High school students get a head start

By Megan Ambrosetto

A $250,000 grant from the Ohio Department of Education will allow high school students and teachers in Northwest Ohio to take online economics courses with BGSU this summer.

This opportunity will be offered to qualified high school students who are interested in taking classes at the university or planning on attending college.

High school students need to receive permission from their teachers to participate in the courses. Students must have a transcript to show that they have a cumulative grade point average of 3.0, be a junior or senior and have access to a computer with Internet connection.

The courses are open to any students who wish to further their education in the summer, but these classes will count only toward a degree pursued at BGSU.

Student admissions, tuition and book fees will be paid for with the money from the grant.

All application packets are to be sent to the Miriam, assistant director of graduate studies and externs in the BGSU Department of Economics.

The applications must be received by May 21.

"These courses are a good opportunity for students who are interested in taking college-level classes in the summer," Marzullo said. "We are looking at students who are planning to go off to college the following year, not necessarily students who are already enrolled in college."

According to Marzullo, high school students will work with experienced University instructors during the recess. I began to meet and work together seven hours a week.

Mitchell Lawrence, junior, thinks that this is a great opportunity for high school students who are interested in going to college.

"As a high school student, I've been interested in the type of academic programs at BGSU," Lawrence said. "I thought it was a great opportunity for high school students to take college courses."
ABORTION

It is not often the word "abortion" is not met with some sort of debate. Both those who are pro-life and those who are pro-choice have had opinions on the emotionally charged issue.

Late night for the organization Awake Takes it back to speak about the subject with their name "Leaves the Fight Above Abortion."

On 58 students, faculty and staff were in attendance. In Dr. Louise Levatino talked about his experiences as a former abortion doctor.

He said, to ask a question, Dr. Levatino explained how he went from being a pro-choice to the Wood County Center for Choice in Toledo, Ohio, arrested for disorderly conduct.

Weekending a fresh face

By Samantha Johnson

When one door closes another door opens. Likewise, as BGSU loses an administrator, another one emerges.

The University has named Monique Steinbacher chief financial officer and vice president of Finance and Administration. Steinbacher, vice president of administration and finance at the Northern Illinois University's College of Medicine in Chicago, will be replacing Christopher Duvall whom she is replacing.

"Chris is highly regarded for his professionalism," she said.

According to Steinbacher, she has known Duvall for a long time and considers him a friend.

"I'm a little intimidated, a little anxious and nervous," she said. "It's an incredible compliment and responsibility that I can follow someone like Chris.

Duvall is only part of the incredible legacy Hall said she is imposed with.

"I've been in Ohio for a number of years and clear with some incredible people. I am an MBA in the university," she said.

A major attraction, Steinbacher added, is the learning communities and President Ribault's community of care.

"President Ribault is highly respected throughout the education community," she said.

According to Steinbacher, all of these qualities add up to what the University's greatest ingredients are: "Students, Staff since 1995 and will replace her when she leaves, between Steinbacher's qualifications will only add the organization.

"I really good at digging under the surface of the facts," Steinbacher said. "She's going to approach the role and really evaluate what's going on at BGSU.

"She needs her ability to get the details right be an asset to the University." Ellen Heppler, Steinbacher for three years, agreed she is qualified for the job.

"Her approach to a problem is very thoughtful and well considered," Heppler said. "She has a clear vision of the future and she's well grounded.

According to Steinbacher, though, there will be differences between her current institution and BGSU.

"Northwestern is a much larger, much younger institution," Steinbacher said. "It's environment has more culture and way of doing things." The pressure the rising tuition has on students is an issue both Steinbacher and Ribault have considered, "She has a very institution and BGSU, will be differences between her current institution and BGSU," she said.

"I'm a little intimidated, a little anxious to follow him," Steinbacher said. "I've been in Ohio for a number of years and clear with some incredible people. I am an MBA in the university," she said.

Another possible trip to Iraq for 13,000 troops

By Patches Jelback

WASHINGTON — Some 13,000 National Guard troops are receiving notice in prepare for possible deployment to Iraq as the Pentagon said Friday it expects the United States to send several thousand of its forces there.

"This is the second deployment," said Brig. Gen. Kevin O’Leary, the county sheriff of Ohio County. "We were notified this morning that we will be deploying 2,400 from Ohio County to Iraq."

The recent military buildup for security operations in Baghdad, Iraq, would set timelines for troop rotations for the war. The final determination on whether the units will deploy would be made by the Defense Department.

The Defense Department said it was launching its own planning process to determine the level of force required for the war on terrorism.

The deployment of the Ohio National Guard troops is expected to occur in the next few days, authorities said.

"We have been receiving alert orders now in order to provide them the maximum time to complete their preparations," said a spokesperson for the National Guard.

The deployment of the Ohio National Guard troops follows a similar deployment of the National Guard's 39th Infantry Brigade Combat Team, Oklahoma City; the 78th Infantry Brigade Combat Team, Columbus; the 76th Infantry Brigade Combat Team, Chesterfield;

TOLEDO — A staff photographer for The Blade who digitally altered a front-page photo has resigned, the newspaper said yesterday.

The photographer, who was not named, was fired after it was learned that her photograph of an Ohio State football team for its personnel files and mistakenly sent to the newspaper.

The photo showed Ohio State University players kneeling in the locker room after a game last season. The details of the photo were not alterable, the newspaper said yesterday.

The photographer was charged with negligence, rape and aggravated rape, and is expected to appear in a Shelby County Municipal Court.

The criminal complaint alleges that she had not been in contact with the newspaper for nine months, and that she had not been in contact with the newspaper for nine months.

"I am not talking about Armageddon, but it will be painful," said Retired Army Staff Sgt. William W. Barnes.

High-speed chase ends in suspected murderer's arrest

By David Ayllon

TROY, Mich. — Tension sus-pected during a four-hour manhunt for whom he killed. His last act was a high-speed chase that ended a few hours after the shooting.

Police chased him for 15 miles, before he finally pulled into the office on the building's second floor around 10 a.m. Wednesday, police said. The families of the two wounded men requested "total anonymity," police said.

YUMA, Ariz. — President Bush said yesterday that the United States has "a strategic interest" in border security and he urged Congress to approve legislation that would "secure the border for America and promote our national security." Congress is working on a bill to secure the border, and many members of Congress have expressed concern over the rise in illegal immigration.

Bush's measure is similar to legislation that was introduced by Sen. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., in March. The bill would increase border security by increasing the number of Border Patrol agents, providing additional training for agents, and improving the technology used to detect illegal border crossers.

The bill has received support from both Republicans and Democrats, but it has faced opposition from some members of Congress who have expressed concern over the cost of the bill and the impact it could have on the economy.

Bush and Congress are both under pressure to come up with a solution to the illegal immigration problem, and both have expressed a desire to keep the border secure.

The White House is trying to promote a "total enforcement" approach to illegal immigration, which would include increased border security, increased deportations, and increased fines for employers who hire illegal immigrants.

Bush said yesterday that his administration is "dedicated to securing our borders," and he urged Congress to pass the border security bill as soon as possible.

Bush's measure is part of a broader immigration agenda that he has been touting for months. He has been pushing for increased border security, increased deportations, and increased fines for employers who hire illegal immigrants.

BAGHDAD - Tens of thousands of Shiites - a sea of women in black shawls and men wearing Iraqis' flag - spilled Sunday to demand that U.S. forces know their country, some opined those Americans and trapped across a sea of shawls and banners rag.

The protesters marched about three miles between the holy cities of Najaf and Najaf for the first anniversary of the fall of Baghdad. In the capital, anger was aired and sought, under pressure imposed by the Baghdad security commitment men, taking the street against "your archenemy." Baghdad's capital and foreign missions to expect foreign missions for and for the police and army to join the struggle against "your archenemy."

Shiite cleric Sadr's return to the river's edge is a show of strength not only to the international community but also to his forces in Iraq. His followers are brandishing as a threat to the United States and its allies, demanding that they leave Iraq immediately.

Sadr said, "We don't want to go back to the way it was. We want to be free and independent." He added, "We are not afraid of America's threats."

The Shiites are determined to fight for their rights, he said, in the face of American and Iraqi security forces who are using force and violence against them.

The demonstration comes amid growing criticism of the U.S. military's tactics in Iraq, where thousands of civilians have been killed in recent weeks.

BAGHDAD (AP) - Sadr's march is a major moment in the battle for Iraq as the U.S. military seeks to establish a new government in Iraq.

The Shiites' march is a show of strength to the international community and their followers demand that their rights be respected and free elections be held.

The Shiites are demanding that the U.S. military withdraw from their country and that a new government be established.

KIEV, Ukraine - More than 300,000 demonstrators marched in this capital yesterday to express their anger over the arrest of the country's top opposition leader.

Thousands of people, some waving giant banners, leaflets fluttering in the wind, took to the streets yesterday to demand the release of opposition leader Yulia Tymoshenko.

Tymoshenko, who is facing charges of corruption, is a leading opposition figure and has been on a hunger strike for more than two weeks.

Meanwhile, the government announced that it will hold a referendum on the country's future this fall.

The referendum was called by President Viktor Yushchenko, who has been under increasing pressure from his political opponents.

Tymoshenko, who is running for re-election, has accused the government of corruption and has called for early elections.

The referendum will be held on September 26 and will ask voters whether they want a multiparty system or a one-party system.

Voters will also be asked whether they want to change the country's constitution.

The referendum is expected to be held under tight security, with troops from the National Guard and the country's special forces standing by.

Policy and currency officials reportedly feared that new interest rate hikes would drive up the cost of capital, encouraging investors and industrial companies to delay investments and cutbacks to keep costs down.

In that case, they reasoned, now was the time to raise rates by just a notch or two, well before officials announced the new policy measures.

The policy measures announced last week included an increase in the discount rate, the key policy rate of the central bank.

The new rate is expected to be raised later this year, possibly in June, officials said.

The central bank's first move in recent months has been to raise the discount rate by 0.25 percentage points.

The discount rate was last changed in March, when it was increased by 0.5 percentage points.

The central bank's second move has been to raise the reserve requirement on banks to 6 percent from 5 percent.

The reserve requirement has not been changed since January, when it was increased to 5 percent.

The central bank's third move has been to raise the bank's liquidity ratio, which is expected to be increased to 10 percent from 8 percent.

The liquidity ratio has not been changed since January, when it was increased to 8 percent.

The central bank's fourth move has been to raise the bank's foreign exchange reserves, which are expected to be increased to $20 billion from $15 billion.

The foreign exchange reserves have not been changed since January, when they were increased to $15 billion.

The new policy measures were announced after the central bank's policy committee met earlier this week.

The policy measures were approved by the committee, which is chaired by the central bank governor.

The meeting was attended by a number of committee members, including the central bank's deputy governor.

The meeting took place at the central bank's headquarters in downtown Baghdad.

GOLF
Falcons finish 12th in weather-shortened Marshall Invitational
The BG men's golf team finished 12th out of 16 teams at the 58th annual Marshall Invitational with a team score of 959 (290-300). The tournament, which was scheduled for 36 holes, had the final round canceled due to the weather and the cold conditions. BG tied the tournament with a 292 which placed them in seventh place after 18 holes. Leading the way in the opening round were a trio of freshmen in John Powers (73), Matt Schneider (73) and Matt Schwendt (73).
The second began on Friday but play was halted due to darkness after snow storms blanketed play on the second half of the event.

OUR CALL

On the way up
The Daniel O'Donnell rivalry: The Cops dropped another one to the Monroe City Muskies and have a chance of being in the playoffs for the second straight year.

On the way down
The Cops' chance of getting the No. 2 back for the playoffs. They continue to drop games that they need to win to make the playoffs for the second straight year.

The List
It's time for this week's top five fantasy baseball draft. Nothing on this list is hot because they haven't played since Thursday!

1. Johan Santana: he's already picked up two wins and 18 strikeouts against an ERA of 1.77 to begin his season.
2. Salomon Torres: he's already pitched four scoreless innings and has not allowed a hit in the first week of the season. Torres had a 2.50 ERA last season.

The Magic of the Unicorn is...
CLEVELAND — With the grounds crew still shoveling snow off the field, the Cleveland Indians decided it was time to head north to Milwaukee.

"I thought we were going to move to North Dakota, but we got Milwaukee instead," joked Indians first baseman Travis Hafner, a native of Bismarck, N.D. "It's a tough job," said Indians outfielder David Dellucci said.

Players packed yesterday for an evening flight to Milwaukee, where the Brewers will sell tickets to the home opener. The Indians were ahead 1-0 with two outs in the top of the fifth, when their home opener Friday night was postponed due to the snow on the field yesterday afternoon.

"We went out and made some snow angels and sometimes we go too far. My mouth was fighting for his job yesterday after the meeting," said Sharpton, who is among several black leaders who have demanded his ouster.

The meeting prompted a suspension of Imus on his radio program for two weeks following the incident. The suspension began yesterday.

Hafner said he can't win with "you people." Sharpton was clearly irritated by that remark.Sharpton said, "You can't make fun of everybody...because sometimes we go too far. Sharpton said, "If you walk off the charts now. And because the climate on the radio show, which is nationally syndicated, is among several black leaders who have demanded his ouster.

"I understand that," said Sharpton. "I'm not a white man who understands the hoopla because I don't deserve it," he said on his radio show and endure more criticism for his offensive commentary about the Rutgers women's basketball team.

"I'm kind of off the charts now," Wedge said. "White rolling with it and making the best of the situation.

Chemical cover-up

By Wendy Donahue

ShopSmart, a new publication from the publisher of Consumer Reports, examines hidden chemicals in cosmetics.

The winter issue cites poisonous ingredients which may be linked to dermatological and reproductive health risks. Phthalates and formaldehyde, often used in perfumes and deodorants, yet the ingredients are not listed on product labels. The chemicals are used to help fragrances linger and take the stiffness out of hair sprays. For example, ShopSmart conducted independent tests for phthalates on eight fragrance products, including Calvin Klein Parfums Eau de Toilette Sprays and Chloé Happy Perfume Spray. Elizabeth Taylor White Diamonds Eau de Parfum and Beautiful by Estee Lauder were found to contain phthalates.
