Although the Pouring Rights issue has caused months of controversy, the University president and his cabinet recently decided to go forth with negotiations between two beverage suppliers this summer. Both Pepsi-Cola and the American Bottling Company (ABC) will have first chance at gaining exclusive selling rights for their products on campus

The decision came after the Pouring Rights committee proposed that

Through the agreement, the University hopes to generate $3 to $4 million over the next 10 years for the Student Union renovation, student leadership programs, scholarships and women's sports. That's $40,000 a year to be divided among the four priorities by the president.

"At this point, we really don't know if there will be enough money or not," Overland said. "The jury is

Migrant workers challenged by living conditions

This is the second part of a three-part series on migrant farm workers in Wood County. Today's story focuses on the issues affecting migrant farm workers.

The sun is high and hot. The sweat is pouring down from their faces. Their shirts are drenched with sweat and plastered with dirt. Their hands pick the vegetables with a quick, rhythmic pace.

They work in the fields from dusk until dawn with determination in their eyes rather than shame.

Migrant workers are used for agricultural labor, Ohio's No. 1 industry. Recent statistics stated that Ohio made $67. 8 million last year from fresh market vegetables.

Among the crops picked by migrant laborers, either by hand or by machine, are bell peppers, tomatoes, strawberries and cucumbers

"They work hard to give their children a better life than theirs," said Ismael Morales, retiree from the ROTC Department. Morales was raised in a family of migrant workers.

David Flores, organizer of the local Farm Labor Organization Committee, said some of the issues faced by migrant farm workers include conditions of camps and difficulty obtaining funds from the government "A problem I noticed recently is that it is harder for migrant farm workers to get food stamps," he said. "Also, there is a lack of community support." He said most people aren't aware of farm workers in northwest Ohio.

migrant farm workers because of the small time they spend here. The migrant camps and fields are out in the boondock and those who find out about them, ignore the issues."

Conditions of Migrant Camps In 1990 the government offered to pay 50 percent of housing renovations on migrant camps, according to Pamela Boehm, ethnic stud ies instructor, who has worked with migrant families for several years.

However, several farmers refused to take advantage of this offer because they wanted to avoid the hassle. Most houses do not have running water or heat, she said

According to the 1997 Ohio Migrant Census, there are 12 camps in Wood County. The camps vary in conditions and quality. Specific names and locations of camps were withheld. Most camps are 10 to 20 minutes from BG, Boehm said.

"The typical house at camps in BG are small, one-room units and made out of wood," Boehm said.
"They don't have neither running vater nor electricity."

She said the houses at other camps might be nicer because the rower had used government funds for housing.

Through the Agricultural Labor Improvement Program, "owners and operators of existing or new agricultural labor camps" in Ohio may receive a grant of up to $25,000 for housing, according to Alma Salinas, a Spanish teacher at Bowling Green High School, used to do farm work for nine years. Her family would migrate from Florida to farms in Bowling Green and Findlay every summer. She used to work at Bloomdale Camp, which is 15 minutes south of Bowling Green.

Salinas said the camps had small, one-room houses with two beds. The houses had room for a table, stove and fridge. The houses had no running water and heat.

"I do not recall ever having phone in the house," she said.

Lee Torres, freshman integrated mathematics major from Santa Rosa, Texas, said the houses he'd seen at migrant camps were shacks.

He said the paint would be old, and the windows would be cracked or taped. The restrooms were rusty, filthy and dirty. The wood would be rotten. There would also be rats and cockroaches living there, according

'Most owners never renovated the camp houses because the people are just living there temporarily," he said. "There would be some who renovated the area and left it up to the inhabitant to keep it clean. Education impact on the campus and commu-nity by filling out their Census. "From a student's standpoint, a lot of the public services you have are based on the count we get at the University," said Peter Williams, manager for the Census' Bowling Green district. "We need everyone to be counted. According to Williams, any fulltime students who live either on or off campus are counted here, instead of at home with their parents. Many students don't realize this, and the Census is suffering as a result.

"We haven't had good response rates in off-campus housing, particularly in the apartments on Thurstin Avenue," Williams said. "The dorms have been a real challenge,

Sophomore VCT major, Rick Dennis, lives in Field Manor on Thurstin Avenue and said that he hasn't filled out a Census, and he isn't even sure if he's seen one around his apartment.

"Hell if I know what's going on,"

The response rate for the Thurstin Avenue apartments is 42 percent. By comparison, other off-campus housing is between 56 and 59 per-cent. These fall below the national average of 64 percent, Ohio's 70 percent and the city of Bowling Green's 68 percent.

Dorms, which house approximately 6,000 students, present a different type of problem for Census

"Census forms have been in the dorms since April 5. We treat them as a group quarters project," Williams said. "We try to work very closely with the school to make sure that everyone is counted. We would like 100 percent cooperation.

Sophomore early childhood edu-cation major Nicole Kachmar, who lives in Rodgers Quadrangle, is among the students who has filled out the Census.

"I've filled it out, but I haven't turned it in yet," she said.

Not responding to the Census can present a variety of problems for

"If BG has 18,000 students and only 10,000 are accounted for, there's a problem," Williams said. Even from a recruiting standpoint, if corporations are looking for a large pool of students, and all students aren't accounted for, the students suffer.

Beginning April 30, census workers will be knocking on the doors of were college students some from the University of Toledo, most from Bowling Green State University. Many of them drank considerable amounts of alcohol. There were no bar brawls. There were no fights or arrests. There were no accidents or complaints from neighbors.

Guests said the party was typical. Some said they had been to dozens like it in the past, most of them harmless. On that night, two guests drove away from the birthday party after drinking. The rest of them either walked, did not drink alcohol or had a designated driver, as was the case with the carload from UT.

Stacey Pinkus, the honoree at the party, said that if she had it to over again, she would not have let her two friends leave in a car despite the fact that they made it safely home that night.

Dangerous situations are most likely to develop after parties, like Pinkus, when it is time to go home or to the next bar or party, according to Bowling Green police Lt. Linda McCool.

"If you are in Bowling Green after 1 a.m., most of the cars on the street will have someone in them who has consumed too much alcohol," McCool said. "If people would stay home and drink with a few friends it would eliminate a lot of the problems we have."

Pinkus and roommate Erin Maxwell learned about the dangers of drinking and driving first-hand four months earlier on the morning of Oct. 3, 1999.

Her Dodge Neon plowed into the frame of Maxwell's car between the front and rear driver-side doors. The girl was charged with driving under the influence and was faulted for the Pinkus said the driver was so intoxicated that she sat in the car and showed no emotion even after Maxwell's other passenger asked her if she had a cellular phone to call for help. The girl said nothing. Police did not even bother to complete her sobriety tests.

Carrie Belair, a certified chemical dependency counselor for the BGSU Wellness Connection, said alcohol deceives its user. People believe they are unaffected when they are in fact inebriated.

"Alcohol causes diminished reaction time," she said. "A lot of people don't sense that, but it has been timed in the lab and proven. It can also cause vision problems, a lack of spatial adjustment - anything you normally need to drive is compromised."

The 21 hostages, including at least 10 foreigners, were kidnapped Sunday and were being held by Muslim extremists in the mountains of the impoverished Sulu province at the tip of the southern Philippines,

At least two Malaysian hostages were expected to be freed shortly because they are Muslims, a police official said. Estrada rejected ransom demands "Absolutely not. The government policy is not to give ransom," Presidential Executive Secretary Ronaldo Zamora said.

Estrada's chief negotiator denied media reports attributed to him saying the hostages had been released.

The negotiator, former Muslim rebel leader Nur Misuari, said it was possible the kidnappers may consider releasing some of their hostages at a later time "because it's not easy to keep 21 people especially in a to keep 21 people, especially in a small place

Turkish parliament fails to elect president

ANKARA, Turkey -- The Turkish parliament failed to elect a president in the first round of voting yesterday, delivering a humiliating blow to Prime Minister Bulent Ece-

Observers said that many legisla-tors voted for members of their own party and are expected to support Ecevit's nominee in later balloting. Parliament votes again on Monday

Ecevit had secured promises from every party leader to support Ahmet Needet Sezer, a top judge who has spoken of the need for democratic reforms and increased freedom of expression.

Sezer received 281 votes, falling short of the 367 required for election in the first round of balloting. There are 550 seats in parliament.

The other votes were split among nine other candidates. The candidate to come in second, Nevzat Yalcintas, received only 61 votes.

Several candidates are expected to drop out of the race in the coming days.

The vote comes two weeks after Ecevit was unable to muster enough votes to amend the constitution and enable President Suleyman Demirel to run for another term. Demirel's term expires on May 16.

"The leaders, who received a blow during the debate on the constitution, will receive an even bigger blow if they fail to have Sezer elected in the first round and make their trustworthiness questionable," Yeni Safak, a pro-Islamic newspaper, wrote before the voting.

Ecevit nominated Sezer as a compromise candidate who was able to appeal to all parties in parliament.

Earlier this week, the leaders of all five parties agreed to support Sezer's nomination. But yesterday's vote was a secret ballot and the earlier agreement did not require party leaders to force deputies to vote for

Presidents in Turkey are elected by parliament.

"I don't even consider the probability that Sezer won't be elected,"

Ecevit said late Wednesday.

It is likely that Sezer will be elected in the second or third round of voting. In the third round, candidates only need a simple majority to be elected.

Sezer is the head of the constitutional court and is expected to be a strong advocate of democratic reforms if elected. The presidency in Turkey is a largely ceremonial post, but presidents are often powerbrokers in times of crises and often exert strong moral influence.

my little heart as I sat in the front row of Lear North Elementary in the fourth grade.

It changed everything about me, the drums, I can hear them even now, but I turn away. My day-dreaming diminishes and I try to concentrate on my messed up state of being. Instead I stare into the depths of Bridal Veil Falls, there are so many things I wish to say, but no courage to say them. Sometimes, I can hear lost conversations in my mind, like ghosts from bygone eras. Then I remember the faces of those who are now my enemies, but were once my dearest friends. Nothing lasts forever, but why can I not forget the pain then?

"I'm feaning for a camel wide" my friend Kym says in a low voice, but Ben laughs and says, "Thought you quit." We hop back into his black probe and slowly drive back into our town. Kartels, the 24-hour truck stop with greasy burgers that'll kill an iron stomach, is our next destination.

I want to go back to that state of innocence where I can grow up to be anything and my biggest dilemma is whether to wear my green high tops or the blue ones.

Instead, I watch the mozzarella cheese drip onto my plate and think about the arcade. The smoke of Space Invaders is almost too much for sensitive lungs, but I hack out a couple coughs and deal with it. I hit the Street Fighter vs. X-Men machine and begin to sur-prise the bigot aholes that come up to challenge me. It's amusing to watch their faces because they against my skin.

I see the Mississippi as my body is serpentine through the water. Like the serpent that came down from the Nordic mountains to create the river itself. My grandmother told me these stories and I remember her soft hands as she guided my arms through the muddy water, telling me how she once swam across the river itself. None of this has anything to do with the situation on hand, but the water makes me think, sometimes too much. The complexities of my flip turn are nothing compared with the breath of life swimming gives me. The lights above me are like lightning bugs as they flash past and my fingers touch the wall, the breast-stroker takes off. My body is glistening with sweat and chlorine, my teammate Kevin hugs and

I run to the locker room and throw up, I know I did my best only if that happens, because the rush and exhilaration of the event are too much for my body to han-dle. The drums are still pounding but I have another event.

The year is practically over; all that's left is the usual cramming for finals, storage renting and summer vacation arrangements. As I look over the year I have some sugges-tions to make the new year better. We already have the administrators doing their part to drag our Univer-sity into the millennium with the renovation of the Union and Offenhauer East, the unveiling of the new Psychology building, the cable in everyone's room next year, the upcoming air-conditioning in the rec, and the much-needed new Internet system. But I have some suggestions that the students can do to make Bowling Green State University a better university.

And my suggestion is for the student organizations to come together and form some unity. We already have representatives of most of the organizations that are senators in the USG, but I think a caucus twice a month or so would be more beneficial. Something like all the presidents, vice presidents, or members of every organization can meet and discuss the plans and programs they want to sponsor for the year.

As it is now, people rely on the organization that they are involved in to provide them with activities. The African-American community relies on the Black Student Union, NAACP and Gospel Choir. The Hispanic community relies on the Lati-no Student Union and their Greek

"I would like to see more events than an occasional movie sponsored by the ŪAO, Latinopolooza, Kwanzaa, or a concert. These events are great and wonderful, but what about the everyday needs of the students?

organizations. And this pattern is the same for many students. As a result, people get left out and they are unheard because there is no forum where everyone has a representative that makes their opinions and voices

This way we all have a say in which programs we want, and orga-nizations don't have to worry about cert on their own. More things can be done and at greater scales because all of the organizations are meeting and can co-sponsor activi-ties. For instance, instead of having someone who is unknown to some perform, we can have artists that we have seen on television and whose CDs we own. More possibilities are open when the University's student organizations come together.

Coming together is a great way for the organizations to supply enter-tainment that the city cannot. There are clubs, but the mall and stores close practically at the same time we are just getting home from class. Many students don't have access to a car, and those who do aren't eager about going to a lot of places far away, especially with the inflation of gas prices. But by all the organizagas prices. But by all the organiza-tions big and small coming together they can actually give the students what they want. I would like to see more events than an occasional movie sponsored by the UAO, Latinopolooza, Kwanzaa, or a con-cert. These events are great and wonderful, but what about the everyday needs of the students? Maybe we can have more than one concert a year or have some kind of activity that is provided every week-

Though smaller organizations provide programs and activities they are often not publicized enough and get a small number of participants. This too can be remedied by the organizations coming together. If there are more people involved, more people to lend a hand and help, about some events from students including myself lately, but that wouldn't have happened if the community on this campus wasn't so separate and stratified. If we were united and helped each other hold events, then having an activity would be easier because there is more money backing each organiza-

In the caucus or alliance that I am suggesting, all organizations would have a say and would be able to provide programs so the community can experience new cultures, to which college is suppose to introduce us all. There are still more horizons to broaden. There are still things that I can stand to learn more about the Hispanic, Jewish, Asian, and Native American culture. We can celebrate all of our differences by coming together and providing programs and activities that teach the student body the practices of different cultures.

Let's work on making next year truly better not just because we are getting cable and getting a better Internet system, but because we have readjusted our attitudes and begun to work together.

WBGU management justified

In defense of WBGU 88.1 management, I would like to say that having worked for them for the past 2 years as their news director, Front and Center coordinator and co-host as well as the coordinator and host for Second Stage, the local music show, they are extremely profession-al station managers and they follow all policies as strict as any commercial station.

As soon as new staff members are hired, they stress the importance of professionalism and following FCC rules and regulations which include absolutely no profanity on the air, as well as threatening commentary aimed toward a particular person or group. All staff members are fully aware of this and the consequences we could face should we blatantly disrespect these rules.

I have worked very closely with General Manager Randy Moore, and Program Director Justin Hemminger, who is now taking the position of GM since Randy is graduating next month. They have more than prepared me for my work now in commercial radio in Toledo. Had it not been for their guidance and expertise I would not be where I am today and I sincerely thank them for enforcing their standards and regulations because that is how it is in corporate radio.

For people who are serious about broadcasting, being able to follow policy is 90 percent of what it takes in order to make it in the "real world." If any DJ in the corporation I work for in the Toledo market had played profanity-laden songs or threatened anyone on our Toledo airwaves they would be fired instantly as well - that's just common sense. We all have community standards to follow and being that we are providing a service to our students and community we want to strive for professionalism and good broadcastng standards.

Latino frat put foot in mouth

I have a few comments to make in regards to the statements made by Mr. Torres of SLB. Mr. Torres spoke of his fraternity as having a rigorous screening process," but it cannot be so great a process after the ignorance displayed in claiming your group to be "the only interna-tional fraternity" at BG.

Allow me set the record straight: Your statement is wrong. The Delta Upsilon International Fraternity has existed on this campus for over 50 years and has been international since the founding of the McGill Chapter of Canada in 1898.

I hope you understand that my goal here is for the truth in the media. Personally, I am glad that your group has reformed and I would like to offer some advice about which council to join. If I were you I would stay clear of the IFC council, as it is fed up. Its main goal is to buy into all University propaganda and handicap frater-nities. The positive for IFC is access to better resources, which they usually find a way to mess up.

My argument is one-sided, as I am unfamiliar with NPHC, so take it for what it is worth. I may be a member of the Greek System, but that does not mean I agree with it or turn my head to the fact that it is flawed and ineffective, though that is also a matter of University support. Much like choosing which fra-ternity to join, just follow your heart, Mr. Torres, and you won't go

Recipient of own hate mails apologizes

Almost a year ago, I created an unfortunate situation on the campus of BGSU that left many in shock, created racial tensions, and left me in a state of despair. As many may recollect, I sent hate mails to myself and filed false charges with the cam-pus police, which left authorities in a wild goose chase.

Time has passed and hopefully wounds have healed, but my conscience will not be clear if I do not make my apology public to those who are willing to forgive me for the error in judgment I made. There is no excuse for my behavior; however, there is a reason. I was going through very painful times in my life which was triggered by experiences I was having during my final semester at BGSU.

As a cry for help, I chose to self-destruct not only myself but relationships I had with various members of the University in an attempt to gain attention. I did in fact get the attention, but not how I had anticipated. By no means did I ever intend to hurt anyone during that time, but my actions did more than hurt people I truly care about; it created turmoil on campus, cost money and landed me in the legal system.

Through counseling, I believe my wounds have been healed and I can apologize and truly mean it. I am very sincere when i say I am very SORRY for what I did. I am asking for forgiveness as I have suffered tremendously for my actions and would like to move on. I cannot, however, move ahead in life without knowing that the community that I once lived in and the school that gave me an outstanding graduate education has truly forgiven me of my misdeeds.

I do hereby apologize to the administration, staff, faculty and, most importantly, students of BGSU. I am still paying the price of my actions and will continue to do so, but knowing that I have made peace with the University and its community will lift one burden off my shoulder.

Furthermore, migrant students might not have a sense of belonging because they know they have to leave soon. Because of this, students might not develop a relationship with teachers and vice versa.

with teachers and vice versa.

Another possible factor is that children understand the power of money early in life.

"They rationalize the amount of money they would be making, if they stayed at home, as opposed to going on to higher education," Mr. Salinas said.

Torres had similar thoughts.
He said about 80 percent of the people from his area (Santa Rosa, Texas) were migrant workers. When he encounters friends from the field, finds it disappointing that they had dropped out of junior high school to support their family by working in the fields.

"I respect their decisions, but it is a waste of life," he said. "Luckily, I was a good student in school. I am very fortunate for God inspiring my mother to encourage me to go to school."

Even when Torres was juggling both school and working in the fields, there were programs that pre-vented him and other migrant children from falling behind academi-cally. At Santa Rosa High School in Texas, there is a program called Smart Project

Although his life was in danger, his boss still told him to go in, since he was small enough, but warned him to be careful.

Mrs. Salinas recalled working in fields. She began working in the fields at age 10. At age 13 she was assigned to a row working along her mother's side.

"I have mixed feeling about the work," she said. "Me and my mother used the time to talk, while working. Inside I was thinking there has to be something better for me. I was-'t sure how to find a way out.' Health

One of the health issues faced by migrant workers is pesticide poisoning. According to Patricia Reyes, an ROI employee and a farm worker advocate, about 30 percent of the pesticides used in fields are harmful. She estimated that 50 percent of migrant workers come in contact with percent.

She said some workers are unaware of it because of lack of information from their grower or crew leader on pesticide safety or when pesticide is being sprayed in the fields. Also, some workers might fear going for help because if they were an undocumented worker they were an undocumented worker, they would be sent back to their home-

"She was less than a mile away from her home," Pinkus said. "I was really upset. Why couldn't she have just called her parents and asked them for a ride home. Even now, I can remember details from that night. It seems like it was yesterday. I wouldn't want anyone to go through that."

McCool said arrest statistics show why BGSU students have a reputation for unsafe use of alcohol. The number of DUI arrests rose sharply from 68 in May, June and July to 89 in August, September and October 1999. That represents a 30 percent increase

She said the change is likely attributable to the return of students to town in the fall after a summer off. She put even more stock in a 68 percent increase, 465 arrests in the summer, versus 782 in the fall, in disorderly conduct arrests over the same time frame. "Most of our disorderly conduct arrests involve loud parties and there is almost always alcohol involved," McCool said. "We do have more foot patrol officers downtown in the fall, but the same number of cars are out there to catch drunk drivers." Belair said students know the dangers of drinking and getting behind the wheel.

"College is a time people experi-ment with alcohol," she said. "Peo-ple make mistakes and go overboard. Young people tend to think they are invincible."

Pinkus and Maxwell had the notion of invincibility destroyed for them, and were lucky to come away from the experience in one piece.

"The cop and the tow truck driver said they had never seen such a bad accident where the driver walked away," Maxwell said. "I remember hearing the impact of the crash. I remember the song that was on the radio. I remember seeing her out of the corner of my eye and slamming on the brakes.

Angela Roberts, operations man-ager for BG Taxi, said her company is usually a safe alternative to dri-ving while intoxicated.

"We make an effort to make sure that everyone gets home safely," she said. "We do reserve the right to deny transportation if the driver decides a passenger might cause damage to the vehicle.

Those instances have been rare because "people know the rules," she said.

BG Taxi closes at 12 a.m., but McCool said BG is such a small city that walking is usually another viable alternative.

Pinkus said her October accident has prompted her to be more careful, but she knows everyone has to use alcohol responsibly for anyone to be

"I'm upset that it happened, but I am mostly just angry with the girl," she said. "She should have never gotten behind the wheel that night. I often wonder why the timing was just right. Like if we would have stayed at the restaurant just a little longer, or left a little bit sooner."

"When you get behind the wheel when you are drunk, you obviously are not just hurting yourself," she

Men begin quest for MAC tournament title with strong day

SPORTS WRITER

They stunned the competition and tied for the Mid-American Conference regular season title. Their next goal is to take the tournament.

The men's tennis team began their quest for the MAC Tournament title yesterday morning. They won their quarterfinal match 4-0 over seventh seed Buffalo.

Brandon Gabel and Vitek Wild defeated Justin Brtko and Budi Susanto 8-4 in their first flight dou-

Geoff Hiscox and Ed Kuresman led David Emihovich and Fery Kasiman 7-4 in the second flight.

Peter Gardonyi and Nicolas Lopez-Acevedo thumped Sean Kelley and Tim Powell 8-0 in No. 3

Singles belonged to the Falcons as well. Wild led Susanto 7-5 in the first flight.

Nicolas Lopez-Acevedo beat Kasiman 6-3, 6-2 in the No. 2

Mike Kossoff took the third flight

6-2, 4-1 from Brtko.

Kuresman followed with a 6-2, 5-

Gabel won the fifth flight 6-0, 6-I against Powell

Micael Lopez-Acevedo won his sixth flight match 6-1, 6-0 over Kel-

With the victory the Falcons advance to the semifinals. They will play either Ball State or Eastern Michigan this afternoon at 1 at the University of Toledo.

Women

The women's tennis team was picked to finish sixth in the MAC pre-season coaches' poll. After stunning the competition they will enter their tournament as the No. 3 seed.

The Falcons will face Ball State in the first round today. BGSU beat the Cardinals 5-2 in the regular season. However, after the loss to Northern Illinois, BGSU head coach Penny Dean is not underestimating the Cardinals

"We beat them once," Dean said. 'If we maintain our level of play we should hopefully beat them again."

She added that the Falcons need to play hard at all singles and doubles positions.

This season BGSU has improved a lot in singles play. The players

I lead over Emihovich in the fourth understand strategy better and use more shots in their games to fool their opponents.

> BGSU has suffered early exits from the tournament in the last few years. Dean hopes the roster of upperclassmen will use their experience to know what to expect and be mentally ready.

Part of the problem in the tournament. Dean said, is that the team gets nervous before big matches. This season they are approaching the tournament as another tennis match. But Dean knows what the Falcon tennis team can do.

"Within the girls they have a lot of intensity and a lot of motivation,' Dean said. "Otherwise they wouldn't be the players that they are."

The Falcons' quarterfinal match will be 1 p.m. today against Ball State in Kalamazoo, Mich.

Wild named Player of the Week

Vitek Wild was named the MAC Player of the Week for the final week of the regular season. He went 2-0 in singles and doubles in Falcon road wins over Eastern Michigan and Toledo. His career mark in regular season matches is 11-1.

Early-bird fans flock to Dayton stadium

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAYTON, Ohio - Fans showed up early yesterday to welcome minor-league baseball to the city and christen the $23 million Fifth Third

A standing-room-only crowd of 9,000 was expected to pack the sta-dium to see the home opener of the Dayton Dragons, the Class-A affiliate of the Cincinnati Reds. The Dragons, who are in first place in the Midwest League's Eastern Division, have been playing on the road since the season began.

Hours before gates opened, ticketholders and fans without tickets gathered along the wrought iron-fence that rings the outfield.

They strained to speak above the roar of last-minute construction. The stadium won't be completely fin-ished for several weeks, but that didn't dampen their excitement about having a team and a downtown sta-dium in a city that has been struggling to revitalize.

"This is fantastic," said Tim Gibson, 42. "This is one of the few times in my life I can say I'm really be from Dayton love to bring friends and family from out of the area, love to bring them in."

"We haven't had anything like this for years here," said Bill Dozier, 62. "No excitement, no entertainment, no anything."

Larry Moore, who was released from the hospital two weeks ago after spending 45 days there with a kidney ailment, clung to the fence and smiled.

"I haven't got all my strength back yet," said Moore, 51. "I just wanted to come out and see it."

Dragons co-owner Magic Johnson at the last minute canceled plans to appear at the home opener to stay in Los Angeles for the NBA playoff game between Sacramento and the Lakers, a team that he also partly Almost all of Fifth Third Field's 7.250 seats have been sold for the season, and all of its 30 luxury suites are spoken for. Standing room and lawn seating sales were expected to swell the home-opening crowd for the game against Cedar Rapids. Dragons president Bob Murphy, who was surprised by reports of ticket resales, said the team's security guards will try to keep the plaza around the stadium scalper-free.

'If we have an atmosphere where we have entertainment going on, where families arrive, they don't necessarily need to be subjected to people selling them tickets," he said.

City Manager Valerie Lemmie arrived in town in 1996 and said one of her first assignments from the city commission was to push the faltering idea of bringing minor league baseball to Dayton.

16 Tigers, Sox suspended total of 82 games for brawl

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

CHICAGO — In what is believed to be the harshest penalty for a brawl in baseball history, 16 members of the Detroit Tigers and Chicago White Sox were suspended yesterday for a total of 82 games.

"They're trying to set an example for the rest of the league," White Sox manager Ron Schueler said. "I think it will. I think you're going to see around the league a little more reluctance to start fights or get involved with them.

"I respect the decision," he said.
"Don't necessarily agree with it, but I respect it."

Managers Phil Garner of Detroit and Jerry Manuel of the White Sox were suspended for eight games each for Saturday's two fights at Comiskey Park. Tigers coach Juan Samuel must sit out 15 for throwing Detroit third baseman Dean

White Sox reliever Keith Foulke who got the worst of the brawl, needing five stitches to close a cut under his left eye, was suspended for three games.

There were 25 people fined — including the 16 who also received suspensions — ranging from $3,000 for Palmer to $500 for Detroit pitchers Danny Patterson and Jim Poole.

ball spokesman Rich Levin said. In 1998, fights at Kansas City and Yankee Stadium resulted in multiple suspensions. Five players, including Orioles pitcher Armando Benitez, were suspended for a total of 18 games after a wild brawl against the Yankees.

Two weeks later, nine players and both managers were suspended for a total of 38 games after the Anaheim Angels brawled with the Kansas City Royals.

Yesterday's penalties were the first ones issued by Frank Robinson, baseball's vice president of on-field operations.

'Major league baseball wants to send a message ... that participation in these sorts of incidents will be handled in a swift and serious manner," Robinson said.

"Altercations like the one that took place in Chicago last week show a lack of sportsmanship," Robinson said. "It sends the wrong message to our fans — particularly young people. Fighting is not an acceptable part of the game."

Deciding discipline became his responsibility when commissioner Bud Selig dissolved the president's office in the AL and NL.

"I didn't expect that harsh of a treatment, I guess you could say," Manuel said. "Frank Robinson is a baseball man who I have great respect for. I can't dispute his decisions one way or the other.

Falcons look to stay on top

BGSU softball's 15-4 victory over Miami Tuesday put the Falcons at the top of the Mid-American Conference East Division. This weekend they will battle the Marshall Thundering Herd to maintain that spot. Marshall is 20-22 overall with a 9-4 standing in the MAC. Until Tuesday, the two teams were tied for first place in the division. This threegame weekend series could determine who wins the division. The Herd usually have strong pitching. Their No. 1 pitcher, Sarah Gully, is left handed. The Falcons have played against her, but head coach Leigh Ross-Shaw wants the Falcon hitters to be focused.

"You never know what to expect," Ross-Shaw said. "Everybody improves from year to year."

Recent history favors the Fal-cons. BGSU is 7-0 against Marshall since the Herd joined the MAC. This past week BGSU went 5-2.

The Falcons have shown that they can win on the road this season. As for the No. 1 spot in the MAC, Ross-Shaw expects Marshall to challenge the Falcons.

"We need to be completely intense and ready for the start," Ross-Shaw said.

At the beginning of the season, the Falcons' goals were to concentrate on defense and to reduce fielding errors. Ross-Shaw said that the Falcons are making strides toward those goals and has added a new

BG entertainment mid-year in review

NOW Entertainment is aware that the year is only half over, so don't fire off those nasty e-mails just yet. We like to jump the gun, be ahead of the curve and not let those bastards at Entertainment "we have bastards at Entertainment "we have glossy pages" Weekly scoop us. In the interest of being the timely, cutting edge entertainment source you have come to expect, this is NOW Entertainment's Best and Worst Moments in BGSU Entertainment for the year 2000.

THE BEST

Michael Moore: The kind of event that makes a college campus seem like a real college campus. It was thought-provoking and hilari-ous to watch the brilliant Michael Moore (of the great TV show "TV Nation") riff on politics, pop culture and sodomy, making for the finest evening of entertainment in Bowling Green this year.

Bush & Moby: No mid-year end list would be complete without UAO's success in booking Bush and Moby and actually getting them to show-up. This event was good on two levels: 1) it generated good-will and 2) it started, or at least brought to light, concerns about diversity. Also, Moby rocked and Bush (sur prisingly) proved themselves to be decent live entertainers. However, as we will see later, this choice is a double-edged sword.

Porn & Pizza: OK, so it was held last semester, it's just that we at NOW love any excuse to use the word "porn." Informative and entertaining, Professor Jeffrey Brown's presentation was great fur.

presentation was great fun. Many audience members, like the world renown porn connoisseur Dan Nied, were heard to remark: "There was pizza?"

Who Wants to Marry a Poor Fat Guy? While everyone and their fourth cousin was getting their panties in a bunch over FOX television's "Who Wants to Marry a Mulit-Millionaire?" debacle a scrappy little radio show, using nothing but their moxie, put together an event that lacked the classist and sexist overtones of said FOX pro-gram. Auctioning off a poor fatty for three lucky ladies, the DJs of the ground-breaking Citizen Arcane tore down class and sex barriers, letting the poor and the corpulent finally get some sweet, sweet action.

Of course, I'm biased as I cohosted this program, but this is a column, so ethics be damned!

As a sidenote, the poor fat guy will be posing nude in a saucy spread with TV chef Paul Prud homme in the latest issue of "Fatty Fatty Boombalatti" magazine.

The Real World: Depending on who you ask this was either great or Either way it was h From Puck's insults, to someone paying fat cash for a brownie and even fatter cash for a T-shirt, it was entertaining for all the right and wrong reasons.

THE WORST

Bush/Moby: Like I said this choice is a double-edged sword Sure it was good for the campus, but this is something that should have been done long ago. In essence we are giving mad props to an organiza-tion for doing its job. Did they do a good job? Sure, but it's their job nonetheless.

Arrogant Worms: With criticism still ringing in my ears, I'm hesitant to revisit the Arrogant Worms, a Canadian comedy troupe I know lots of folks dug these guys like a trench, but they just weren't my flagon of syrup. Boring to the point of somnolence, these are guys with energy to spend, and only bargain basement comedy to spend it Honors Student Association Meditation Session (nominated by Jeff Arnett): Sounds fun: a bunch of honors students walking around in circles and saying "Ohmmmmmm." I wasn't there (as an honors student I have better things to do, like watch reruns of "DeGrassi Junior High"), so I'll take Jeff's word.

Erik Pepple still likes Canada regardless of how he felt about the Arrogant Worms and really does watch DeGrassi (a Canadian pro-gram, thank-you). Give him your opinions of Wheels, Joey Jeremiah DeGrassi gang at: erikp@bgnet.bgsu.edu start practicing their screams.

From the biggest of them to the smallest, Ohio area theme parks are now preparing for the upcoming summer season - each boasting of new attractions, rides and features which they believe will draw tourists from around the country.

Whether fans are interested in a 300-foot tall roller coaster, a new attraction which simulates a trip to the depths of the sea, the first ever wooden roller coaster with loops in its track, or simple family fun, Ohio's many parks will be looking to satisfy them.

Sandusky's institution Cedar Point is making the most noise with its new prize attraction - "Millenni-um Force," the new holder of the "world's tallest roller coaster" label at 310 feet. The ride cost $25 mil-lion to make, the single largest investment in the history of the

The park hopes the new Coaster King will draw even more fans to the Point, which is becoming more of a resort destination rather than just a amusement park.

"People are coming from farther away, and they're staying longer," said Janice Witherow, public rela-tions manager for Cedar Point. "Really, our roller coasters are our calling card."

Not to be outdone, Paramount's King's Island, 25 miles north of Cinncinatti, is unveiling its own great coaster attraction - "Son of Beast," the world's tallest wooden roller coaster, and the first wooden coaster to feature loops in the track. It is the latest addition of a 3 year, $40 million project to update the park. "(What separates us) is just the overall coaster variety, as well as family entertain-ment," said par said park nan Jeff spokesman Jeff Siebert. "We have two themed areas just for children, and we also have a 30 acre water park that's free with with

The park will also feature its traditional mix of water-themed attrac-tions and shows, including the annual water ski show, Sea Lion Show, and the institution that is the "Shamu Adventure."

Also affiliated with Six Flags is Wyandot Lake, in the northwest quadrant of Columbus. The water park is not unveiling any new rides, but it will be introducing new shows, including a magic show ("Bedazzled") and an ice show.

LISA BETTINGER ENTERTAINMENT WRITER

Summer is the peak of the con-cert season. While many tours are making stops in the Buckeye State, there are also many festivals that be making many concert crowds happy this season.

One of the biggest tours is Ozzfest 2000. Once again Ozzy
Osborne will be the ringmaster of this show. There will be two stages that showcase some of the best and most popular metal and rock artists. This year's lineup consists of Osborne, Pantera, Godsmack, Static Incubus, Methods of Mayhem, POD, Queens of the Stone Age, Ministry, Kittie, Taproot, Primer 55. Pitchshifter, Disturbed, Crazytown, The Deadlights, Shuvel, and Slaves on Dope. Both Reveille and Pump-jack will have limited runs on the tour. Ozzfest will be stopping at Columbus's Polaris Amphitheater on July 18 and at Cleveland's Blossom Music Center on July 20. For those who can venture into Michigan, the tour will be at Detriot's Pine Knob on July 12. Ozzfest will also venturing to Riverbend on Aug. 8.

Another major rock tour not only showcases musical talent, but also has some of the best in extreme sports. The Vans Warped Tour is once again delivering music along with skating and BMX biking. This year the performer's on the bill include Green Day, the Mighty Mighty Bosstones, Suicide Machines, the Long Beach Dub All Stars, NOFX, MxPx, Jurassic 5, Snapcase, Water Music, Millencolin and TSOL. So far there will be only one stop in Ohio when the tour arrives at the Flats at Nautica in Cleveland on Jul. 13. If going to Michigan is not a problem, the tour will be at the Phoenix Center Jul. 23.

Of course not every single festi-val has to be about rock. For the 20th consecutive year Ft. Loramie, OH will be the home for Country Concert at Hickory Hill Lakes. According Jim Prenger over 60,000 people will attend this four-day music festival. The show, which takes place Jul. 6 - 9, has a huge lineup, including both country and classic rock stars. The performers this year include REO Speedwagon, Styx, the Kentucky Headhunters, Dwight Yoakam, Toby Keith, Confederate Railroad, Tracy Lawrence, Lorrie Morgan, Jeff Foxworthy, 38 Special and Neal McCoy, just to name a few. Along with music, there are several other events going on. There will be an all-female mechanical bull riding competition along with CMT's line dancing competition and it's $1,000 prize. Along with the mechanical bulls, there will be real bullriding as well.

"We have a large percentage of college students attend," Prenger said. He added that the show has a Woodstock-like atmosphere since attendees can camp out during the entire festival.

Metallica has announced only part of their Summer Sanitarium tour, which also features Kid Rock, Korn, Powerman 5000 and System of a Down. So far no dates have been set for Ohio, but more shows should be announced.

OZZY- Ozzfest has a talented lineup this summer.

Fifth and sixth year students may remember the band September's Children and might be wondering what the members are up to

After graduating from the University, the members of the band went their separate ways. Guitarist and vocalist Brian Bocian has since become a solo acoustic artist and will return to Bowling Green when he opens up for Grasshopper Pie Saturday at Easystreet. Bocian said the last time he played in Bowling Green was in the fall and is looking forward to Saturday's show. "I aways have fun at Easystreet," he said.

Bocian is a U. graduate who majored in secondary social studies education and is currently working on getting his master's degree at the University of Toledo. When not studying, he keeps busy with music Music has just about always been a part of Bocian's life. The 24-year-old has been performing for almost Idyears.

Last year, Bocian released his debut CD, To do it OR see to it, and has been performing his neo-folk

Pink Floyd: Is Anybody Out There? The Wall

2000-Sony Records

The Wall is considered to be Pink Floyd's most ambitious project. And when you're talking about the band that recorded Dark Side of The Moon and Wish You Were Here, that's saying a lot. It's also generally considered to be one of the best rock and roll albums, of all time, and is the third best realling album aver. the third best selling album ever. Now, after 20 years, they've gotten around to releasing a live version of it, and it somehow manages to make a great record even better.

Pink Floyd has always been a great live band. Even in their Syd Barret days of the 60s they were known for putting on blistering shows that dwarfed everyone around them. Making them even more incredible was the technical aspect of it all, with amazing lights and effects complimenting the music, something that reached its peak during The Wall tour. After becoming totally disgusted with the way his fans acted at con-certs, Roger Waters, lead vocalist and bass player of Pink Floyd. vowed the next time he performed on stage there would be a wall separating him from the audience. So during the course of concerts for The Wall (which was always played in its entirety) a giant white wall would slowly be built, covering the band from the audience. A wall that wasn't taken down until halfway through the second act of the con-

Obviously, you don't get to see that amazing visual while listening to Is Anybody Out There? The Wall Live, but the music is strong enough that it's able to stand alone.

that it's able to stanc' alone.

The album sounds beautiful, obviously benefiting from a full, surround-sound digital transfer. The opening organ of "In The Flesh" was so loud that I practically fell out of my seat. Every subtly of The Wall is picked up. The child's voice in the beginning of "On This Levilland". beginning of "On Thin Ice" and the Turns," something that was nearly incomprehensible on the original recording, are clear as day here.

Lou Reed:

2000-Reprise Records

In the film "Trainspotting," the character Sick Boy explains to his friend Renton his unifying theory of life: "At one point you've got it, then an example he uses Lou Reed. Renton claims that some of Lou Reed's solo stuff isn't bad, to which Sick

Boy replies, "it's not bad but it's not great either, is it? And in your heart you kinda know that although it sounds alright, it's actually just... shite." The new Lou Reed record, Ecstasy, more than proves this theo-

The man who was once so incredibly talented both in collaboration with other artists (The Velvet Underground) and in his solo career

(the album Transformer) has proffered this lame collection of over-simplistic riffs and uninspired rants about drugs and hipster life. This great and storied musician who revolution zed the singer/songwriter genre has become what we all feared he would become: Just another singer/songwriter.

The album starts with promise with the avant-folk rock shuffle "Paranoia in the Key of E." The only problem is that the record spins into a free-fall after that. Practically every song hovers around the four to five minute mark, most simply you lose it and it's gone forever."

Ecstasy

Other songs just sound better live. Both versions of "In The Flesh" have the benefit of the loud audience cheering in the background, making the song's message about a rock star turned hate-monger even more frightening. David Gilmour's solos on "Hey You," "Comfortably Numb" and "Run Like Hell" are all amazing. Roger Water's vocals are in top form here as well.

These albums also have songs not reviously available because they couldn't fit on the original vinyl recordings. The first, "What Shall We Do Now?" serves as a great guitar bridge between "One Of My Turns" and "Young Lust," while "The Last Few Bricks" adds even more intensity to "Another Brick In The Wall Part 3" that precedes it.

The Wall was one of the best albums of the 70s, and the tour was one of the best of the 80s. If you like Pink Floyd at all, you owe it to your-self to buy this album. It's the next best thing to seeing them in concert, and it's their best live album to date. GRADE: A repeating the same tired riffs ad nau-seum, as in the second track, "Mystic Child." On top of that, Reed's lyrics, which once read like true poetry, now resemble the childish ravings of a high school sophomore who just got dumped by his first girlfriend. "Sad you make me sad/When I juxtapose your features I get sad," from the song "Mad."

However, there is a high point-song "Future Farmers of America" displays an energy that the rest of the album lacks. Not to mention that the tune seems to actually be saying something worthwhile, as opposed to the rest of the record, which seems to languish in its frequent childish references to drug abuse and perversion (historical Lou Reed lyrical fare, but not executed with the skill and grace exhibited in previous outings).

The cream of the crap is the 18minute faux-epic "Like A Possum." At first, it sounds like it might be the track to save the record: A heavily distorted guitar wails away in slow despair for three minutes. If the song had ended before Reed began his vocals, not only would Ecstasy's torture be 15 minutes shorter, but also less painful. "Good morning it's possum day/feel like a possum in every way," Reed grunts as an introduction to a quarter-hour of pure hell.

The one thing that every musician should learn from Lou Reed is that you're allowed a certain time in order to shine, and once that's gone, hang 'em up. No matter how hard you try you can't be cool forever, no matter who you are. It's better to be remembered as a short-lived great musician than an aging, struggling one. GRADE: D

The raw Pat McGee Band album, Shine, is packed with 11 new songs and new versions of "Rebecca" and "Haven't Seen For a While." The album also includes a smooth instrumental hidden track

The producer of the album, Jerry Harrison (Live, Big Head Todd, Verve Pipe, Crash Test Dummies), did a wonderful job of putting the album together. Jerry also brought Andy Wallace (Sheryl Crow, Nirvana, Jeff Buckley, Beastie Boys) in to mix the tracks. to mix the tracks.

If you've never heard the Pat McGee Band before, they sound like a cross between Poison and country music's Blackhawk with a 1990's twist. Shine has great harmonics, smooth guitars and that meilow sound that keeps you in a feel good

My favorite song on the CD was the new version of "Rebecca." This is definitely a song that you could listen to over and over again.

The album also features guest ppearances from Warren Hayes (former Allman Brothers Band member, now Gov't Mule) on slide guitar, Brian Fechino on guitar and

The Flys get points for featuring a sumo wrestler on the cover of their latest CD, Outta My Way. The band gets more points for having a video featuring Katie Holmes.

Of course, all of those points don't really matter much, unless the CD is actually good. It's safe to say that the CD is worth a listen, so we'll throw in some more points for

You may remember The Flys biggest hit, "Got You Where I Want You." It's easy to expect that this new CD would be full of songs sounding like that. Sugar Ray and Smash Mouth both came out with albums sounding exactly like their breakout hits and found huge suc-

It's refreshing to see The Flys did not take this route and the songs on Outta My Way, all have distinctive sounds

The band found its inspiration from Pet Sounds by The Beach Boys. The Beach Boys may not immediately come to mind when you think of The Flys, but if you listen closely to Outta My Way, you'll hear the influence. "No Sad Story" and the title track even contain samples from two Beach Boys songs. Inside the cover, the band is pictured with surf boards. It's an obvious homage to The Beach Boys.

'No Sad Story" doesn't take pity on the listener even though it might appear that way by looking at the lyrics to the song. "I don't know what it's like to be you/won't you tell me," the band asks. What the song gets to is that we all have our sad stories to tell.

The song "Losin It" is something very college student can relate to. Who hasn't felt as though they were losing their mind, especially at the end of the semester?

There aren't any standout tracks as good as "Got You Where I Want You," but this is definitely a CD that grows on you GRADE: B-
