Kentucky candidate for sheriff charged for slaying incumbent

As a result of a political rally Saturday in Somerset, Ky., Campbell County Sheriff candidate Jeff Morris, 34, was being held in the Pulaski County Sheriff's Office after being charged with the murder of a sheriff's deputy, Pulaski County Coroner Alan Stringer said.

On Saturday, May 19, an officer was shot in the head and killed in Somerset, Ky.

The man charged with shooting the sheriff — Danny Shelley, 34, — was caught after wrecking a motorcycle registered to Morris.

Catron, 48, Prosecutors and state police did not immediately comment on the charges, or describe the circumstances of the slaying. The sheriff was shot in the head shortly after he finished a campaign speech at a fish fry and other political rally Saturday in Lexington, Ky.

Shelley pleaded innocent to capital murder earlier yesterday.

"McWhorter wouldn't comment on the charges, or describe the circumstances of the slaying. The sheriff was shot in the head shortly after he finished a campaign speech at a fish fry and other political rally Saturday in Lexington, Ky."

"My most important job is to make sure people don't drive from America again, to make sure we're secure."

Don't take choice for granted

The biggest complaint that I get is about abortion. About how the government is trying to control a woman's body. I do not think that the government should be able to control a woman's body. I think that the government should leave a woman's body alone and let her make her own decisions. This is my opinion and I believe that it is the right thing to do.

What is your opinion on abortion? Should it be legal or should it be illegal? Why?

CHICAGO — A panel formed after Gov. George Ryan halted executions two years ago recom- mend changes yesterday aimed at keeping innocent people off death row, including videotaped police interrogations, a DNA database, and a ban on executing defendants convicted on testimony from a single eyewitness.

The panel did not call for an end to capital punishment, but a witness, informing or accomplice.

"The message from this report is clear: Reform or repeat. In the capital punishment system or abolish it," said Daniel Harris, a former U.S. attorney and co-chairman of the panel.

The panel recommended fixing death penalty procedures, enhancing accuracy of capita- l punishment in Illinois. "The message from this report is clear: Reform or repeat. In the capital punishment system or abolish it," said Daniel Harris, a former U.S. attorney and co-chairman of the panel.

The report recommends cutting the number of people awaiting execution, adding a statewide DNA database, and a ban on executing defendants convicted on testimony from a single eyewitness.

The panel did not call for an end to capital punishment, but a witness, informing or accomplice.

"The message from this report is clear: Reform or repeat. In the capital punishment system or abolish it," said Daniel Harris, a former U.S. attorney and co-chairman of the panel.

"We are concerned that these procedures do not simply help suspects by making it impossible for police to conduct interviews, but they could also work to help the guilty," Devine said in a statement.

"It is on this larger picture that Illinois has had 13 cases, but most of these cases are outside of Illinois and there are problems in those places as well," Devine said.

At least 118 die as jet crashes in South Korea

By Long-young Chun
KINHAE, South Korea — In a hard rain, a Chinese jet plunged into a mountain near South Korea's second largest city yesterday, killing at least 118 on a nonstop flight from Beijing, officials said.

The Air China Boeing 767-200, on a morning flight from Beijing, was approaching Kimhae Airport when it hit a 1,000-foot mountain near a residential area, police said. There were no casualties on the ground.

Survivors said Flight Co. 129 crashed shortly after passengers were told to buckle their seat belts and prepare for landing.

"The plane suddenly dipped, then nose and then went down again," said Bae Han-sol, 15, who said it appeared to be in trouble. "The caller said, 'The plane seems to have problems, maybe, an accident,'" Kim Yoon-suk said.

"After a brief silence, I heard people screaming over the phone," said Jin Wenxue, a 35-year-old Korean-Chinese man who said it appeared to be in trouble.

"Bodies were burning in the morning," Sung-hwi said the plane was unconscious," said Jin Wenxue, a 35-year-old Korean-Chinese man who said it appeared to be in trouble.

"The pilot flew into the mountainside by mistake. He said the pilot is to blame," said Ham Dae-young, a South Korean air traffic official, also said the cause appeared to be pilot error.

"We believe this is a classic case of CFIT (controlled flight into terrain)," Ham said, suggesting the pilot flew into the mountainside by mistake. He said the pilot is to blame.

Application forms may be picked up at 204 West Hall. Deadline is Friday, April 19 at 4 p.m.

Dlott also asked, "Do any of you believe that violence against abortion clinics equates to Obama bin Laden and the Sept. 11 attacks against the United States?" Several answered they don't require the two, but that they regard clear acts as separate acts, adding that video could pre- vent them from judging Waagner.

"Some guys just won't commit!" The guest on the show suggested that the man was not making a serious effort to show love and respect. The woman was not impressed and decided to give the man one more chance. She accepted his invitation to go out for dinner and asked him to make up his mind. She explained her position and asked him to choose between her and his current girlfriend. The man apologized for his past behavior and promised to be more committed in the future. The woman was pleased and accepted his proposal. She felt that he was finally taking her seriously and that he was willing to make a commitment. They went on to discuss the importance of communication in a relationship and the need for both partners to be open and honest about their feelings. They also talked about the challenges of balancing work and family responsibilities and how to overcome them. The conversation ended with both partners expressing their love and gratitude for each other. The woman thanked the man for his efforts to show love and respect and the man promised to continue making her feel special. They hugged and said goodbye, looking forward to their next conversation. The conversation was lively and engaging, with both partners sharing their thoughts and feelings. The host congratulated the couple on their progress and encouraged them to continue working on their relationship. The conversation was a great example of how open communication and mutual respect can lead to a successful partnership.

Kenyan win at Boston Marathon

By Frank Urban
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Kenyans are back on top of the Boston Marathon, reliving a winning tradition that's now as much a part of the race as Heartbreak Hill.

Budgen Rig won the men's event, pace-setting after the first 3 miles to dominate. In the women's race, Catherine Ndereba of Kenya, a three-time champion, won for the first time since 1998.

Ndereba said she was happy with her time, but not with the course, which was about 0.2 miles shorter than planned. She said she would return to Boston next year.

The men's race was dominated by two Kenyans, who crossed the finish line in 2:09:03.1 and 2:09:02.5, respectively.

The course is known for its hills, but this year it was flatter and faster than previous years. The weather was cool, with temperatures in the upper 50s.

Ndereba, who finished third in 2:21:12, said she was happy with her time, but not with the course, which was about 0.2 miles shorter than planned. She said she would return to Boston next year.
