Awards a signal of Greek leadership

By Carrie Whitaker

The University of Toledo this week honored five students for their involvement in greek organizations. The awardees included the Tau Kappa Epsilon (TKE) chapter.

The ceremony, held in the Student Union Ballroom, was attended by members of the greek community and faculty.

"The awards recognize the hard work and dedication of our greek organizations," said Mark Eichman, associate director of student life. "It is important to acknowledge the contributions these organizations make to our campus community.

The awards were presented to the following organizations:

- Tau Kappa Epsilon (TKE)
- Phi Kappa Psi (PKP)
- Pi Kappa Alpha (PKA)
- Alpha Omicron Pi (AOP)
- Phi Delta Theta (PDT)

Each organization was recognized for its commitment to campus involvement and community service.

In addition to the awards, a special recognition was given to the Alpha Phi Omega (APO) chapter. APO is an international service fraternity that focuses on community service and leadership development.

The ceremony concluded with a banquet where the awardees were able to socialize and network with other members of the greek community.

Bowling Green State University will celebrate the opening of a new coffee shop on campus.

The shop, called "The Carpenter Cafe," is located in the Center for the Arts building.

The opening ceremony will include speeches from university officials and the shop's co-owner, Michelle Carpenter.

The cafe will feature a variety of coffee drinks, pastries, and other beverages. It will be open daily from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The event is open to the public. Visitors are encouraged to come and enjoy the new addition to the campus community.

Greeks are now able to tour a new housing facility, following the completion of $1.2 million in upgrades to the Greek Village. The improvements include new units, updated kitchens and bathrooms, and increased insulation.

Both students plan to pursue careers in higher education administration. Tussing, a member of Alpha Phi Omega, plans to become a leader in the Greek community and said she was inspired to be a leader in the Greek Village.

"Students should be aware of their options and take advantage of the resources available to them," Winn said. "Greek involvement has made me realize how many activities are available on campus, and it is all going to be worth it in the end."
American education moves to Middle East

By Warren P. Strobel

Doha, Qatar — At first glance, this is not the kind of place you would expect to find a university, with its vast resources and small, non-renewable resource — gas and oil — to make Doha a regional educational center, a sort of version of the Middle East.

They see it as "an easy way to turn an insecure American student into a professional who, in the future, will be a professional in the United States."

Young knows only that the budding economist has been in long-running negotiations to join Carnegie Mellon, Cornell Medical School, Texas A&M University, and Virginia Commonwealth University to go after the top 500 Arab professionals.

There has been some thinking between the Arab and Western worlds.... And we would like to be part of the American system here.

MANNY KADIR, Disposable

There is even thinking about which schools offer a variety of courses, so that foreigners can take classes in English and French at the same time.

In March, Obama said that the new administration would work in the "enlightened" part of the Arab world to try to improve America's image in the world. Still, she is among Muslims.

Even limited liberalization, however, may create quite a target for criticism. In March, Obama said that the new administration would work in the "enlightened" part of the Arab world to try to improve America's image in the world. Still, she is among Muslims.

As students, we're facing somewhat slow economic times, increasing tuition costs and not much in the way of signatory jobs for the taking. And just as we are fighting a break on our student loans, the government goes and passes a law that makes it all that much harder to get out of them.

Congress passed a bankruptcy reform bill last Thursday that will make filing for bankruptcy more difficult and give banks and credit lending agencies more in and as including what is needed to change some things up. That left is to make sure the bill became law. Now, my metaphorical signature is ready for the taking.

While this bill is a step in the right direction—people should pay what they owe to banks, it is very restrictive. The bill eviscerates Americans' ability to be more financially solvent, but it does condition more leniency to keep this from being their last financial practice because they will never be able to get something back sustainable—aramid for the core. New, young qualifying students, students who cannot get a job—will face a much more difficult time paying off their loans.

Furthermore, those who want to declare bankruptcy must now have a credit consultation at least 90 days prior to filing and added money management counseling before any debts are discharged, which adds extra fees charged, which is ridiculous when they are filing for bankruptcy because they have no money. The new law also forces universities to continue to send client information to avoid fees and for transferability.

This only makes it harder for truly bankrupt people to get in the future. We all have made financial mistakes and want to improve. Why should we have to pay for them?

Moreover, the bill does not protect those who are severely in need of financial identity theft— a growing problem in the United States, according to the Federal Trade Commission.

It seems unfair that the victims of identity theft be held liable for their own mistakes.

Rwandan massacre needs action

The UN learned of this genocide in 1994. The United Nations was present there with a closer debt to human rights than had ever been recorded. The reason it is no secret that the United Nations Security Council is trying to figure out whether or not to go on the ground or not. Meanwhile, thousands of people being marched, women being raped, as we speak.

If you're not listening to the Oscar nominated 'Hotel Rwanda', you're missing an opportunity to see one of the most distinct components of the movie called 'Hotel Rwanda'. The United Nations Security Council is trying to place a mission to protect them but has no power to take action.

The story is false that the UN Security Council has no power to take action. The UN Security Council is trying to figure out whether or not to go on the ground or not. Meanwhile, thousands of people being marched, women being raped, as we speak.

The Rwandan massacre needs action because watching it is totally engaging, yet kind of nuts, actually the combination of the DJs put into their shows— each semester.

Our radio station a valuable resource

Tuning into WBGU should be up in mid-August, but before that, we had a group that consists of graduate students, faculty, and not only have I always knocked out by how the DJs always talk about the following things.

The DJs are really the core of the station and not only have I always knocked out by how the DJs always talk about the following things.

China, Japan consider having talks
BEIJING, China (AP) — China said yesterday it would consider talking with Japan about a war in Iraq, six days after the two countries' relations were stymied by the worst dispute in decades between the Asian powers.

"We are still considering it," said Chinese Vice Foreign Minister Wu Dawei.

"We recognize the importance of the issue," he said. "We believe talks between Japan and China are necessary and have a good chance of success if both sides show determination to make efforts."

The Japanese foreign ministry said it would "welcome" China's interest in a dialogue.

"If the Chinese side is to talk, we will welcome it," said a ministry spokesman.

China has been accused of "warming up" to Japan, a charge it has categorically denied.

China has refused to back a resolution at the UN Security Council that would have authorized military action against Iraq. It was one of the few countries to vote against the resolution.

China has also accused Japan of "warming up" to the United States, a charge Japan has denied.

"We're trying to avoid the risk of war," said a Chinese official.

"But we're also trying to avoid being left out of the talks," he said.

"We believe that the talks should be inclusive," he said.

WASHINGTON — A trickle of allegations, some anonymous, paint the Bush administration’s choice for U.N. ambassador as an imperious hothead who underestimated the power of his position.

New York Republican chairman Stephen Minaker, who began his “Shangri-La” tenure last month, is said to have threatened to fire Foreign Policy Advisor Robert Zoellick if he did not “stop her New York” effort to win Senate confirmation.

Minaker is implementing the GOP’s desire Clinton to switch in 2006 and fill her presidential hopes. This is in marked contrast to New York Times’ report of “a race for America.”

Cash and enthusiasm may not prove sufficient, however.

Republicans lack a big-name challenger to take on Clinton next year. Rudolph Giuliani’s top political advice said the former mayor lacks the credentials of a presidential contender, is too busy with business interests to run for the Senate. GOP Gov. George Pataki has said he has no intention of running.

Others mentioned include Manhattan banker Edward Cox, a son-in-law of the late President Clinton, and New York Times’ report of “a race for America.”

A recent poll showed that Clinton was leading her potential rivals by 12 percentage points, while Giuliani had garnered just 5 percent.

In 2006, Clinton and New York’s Republican Rick Lazio set a record for a Senate race in New York, spending a combined $9.5 million. Lazio spent $18.5 million and Clinton about $7.5 million. For her 2006 bid, Clinton’s campaign said generously that $30 million was adequate to win. But during the first three months of this year and had more than $16.7 million in the bank. Clinton called it “sad.”

Her New York Senate campaign is well against winning a second Senate term. In fact, they have stopped talking about her presidential ambitions.
