the rules prohibited. Tucker's company did in fact go through the government says SBA prohibited the use of SBA money in land developments. Tucker's company was in fact going to the government said so in court, the evidence was barred by the federal government to support small business development. Tucker also said during a break that he wanted to improve property already purchased.SBA ruled.

"They don't want you speculating. They don't want you to be buying land and building "for appreciation," McDougal said. "If you're changing the character of it, by engaging in a business activity, that's within the purview of the regulations." Tucker lawyer W.H. "Buddy" Sutton said during a break that the paper Tucker wrote were nothing more than a piece of paper to follow SBA rules. "To say that everybody that was involved in that that every single and every regulation involved was an unfair burden to have," he said.

At the time the McDougals applied to open an SBA-backed company, they already owned the Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan and were partners with then-Gov. Bill Clinton and Hillary Rodham Clinton in the Little Rock store. The McDougals also were involved in other land developments. The government challenges portions of a loan Hale made to former President Clinton, who has not been involved in the case.

ALICE, Texas -- The Ebola virus that struck two monkeys at a research center in Texas shared the same strain that killed hundreds of people in Africa last year, with virtually no threat to humans, health officials said Tuesday.

"Nobody's sick. There's not a single case of any sort," Dr. Pierre Rollin, chief of the special pathogens branch at the Centers for Disease Control, told reporters in Atlanta.

Rollin, an Ebola expert who has studied the deadly strain Ebola Zaire, acknowledged human infection was possible but has never occurred with the strain discovered at the Texas Primate Center.

The virus killed one monkey in December and led authorities to put another monkey to death. Rollin said there were two people exposed to the virus but neither got sick. All the monkeys were put to death.

Officials called a news conference to assure the public the strain is not as dangerous as the Ebola virus that killed 210 people in Zaire and 256 and killed 210 last year in the central African nation of Zaire. Earlier this year, at least 13 people died from Ebola in Gbongon in western Africa.

State Health Commissioner David Smith said relatives and neighbors are more serious threats because they can spread the virus. Smith said that Ebola is spread through body fluids, commonly through a break in the skin.

The reason there's this much excitement is because we've had a movie and a book," Smith said. Ebola is spread through bloody fluids, commonly through a break in the skin.

Sanctions against Cuba find censure of trade partners

The Associated Press

GENEVA -- America's trading partners condemned new U.S. sanctions against Cuba on Tuesday, calling them a violation of international rules and a threat to the new World Trade Organization.

At a meeting of the WTO's General Council, delegates from Latin America, the European Union, Canada, India, Japan, South America and the Caribbean criticized the U.S. measures. None called on the council to take formal action to assess the legality of the sanctions.

To punish Cuba for shooting down two civilian planes, President Clinton signed the Helms-Burton bill last month. It allows Americans to sue foreign companies that benefit from U.S. property confiscated by the Communist government. The bill aims to shove off foreign investment in Cuba.

Delegates complained that the sanctions penalize third parties. Speaking for Latin American nations, Bolivia said the U.S. policy threatens the credibility of the WTO, which is meant to be a forum for settling disputes without resorting to unilateral measures.

Israel, Canada and Mexico, who sided with the United States in the North American Free Trade Agreement, urged Washington to respect its trade obligations.

Malaysia deporting Vietnamese refugees

The Associated Press

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia - Malaysia will forcibly send back 1,200 Vietnamese refugees back home beginning Thursday, the first phase of a new deportation program to resettle them in their homeland.

Officials said a convoy of buses will transport 400 refugees on Thursday from the Sunset Beach refugee camp at Port Klang to a naval base in the port city of Kuala Lumpur.

"I believe 800 will be sent home before the weekend is over," the officials said.

Vietnamese refugees have staged massive protests against the forced deportation plan. The refugees say they are political refugees and they consider the deportation an infringement of their human rights.

The other 1,800 refugees still in Malaysia have agreed to go back voluntarily.

Burmese authorities block opposition leader in home

The Associated Press

RANGOON, Burma — In the latest attempt to restrict opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi, Burmese authorities blocked the road to her home Tuesday.

Barbed-wire barricades were placed at nearby intersections and almost no one was allowed in or out. The barriers were removed in the evening, but then they had prevented Mrs. Suu Kyi from publicly celebrating Burma’s New Year, which was Tuesday. She had planned to walk to the pond at the foot of the city’s most venerated temple, the Shwedagon Pagoda, to release fish.

Chicago's Bulls claim NBA single-season win record

The Associated Press

CHICAGO -- The Chicago Bulls have claimed the NBA single-season win record.

The Bulls already have the best record in the NBA, and now they have the best win total in the league, too.

The Bulls shut down Cincinnati, 6-3.

The win gives the Bulls a 15-game winning streak, the longest in the NBA this season.

The Bulls have won 17 of their last 18 games, and they have clinched their first division title since 1993.

The win also gives coach Michael Jordan his 10th NBA championship.

George not the top tailback
But that doesn't bother him

Jerry Miller

COLUMBUS — Headliners Troy Smith and Eddie George say that although many people don't have time to consider the top tailback in this weekend's NFL draft, it doesn't bother them.

"Beauties in the eyes of the beholder," George said during a conference call Tuesday. "I think I'm just as good, if not better, as any of those other running backs.

The record-breaking Ohio State runner is mentioned behind Kerry Collins, Lawrence Phillips and Texas A&M's Lavelle McCrory in most draft forecasts.

George's agent, Lamont Smith, has a forecast of his own. "There may be a back or two, who are more explosive. But statistically speaking, it's all said and done, I think you'll see the type of performance once from Eddie that will make people look back on the 1996 draft and say, 'Wow. What did people think? He's too good to be a great pro,'" Smith said.

The 6-foot, 220-pound George net Ohio State three season and single-game records last year by gaining 1,927 yards, including 275 yards against Indiana and scoring 25 touchdowns.

The apparent strength on George's behalf is a lack of explosiveness. Yet he had breakaway gains of 87 yards against Illinois. He also had 61 against Notre Dame and 61 against Illinois and 61 against Notre Dame.

"It's really what style of running back you like," he said. "How they are ranked by position. It's really what style of running back you like," he said. "How they are ranked by position. It's really what style of running back you like," he said. "How they are ranked by position.

Ohio State's Eddie George runs for a touchdown in a 1996 game against Notre Dame.

"The endorsements are another thing I'm going to look into as time goes on, but right now, I'm more focused on my football career because I believe the endorsement and will pick up if it's called," he said.

George also played a cameo role in a segment of the football-related television sitcom "Coach." Smith said George had just returned from Los Angeles, where he had a "significant speaking role" in a TV pilot called "Southern Fried Joe" starring former NBA star George Gervin.

George is in a schedule to graduate with a degree in landscape architecture from Ohio State in June.

Seattle owner accused of harassment

As a successful investor and a prominent professional football team owner, Mr. Behring makes a convenient target for what we believe the courts will view as a frivolous lawsuit that is nothing more than legal harassment.

The lawsuit described "Little Joe," the nickname ofη George's father, as a "total freak" and "one of the most dedicated, [who] he was the only serial killer in the world who demanded to see what's going on, right now, I'm more focused on my football career because I believe the endorsement and will pick up if it's called," he said.

Commissioner denies that Hartford is headed for Nashville, despite report

Christine Hardy
The Blade From HARTFORD, Conn. — NHL commissioner Gary Bettman on Tuesday denied a report that the Hartford Whales are moving to Nashville.

"We're not moving," Bettman said during a conference call that was arranged in response to the ESPN broadcast. "It's unfortunate for such a report to come out because I know the Whales have not been a suggestion with Nashville."

ESPN cited sources at the league ownership level" as saying Connecticut officials intended to give up trying to keep the Whales and would allow them to move to Nashville.

The sources said theBrainard are moving to the NHL at the end of the week.

Gary Anderson, owner of the Whales, has been seeking an NHL or NHL Franchise, and has a standing offer to any team interested in a new home.

"It's really, in some respects, old news, because we all know Nashville is interested in having a new franchise for their new building," Bettman said.

Vince Doria, managing editor for ESPN, said the station was standing by its story, reported by author Keith Obronthom.

"Keith's sources on this, particularly one of them, have been involved in the past," Doria said. "Keith learned of this prior to ESPN's broadcast, with the coordinating producer and other unknown and other sources in the league, considered it strong enough to go with." Doria added the story said the Whales "would move in the end of the week. 'That doesn't mean it definitely going to happen by the end of the week," he said. Bettman denied a rumour move could and not would be made until the May 1 deadline of a marketing campaign to more than double the town's season-ticket base to 11,000.

The team pointed to release initial results of the campaign Wednesday. Based on the numbers, Bettman said the team is "on the right track, but the numbers are way below goal.

I think we have to run the last two weeks of the campaign to be successful," he said. Bettman maintained it was the league's preference not to relocate any franchise, and that discontinuing a Whales move below the campaigns in complete would be premature.

Earlier in the day, Hartford Whales general manager Gary Stout announced that the league would be moving to Nashville and Lt. Gov. Jodi Rent moved quickly to dup the notice of a relaxation to Nashville, and also questioned the timing of the re-
Turner Sports takes over full control of Goodwill Games

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Goodwill Games, plagued by financial problems since it started a decade ago, has taken over operation of the 1996 edition in hopes of future games without a local organizing committee, officials announced Tuesday.

A release from Goodwill said, a division of Turner Sports, it would immediately take responsibility for all aspects of planning and managing the games.

"We have examined the finances from the past, reviewing existing and alternative organizational structures, and we are in agreement that the most effective assurances is for a single entity to guide the entire project," game president Michael Plant said. "As owners of the games, it made the most sense for us to assume full responsibility."l

Media mogul Ted Turner started the Goodwill Games in 1986 in hopes of bringing together athletes from the United States in a battle of the best. Team Sunbelt competed from keeping from participating in the event.

With the Cold War ended, the games became intertwined into an internationally recognized multi-sport event.

From Moscow to S, the games went to Seattle in 1990 and St. Petersburg, Russia, in 1991. The games have produced some memorable athletic performances and a handful of world records, the games also have featured organizational problems affecting athlete, fans and the news media.

They also never have been a commercial success, polling relatively low television ratings and losing millions of dollars while putting Turner at odds with the Games International Oversight Committee, a multi-national group that oversees the event.

"We appreciate the efforts of the organizing committee," Turner said. "But in the end, it was a difficult decision to make."
