Fans upset with UAO

By BRANDI BARKHE

She was so excited about the Mosk To The Max concert because that she arrived one hour before the tickets went on sale to ensure she got to see Jack Kevorkian perform. Yet when her excitement turned to frustration when she discovered the Mosk To The Max concert was overruled by UAO, she decided to boycott the concert.

"My first reaction was that UAO screwed up yet again," said Lyra Yon, junior computational science major. "Lyra was so excited about the chance to see Jack Kevorkian perform live that she decided to buy a ticket to The News Spring Fest on April 19, where Mosk To The Max was to be headlined by Jack Kevorkian. However, when Lyra tried to purchase tickets on Monday, all the tickets were sold out.

"I was so disappointed," said Lyra Yon, junior computational science major. "I had been looking forward to seeing Jack Kevorkian perform live for months. I was so excited about the chance to see him in person that I decided to buy a ticket to the Mosk To The Max concert. However, when I tried to purchase tickets on Monday, all the tickets were sold out. I was so disappointed."

"I think Monday's meeting was a success," said Denver COO. "We had a lot of better turnout than we expected. The presentation was very informative, and everyone was polite." Denver COO added that the meeting was a good opportunity to get back into the swing of things.

Some social sins should not be illegal

Dear Daily Planet July 26, 1987

I am writing in response to your story "Dissenters: An inconvenient truth," which appeared in today's issue of The Daily Planet. The article mentions that the university administration is considering the possibility of decriminalizing marijuana, which has caused great concern among students and faculty members.

I strongly believe that marijuana should remain illegal. The argument that marijuana is a "victimless" crime is a fallacy. It is a drug that has caused harm to countless individuals and families. The idea that legalization would somehow reduce crime is simply not true. Legalization would likely lead to increased use and abuse of marijuana, resulting in higher rates of addiction and other negative consequences.

Furthermore, the argument that marijuana is less harmful than other drugs is misleading. While marijuana may not be as physically dangerous as some other drugs, it still has significant negative impacts on mental health and social behavior. Studies have shown that marijuana use is associated with increased rates of mental illness, including depression, anxiety, and schizophrenia.

I urge the university administration to reconsider their position on decriminalization and to take a firm stance against the use of marijuana on campus. We must prioritize the health and well-being of our students and faculty members, and we must not allow the lure of political correctness to cloud our judgment.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]
“Either The End or The Beginning”

I’ve seen The End. Don’t worry about seeing it for yourself, because you’ll be doing it again. All the bumper stickers and billboards build it up way too much. But just in case you have some odd nerve disorder or are just bored, I’ll give you the directions. Take the highway, I forgot which one, to the town of Fall in the Oklahoma panhandle. Once there, turn on your radio, press the scan button and keep driving. At first you’ll wonder where the radio scan will stop. You’ll watch the numbers rolling from 88 to 108, become mesmerized and drive off the road into a ditch. Stap yourself, then slap yourself again. When you hear a low grumbling crunching sound coming from your cheek, then it’s probably a good idea to stop hitting yourself. Get back on the road, and keep driving until the scan finally stops and the blaring country music takes a snap out of you. At this point clean yourself up, change your underwear, turn south and you’re there at The End. I’ll be honest though; I’ve only seen it from a distance. I was going to stop. But after reading the tourism pamphlet on The Beginning and its 99 cent ham sandwiches just a few miles down the road, The End just didn’t seem like that big of a deal anymore.

Kevorkian sentenced to 10 to 25 years

PONTIAC, Mich.—Dr. Jack Kevorkian, who videotaped himself giving a man a lethal injection and dared prosecutors to stop him, was sentenced to 10 to 25 years in prison Tuesday by a judge who told him: "Sir, consider yourself stopped."

Kevorkian, who turns 71 next month, grinned as he was led from the courtroom in handcuffs, saying to a friend, "Justice?" He said nothing when given the opportunity to speak at his sentencing.

"That is what he believes his life mission is," she said.

In addition to giving Kevorkian the sentence prosecutors asked for, the judge handed him three to seven years for delivery of a controlled substance. The sentences will run concurrently, and Kevorkian will be eligible for parole after six years and eight months, a prosecutor said.

"He could have gotten life in prison."

Defense attorney David Gorosh said that he was surprised by the judge's decision.

"This is a victory for a society that exists for a society that exists for lawlessness. It was about disrespect for a society that exists because of the strength of the legal system."

"No one, sir, is above the law," she continued. "You had the audacity to go on national television, show the world what you did and dare the legal system to stop you. Well, sir, consider yourself stopped."

Even so, she predicted the debate that Kevorkian brought to the fore will continue "long after this trial and your activities fade from public memory." On "60 Minutes," Kevorkian threatened a hunger strike if sent to prison — a claim he has not repeated. If he does go on a hunger strike, Michigan prison personnel will force-feed him.

Kevorkian injected Youk with lethal chemicals on Sept. 17 at Youk's request. Youk was in a wheelchair, could barely move his arms or legs and was afraid of choking to death on his own saliva.

Medical examiners considered the death suspicious. But they had little to go on until Kevorkian sent a videotape to CBS. The tape and the "60 Minutes" interview with Kevorkian were the prosecution's main evidence.

It was the first murder trial for Kevorkian, a retired pathologist who says he has been involved in 130 deaths since 1990, and the first time he was found guilty of second-degree murder convictions.

In past cases, Kevorkian said his patients used his homemade devices to start the flow of carbon monoxide or intravenous chemicals that caused their death.

Kevorkian represented himself at trial. He was found guilty of first-degree murder convictions.

If you can spend four years preparing for your future, you can spend a few minutes reading this.
Florida declares state of emergency

Gov. Don Sundquist asked the Dough and Polk counties.

The declaration by Florida Governor Bob Graham allows the National Guard to help firefighters, and the blaze was 75 percent contained.

The National Guard helped to fight the fires and two Blackhawk helicopters were immediately put to work dumping water on fires in Hillburn and Folkston counties.

The Governor asked the Federal Emergency Management Agency for help, and all outdoor burning permits were suspended.

BOGOTA, Colombia—The kidnapping of an entire Avianca domestic flight, apparently by leftist rebels who disappeared into the countryside with their prey, shows just how lawless nearly four decades of armed conflict.

There was still no word Tuesday on the fate of the 41 passengers and five crew members from the Avianca twin-engine turboprop plane, which was commandeered Monday en route from the northeastern city of Bucaramanga to Bogota, the capital. It was forced to land on a remote northern airstrip along the Magdalena River, Colombia’s main waterway.

By the time police reached the airstrip in Viejuela, 220 miles north of Bogota, all they found was an empty plane with its tires blown out. Pilots who flew over the area hours earlier saw passengers being spirited away onto wooden boats by people dressed in green fatigues.

No group has claimed responsibility, but some officials suspect the country’s second largest guerrilla band, the 5,000-member National Liberation Army. The ELN is the most active rebel group in a region that has seen fierce combat in recent months between guerrillas and their paramilitary rivals.

The government sent troops to try to cordon off a huge area of the San Lucas range, a mountaneous rebel region where the kidnappers are thought to have headed with the passengers and crew.

A spokesman for President Andres Pastrana said Tuesday, however, that a rescue attempt was unlikely. “I don’t see that as a possibility,” Otto Gutiérrez told Caracol radio.

No senior government officials were aboard the plane, whose passengers included an Ecuadorian man, an Italian lay Catholic worker, an elderly couple in failing health and a 3-month-old baby. The U.S. Embassy said it was trying to confirm local media reports that as a possibility,” Otto Gutiérrez told Caracol radio.

Colombia’s weak central government has little or no control over vast areas that have been overrun by guerrillas, paramilitaries and right-wing vigilantes. Security at airports is increasingly brazen armed incursions.

A country of 40 million, Colombia has the world’s highest kidnapping rate, roughly 72,000 murders a year, including some 3,000 political killings. The civil conflict pits leftist guerrillas against right-wing paramilitary groups and government security forces.

More than 2,200 people were kidnapped last year alone, about half of them by ransom-seeking rebels who regularly mount roadblocks of major highways. Such abductions have become so common that many Colombians fly even on short domestic trips. Now it appears even the skies are not safe.

It’s proposals have been shunned in preliminary peace talks with the government, and many believe the seizing of Flight 9465 may have been an ELN publicity stunt designed to earn respect.

“The ELN is discredited militarily and the government isn’t taking it seriously in negotiations,” said Alejandro Reyes, a National University political scientist. “If the ELN did this, it would appear an attempt to call attention to itself.”

Good-by to Tiger Stadium

The view from the field promises another opening of the most beautiful sights the world has to offer: left field, center field and the fans. It was the third game of the season, and the fans were missing their dose of outfield autographs.

"Sorry, can’t do an interview right now. Everything’s going too fast right now."

That is the kind of day it was. Everything was going on.

It was the last opening day at Tiger Stadium.

A glorious success since 1912, it began in demise.

The Tigers lost to the Twins 4-3.

But there were childhood memories of loyal fans and bottomless autographs.

While the ceremony was initiated with Tim Cordon’s arm, Ricky Williams hit a base hit and home run to presume Al Smith’s first home run. DJ White was taking shape in Detroit Tradition.

It was a day when the first words everyone thought of were: "The end of an era."

As a baseball mecca since 1912, a stadium with childhood memories of loyal fans and bottomless autographs, the Tigers were in their history.

Standing on the ground through the autographs, everyone thought of the heroes and all-time greats. It was at Tiger Stadium is so powerful world series team. His presence was felt by fans who set foot on that field.

It is where Cecil Fielder hit 25 dingers in 1990. It is where Jim Leyritz hit 30 home runs in 1996.

"I'm pretty sure it won't be the last time I'll be on the field," Newell said. "I'm not thinking about it."

More came to pick us up first career save in the ninth.

"Dougry showed he’s got it all. We were in a good game and did a nice job of shutting the door," manager Schmuck said. But Xavier didn’t go down without a fight. With one out and two runners on second and third in the ninth, the Musketeers had the go-ahead run at the plate.

Fleet gave Mike Sculipio to fly out and then struck out Adam Savo to end the game. He said he wasn’t nervous, but he gave some name from the experience."" Falcons around him.

"The uprememberance courtroom is to talk to me [the pitcher]." Newell said. "They just kept on throwing strikes and I was doing fine. I had to do was to stay in the strike zone and they played me well.

"I picked up the fire all day long, taking charge. Tim Newell, a first-year catcher with only an RH throw, broke a 2-5 tie with an eventual game-winning single.

"It was a look at a fourth-inning at the first pitch," Newell said. "I figured he knew me by now. Even though I wasn’t entirely expecting it, I tried to surprise him and go back with one. It worked out.

"We let him [Newell] go six innings,"肥料 coach said. "I was happy to have a look at him [the pitcher]."

The Falcons showed us he’s got a whole lot," Newell said. "I never expected to think about it."

"That’s the best performance of the year, outshone Katzenmoyer a year ago, and was the best performance of the year. But now I don’t have time to think about it."

Fellert added three runs against Battle Creek.
