Opinions differ on how much sex education, if any, should be taught in the nation's schools.

Of course, the usual cast of characters along with the concerned educators and the school districts who believe that it is not the school's place to talk about sex, continue to argue for the status quo. However, the fact is that this is not the 1920s; we are not the village that the teacher talked about was the one where "the farmhands and farmers don't care, the answer in the age old question, "When do babies come into the world?"

Just the clinical stuff. Period.

The age-old debate over how much sexual education, if any, should be taught in the nation's schools, has once again at the center of the news.

When they realized that keeping "abstinence" as their battle cry, 1980s, ignorant parents used the school to keep their kids from having sex. They believed that it is not the school's business, but team members were able to negotiate one more season. The final season will not result this week.

This is a federal law that prohibits any discrimination in educational programs that receive federal funding. It was intended to help promote equality among genders in athletics.

SALT LAKE CITY - It used to be the dirty little secret of the rich and famous, but now plastic surgery is becoming more and more mainstream. A look in the Yellow Pages reveals eight pages of advertisements for surgeons in the Salt Lake Valley alone. According to a report by the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons, there has been a 10 percent increase in the number of surgeries performed between 1992 and 1996.

Plastic surgery is by no means a cure-all for the problems that come with aging. Plastic surgery is surgery to improve or correct a body part that is perceived as deformed. It is a personal decision. It is important to understand that you have options.

In the end, Salt Lake surgeons recommend that the patient feel comfortable with the procedures, the facilities, and the partnership between surgeon and patient. It is a personal decision.

As plastic surgery has become more mainstream, potential consequences. In some cases, the patient is to be completely honest with their doctors. According to the American Society of Plastic Surgeons, patients who pretend to have a functional problem - whether or not embroiled in an aesthetic surgery - may not get the results they want. Patients must completely understand the patient's real expectations before surgery.

For folks, the patient is to be open and honest with the surgeon. Before the doctor's final decision, the patients must be open and honest with the doctor. "I always tell my patients to go and get a second opinion, maybe with a different doctor," said Dr. Laroque. One step that patients can take is to see if they have any family members who have had surgery. It's good to see what they have done and how they feel.

Another key tip for future patients is to be completely honest with their doctors. According to the American Society of Plastic Surgeons, patients who pretend to have a functional problem - whether or not embroiled in an aesthetic surgery - may not get the results they want. Patients must completely understand the patient's real expectations before surgery.

Once all the right conditions are met, the patient is to be completely honest with their doctors. Teaching kids facts of life

At issue: Opinions differ on how much to teach kids about sex, but sexual ignorance is not an option.

It's one thing to talk about sex once a week in the classroom. It's quite another to talk about the sexual education kids are getting. It's important to be concerned about what kids are being taught. These concerns are real, and they're growing.

We're almost to the age where parents need to be in control. When our kids were kids, we were in control. We were the ones who taught them about sex.

The university should take the time to understand exactly how to adequately cover the subject. There's no need to eliminate sex ed. It's important and needs to be talked about.

Millions of dollars are spent on sex ed. of all types. It's a priority of the government, and it should not be ignored.

Finally, it's time to talk about sex education. It's a necessary topic that needs to be discussed. We can no longer ignore it.

SALT LAKE CITY - It used to be the dirty little secret of the rich and famous, but now plastic surgery is becoming more and more mainstream.

A look in the Yellow Pages reveals eight pages of advertisements for surgeons in the Salt Lake Valley area. According to a report by the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons, there has been a 155 percent increase in the number of cosmetic procedures performed between 1992 and 1998.

As plastic surgery becomes more popular, however, a lot of attention has been given to its potential consequences. In some states like Florida and California, strict regulations were put into place to ensure patient safety. Despite the precautions, 23 injuries and five deaths occurred as a result of plastic surgery last year.

"Plastic surgery is in no means more dangerous than lab operations for humans," said Dr. Renato Laroque, an associate professor at the University of Utah's Division of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery and assistant professor at the University of Utah's School of Medicine.

"In a lab operation, you're under anesthesia, you can have infections, you can have bleeding, and you can die from it. But it's a minor thing."

In order to minimize the risk, Salt Lake plastic surgeons are格外 careful about choosing the right doctor. First of all, always go for board-certified plastic surgeons who have experience. There are many other specialties that want to cash in on aesthetic surgery. Elective surgery is one of the few operations where patients pay cash and they don't have to deal with insurance. The consumer needs to understand that.

In the end, Salt Lake surgeons recommend that the patient feel comfortable with the procedure, the facility, the staff, and the partnership between patient and surgeon.

"If you always follow these steps, you can't have a problem," Laroque said. He even adds that the patient should always take a second opinion. Getting a second opinion is a good idea because if you're not happy with the results, you can always go to the doctor and say, 'I want this done well.'

Another key tip for future patients is to be completely honest with their doctors. According to the American Society of Plastic Surgeons, patients who pretend to have a functional problem - whether it's a burn scar or the desire to get a breast augmentation - may not get the results they want. Doctors must completely understand the patient's real expectations.

For Salt Lake's plastic surgeons, the only ones who must do work on a dime are clients who have insurance. A lot of people come in and say, 'I want to look like Cindy Crawford.' You have to make them understand that they have their own identity. I have seen many patients to psychologists or psychiatrists. Some don't need surgery afterwards, and others still decide to go through with it. Sometimes they just turn around and say, 'I can't do it. I'm not happy with the results."

Laroque says another patient of Salt Lake's who had breast augmentation, agreed. Nevertheless, they both admitted that the surgery was not without drama. The night before surgery, Laroque remembers "going to the bathroom 800 times because I was so nervous." After the surgery was over, both were surprised by the amount of pain they experienced. "Maybe they need to let women know that it's going to be more painful than they expect," Laroque said.

Laroque said the worst part of surgery was waking up dry. "Once we put them out" she explained. After the surgery was over, both women were happy with their results and said they would do it again.

Overall, both women were happy with their results and said they would do it again.
Parents plea for daughter's return

The Associated Press
KEARNEY, Neb. — A couple pleaded for the release of their teen-age daughter, a honor student who was kidnapped from a mall parking lot.

Anne Sluti was kidnapped Friday evening. The purse and other belongings were found in the parking lot of the Hilltop Shopping Center, where her family said she was found.

On Monday, her parents spoke with reporters for the first time and pleaded with the kidnapper to return their daughter.

"Please let Anne go," her mother, Elaine, said while standing with her husband, Don, and their son, Tom, in front of St. James Catholic Church in Kearney.

"We will do anything to have Anne home again," she said while holding a stuffed toy dog that belongs to her daughter.

Police believe the 17-year-old girl was taken by a fugitive wanted for car theft.

A special agent with the FBI in Salt Lake City says it appeared Sluti suffered some physical abuse, but police believed she was alive. Witnesses say they saw a white man between 30 and 40 years old hit Sluti over the head and drag her into the Suburban.

The Suburban was found abandoned in Belgrade, Mont., to search the building.

The suspect, Anthony Zappa, is a pole vaulter on the school's track team.

Zappa, 29, was last seen on March 21 near Yellowstone National Park. Police said a blue Toyota Tercel with that vehicle was stopped.

A white man between 30 and 40 years old hit Sluti over the head and drag her into the Suburban.

Police believe Zappa stole the Suburban to Lookout last week. He has been identified since November for failing to appear in a Montana court on a burglary charge.

"The vehicles have been the reason we have been using a follow-up plan. That is why we are no involved in the kidnapping," said Kathy Cable, spokeswoman for the Lookout, Col., police department, where Zappa is wanted for car theft.

Besides Sluti's call from the Montana cabin, she managed to call her family and a friend on Saturday. Her house cells were cut off, Lynch said.

British helicopter crashes

The helicopter carrying seven people crashed into heavy rain Monday just outside of Kacanik, Kosovo's capital. NATO officials said the chopper went down in mid-afternoon, when visibility was poor.

The British forces identified the dead as a Flight Lt. Mark James Maguire, 31, of the Royal Air Force and Capt. Andrew Cassie, 29, of the army air corps. Though the crash happened near the border with Macedonia, where ethnic Albanians and Serbs have been among those sent to reinstate order in the Kosovo region, the British said both killed instantly while the five others on board all suffered various degrees of injury.

Colonel Martin Porritt, the lead British planner in Kosovo, said the chopper went down in Kosovo's capital. NATO officials expected to fly to the site later Tuesday. NATO-led peacekeepers secured the area around the crash before their arrival.

The helicopter landed on its side in a wooded area, surrounded by piles of branches that showed trees in its propellers had hit the earth. Snow draped the ground around the site.

The statement from Skukan said the three crew members and five civilians were heading toward an Operation Hound Dog palace in an attempt to help contain the insurgency by reducing the movement of men and arms between ethnic Albanian guerrillas and Macedonian government troops trying to push down the insurgents. British troops have been among those sent to restore the Kosovo side covered with snow in the Sar mountains, near Kacanik, Kosovo.

"The pilot and navigator were both killed instantly while the five others on board all suffered various degrees of injury," Lt. Gen. Thorsten Gruener, chief of the U.S. military hospital at Camp Bondsteel, in Kosovo, said Tuesday.

The helicopter was returning to base after a mission when it hit a tree as its propellers fell to the ground around the site.

Dozens of helicopters of the NATO-led Kosovo peacekeeping force fly daily missions, which include surveillance and the transportation of personnel and supplies.

Tribe faces challenges this year, but hope still alive

BG News Sports

In the article entitled "Track shines" in the earlier edition of the BG News, there were some errors in the timeline. For example, on page 4, the article mentioned that the Tribe's first game was against OU. However, it should have said that the Tribe's first game was against OU on Wednesday or Thursday, as they did not play against OU on Saturday and Sunday. Lisa Keegan was not "the Tribe's first big news," but rather, the Tribe's first big news was the article mentioned in the previous edition of the BG News on Wednesday or Thursday.

The article mentioned a Tribe player's quote, "We'll be all right." However, the quote should have been "We'll be all right," as the player mentioned wanting to make it to third base before the softball does. The player also mentioned wanting to get hot and carry us for awhile.
